Senate Body Strengthens Crime Laws, Enforcement

Senator Copeland Tells President of New Proposals.

Roosevelt May Ask Action in Message

Committee Staff Agrees on 21 Measures to Plug Loopholes.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

After outlining to President Roosevelt new proposals to extend Federal authority over crime, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, yesterday disclosed that his special committee staff has agreed on 21 measures to plug loopholes in the law and open new avenues of enforcement.

For an hour the chairman of the Senate subcommittee studying crime went over the problem at the White House, which was intimation the President may incorporate some of the recommendations in his opening message to Congress.

Senator Copeland, who also is chairman of the Senate Commerce subcommittee holding hearings on the Tugwell pure food and drug bill, gave his opinion it will be enacted at the approaching session with some modifications. As a whole, he believed, it contains great benefits.

30 Bills May Be Proposed.

Asserting public clamor demands action on the growing crime menace, the Senator declared in all, 30 bills broadening the Government's participation in law enforcement may be proposed. Most of them, however, would only tighten existing law.

Loath to commit his colleagues in advance, Senator Copeland emphasized the program approved so far—worked out at a conference Friday with Attorney General Homer S. Cummings—must await return of other committee members.

Among the drastic changes approved at the meeting is a recommendation that Federal court procedure be altered to require defendants to reveal their alibis several days before trial. This would eliminate surprise testimony and give the prosecution an opportunity to question veracity of defense witnesses.

Another proposal seeks to strengthen the so-called Lindgergh kidnaping law, which now allows the Government to intervene in the event the victim has been taken across State lines. The new law would make the victim's continued absence for a period of three days legal presumption that a State line has been crossed, which would permit the Government to step in.

To Extend Dyer Act.

Still another recommendation would extend the Dyer act—which makes interstate transportation of a stolen automobile a Federal offense—to cover any stolen property of more than $1,000 value. This would send Federal authorities on the trail of many a thief now finding shelter in flight.

Further provisions would provide strict regulation of the sale of

7 Gunmen Rob Chicago Store

Gang With Machine Gun Gets $2,800 in Bold Holdup.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Seven men hooded with tops of women's stockings today invaded a store on the edge of the Loop today, armed with six sawed-off shotguns, pistols and a machine gun, terrorized 25 women and 125 men, and looted the cashier's office of $2,800.

The store was the retail department of Butler Brothers, large wholesale mail order house.

There was a momentary panic as the robbers unlimbered their armament and peered through holes in the stocking top masks at victims, standing with hands aloft.

Little confusion attended the actual robbery. The leader took up sentry duty with the machine gun covering the office.

There was no shooting. Three robbers gathered up the cash and departed as their mates fell in as rear guards.

A few hours later, seven bandits invaded the Ambassador East Hotel and, guarding 15 guests in the lobby with revolvers, took $800 from the vault, and an undetermined amount from guests.

Vance—he wove words into romance along the strange trails of stranger places—was burned to death at his apartment here.

Chambers—he chipped his words from the rainbow and changed prosaic incidents of history into glamorous drama—died at Doctors Hospital following an operation.

Vance was 54, Chambers 68.

An employe of Vance's apartment house found his body, burned badly, in a smouldering chair. Police suggested he fell asleep and his cigarette set the upholstery afire. He wore only his trousers.

Old Munitions Blast Claims Get Rehearing

Court Reopens Kingsland, Black Tom Cases Against Germany.

(Associated Press.)

The Black Tom and Kingsland munitions explosion cases, in which $40,000,000 is sought from Germany for sabotage, are to be reopened for admission of further evidence by the Mixed Claims Commission of the United States and Germany.

A decision to this effect was handed down yesterday by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, as umpire of the commission, acting on a petition of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., the Canadian Car & Foundry Co., Ltd., and various underwriters.

This petition alleged that the commission had been misled by fraud and collusion on the part of Germany's witnesses into taking action favorable to the German Government.

Justice Roberts' decision said the commission still sits as a court, and that "no tribunal worthy of its name or of any respect may allow its decision to stand if such allegations are well founded."

The decision of Justice Roberts concluded: "I am of the opinion, therefore, that the commission has the power to reopen the cases, and should do so, in order that it may consider the further evidence tendered by the American agent and, dependent upon its findings from that evidence and any that may be offered in reply on behalf of Germany, either confirm the decisions heretofore made or alter them as justice and right may demand."

The Black Tom explosion of munitions at Jersey City occurred July 29, 1916, and the destruction of the munitions plant at Kingsland, N. J., took place January 11, 1917.

Claims for damages were filed in 1927 before the commission. Both cases were dismissed in 1930. A petition to reopen the cases was filed and dismissed in 1931. The same year the American agent filed the petition seeking the reopening of the cases, in compliance with which the rehearing was granted yesterday.

Justice Roberts said no date for further hearing has been set.

French Wine Quota Faces New Tangle

U. S. Seeks Information on Reported Farm-Product Levy.

(Associated Press.)

The United States held aloof last night from any formal agreement with France on liquor quotas until it had learned the extent of concessions reported to have been made the French government in its American agricultural product tariff rates.

Previous word that the French minister of agriculture intended to announce substantial increases in tariffs on American apples, pears and lard were viewed as definitely threatening cosummation of the compact for an increased wine-farm product trade between the two nations.

The French concessions will be subjected to the scrutiny of the American committee of two which drew up the original four-month liquor import quota figures.

While diplomatic negotiations normally are conducted through the State Department, the liquor import question has been left to representatives of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the newly formed Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

Full Details Sought.

Acting Secretary of State Phillips, even before word of the French concessions was received, said no final settlement would be made until the tariff question was cleared away. The State Department earlier had cabled the Embassy at Paris for details on the proposed increased tariff on the American farm products.

The situation was further confused by the fact that the Federal Alcohol Control Administration Friday announced that an accord had been reached which would result in a "substantial increase" above the four-month import quota for French wines.

In light of developments yesterday, this accord apparently had not reached the signature stage when the French tariff complications arose to endanger the agreement.

With this lacking, it was pointed out that it would be simple for the United States to withdraw from the negotiations at this stage should the threat materialize of high French tariffs against the American products.

The French embassy here did not evidence concern over the outcome.

Jurors Give Life Sentence To Crawford

Death Penalty Refused in Ilsley Double Murder.

Mercy Granted in Hope of Getting Another Named as Killer.

By Frank Getty.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 16.—Found guilty of first degree murder for the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, Middleburg sportswoman, two years ago, George Crawford, diminutive Negro, escaped the death penalty this afternoon at the conclusion of one of the most remarkable trials in the history of Southern jurisprudence.

The Loudoun County jury of 12 white men returned its verdict after an hour and 35 minutes of deliberation and fixed the seentence at life imprisonment. Four ballots were taken.

Judge James L. McLemore promptly pronounced sentence upon the prisoner, in the dead silence of an overcrowded courtroom, packed with several hundred townsfolk.

It had been a foregone conclusion among the neighbors and acquaintances of the slain society woman that the verdict would be death. But if there was any dissatisfaction, it was not voiced by the citizens who struggled to the exits to see the prisoner whisked away to jail at Alexandria and thence to Richmond.

Defense Overjoyed.

Defense attorneys announced they would not appeal. Actually, they were overjoyed. Crawford himself was beaming happily as he assured Judge McLemore he had "nothing to say." The Negro's attorneys, headed by Dean Charles Houston of Howard University Law School shook the prisoner's hand and then washed their hands of the case.

The jury of white men, challenged by the defense before the trial on the ground Negroes had been unduly excluded, probably were influenced in their decision for life imprisonment by the remarkably able closing argument of Dean Houston.

On the first of the four ballots, nine favored life imprisonment, three the electric chair. On each subsequent ballot, one juror yielded, until at 3:40 p. m. the jury informed the court of its verdict.

Prosecution Satisfied.

It was learned that the jurors were swayed in favor of a sentence of life imprisonment by Houston's plea that with Crawford executed all chance of ever identifying his accomplice in the crime, "Charley Johnson," would vanish.

Commonwealth Attorney John Galleher and his associates, Senator Cecil Connor and Capt. Frank Wray, who had demanded the death penalty, expressed themselves as satisfied.

The remarkable feature of the trial, which aroused Nation-wide interest because of the question of racial prejudice raised when the jury was being drawn, was that this question never once intruded upon the trial itself.

An atmosphere of extraordinary courtesy prevailed throughout and was particularly noticeable during the closing arguments. Not one of What's This? Town Rejects U. S. Cash!

'We'll Dig Our Own Sewer,' Cheviot, O., Tells PWA.

Public Works Administration officials yesterday were nonplussed. Shattering all precedent, a town turned down an outright grant of $3,000.

Hard-boiled administrators know how to take care of lobbyists, senators out for allotments and pleas for money by the hundred. But they scratched their heads in bewilderment when they received a letter from the small Ohio town of Cheviot. The city solicitor informed them that Cheviot didn't car for the $3,000 grant extended to it by P. W. A. to build a sewer. The town, the solicitor wrote, could pay for the sewer with its own funds, adding: "Perhaps this $3,000 could be alloted for some other worthy cause."

With $3,000,000,000 worth of projects still begging, P. W. A. officials decided that perhaps they could use the grant for some "worthy cause."

The bandit forced his way into her stylish Sheridan road apartment.

Lindys, Home, First to Circle The Atlantics by Airplane

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh came home today from an unprecedented aerial tour around the Atlantic Oceans and, even before their fast plane touched the water, engaged in an aerial "duel" with another craft attempting to take photographs of their landing.

Flying homeward to spend Christmas with their young son, Jon, the Lindbergs landed at 1:21 p. m. (E. S. T.), after a flight of six hours and 48 minutes over the 880-mile route from San Pedro de Macoris, Dominican Republic.

Since July 9, when they left New York, they had crossed the North Atlantic and South Atlantic Oceans, visited the British Isles, Europe, Africa, the Azores Islands, South America, the West Indies, and touched in all 21 nations on a flight of about 25,000 miles.

Lindbergh's attempt to land without arousing any demonstration apparently prompted him to stage a 20-minute aerial "duel" with a news reel plane which sought to photograph him in flight. Lindbergh banked sharply, dove and headed for the open ocean as the other plane neared him.

As the second plane gained, Lindbergh banked again. He kept this up until, apparently tiring of the game, he eased into port over the top of the landing base and landed one-half mile from shore. As he maneuvered to shore, the second plane circled leisurely and the cameras in the craft ground away.

Lindbergh, his face deeply sunburned from the tropical sun, stood in the cockpit of his plane as he guided it into the base. Mrs. Lindbergh, her face also tanned, smiled as she sat snugly in the rear cockpit. A boat, evidently containing photographers, trailed him.

Our Mary Meets Henry Ford; They Swap Signatures

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Mary Pickford and Henry Ford exchanged autographs today.

The famous motion picture actress and the automobile manufacturer met for the first time at the Ford Exposition of Progress.

"May I have your autograph, Mr. Ford?" asked Miss Pickford, the butt of autograph-hunters for years, with a smile.

"Delighted, but I want yours, too," said Ford, whose signature also is sought frequently.

They exchanged autographs while Charles Edison, son of the inventor, and Mrs. Ford stood by smiling.

"I've seen so many of your pictures," said Mr. Ford, who added that he had wanted to meet Mary for years.

4 Still Sought In Fire at Sea; 3 Die, 19 Saved

Missing Believed Adrift in Dory; 11 Reach Shore in Open Boats.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 16 (AP).—Rescue ships combed the graveyard of the Atlantic tonight in search of four men, belived adrift in a dory since their ship, the Gloucester fishing schooner Ellen T. Marshall, burned to the water's edge off Cape Sable, N. S., resulting in the death of at least three men.

Nineteen others were saved. eight were picked up by a Danish steamer while 11 made shore by their own efforts after battling wind and sea for nearly 24 hours in open boats.

The known dead, drowned when their dory was capsized as they attempted to beach the craft on Seal Island, were Joseph White, of Malden, Mass.; Ivan John Hines, son of the schooner's captain, and Vincent Music, both of Boston.

The four believed adrift were Capt. William Beazley, of Gloucester, Mass., sailing master; John Clements, Boston; A. Reynolds, Lunenburg, N. S., and George Esma, Boston.

Danish Ship to Rescue.

Rescued by the Danish steamer Lars Kruse were George Vickers and Chester Murphy, Newfoundland; Harry Fletcher, Lynn, Mass.; John Goodick, Shelburne, N. S.; George Nesbit and Everett George, Canson, N. S.; Charles White, and Patrick Smallcomb.

Those who landed at Pease Island were Capt. Albert Hines, of Boston; Albert Amirault, Cecil Crowell and Truman Crowell, of Barrington, N. S.; Albert Budreau, Theodore Doucette, and Howard Strum, Yarmouth. These men were en route to Yarmouth tonight.

The disaster was one of the worst to befall the fishing fleet in several years, and fear grew that the missing men might perish in fog and rain, which shrouded the Atlantic tonight.

"Happened in a Flash."

Capt. Hines, in a telephone account to the Boston American, said "it all happened in a flash. I haven't any idea just how it started. First there was no fire and then the whole ship was aflame."

Capt. Hines, in his conversation, said his son Ivan, 21, was a member of the crew and was in one of the dories.

The Lars Kruse, which sent the SOS, picked up two dories and eight men.

When the call was picked up at Woods Hole and Chatham, Mass, the Coast Guard cutter Mojave was ordered from Nantuckett at full speed to the scene.

The Canadian government steamer Arras left Shelburne and was joined by other craft in the vicinity. The hunt was hampered by a sleet and snow storm, making visibility poor.

Mrs. Bolivar Kemp Won Seat, Says Gov. Allen

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp was today formally declared by Gov. Oscar K. Allen, Attorney General Gaston L. Porteire and Secretary of State E. A. Conway to have been elected to Congress from the Sixth Louisiana District in the December 5 balloting, which, because of its irregular features, provoked bitter citizen protest.

Mother's Cries Rout Kidnaper Near Crib

Merchantville, N. J., Dec. 16 (AP). The cries of an alarmed mother today frightened off an intruder who police said they believe intended kidnaping the 1-year-old son of H. Ennis Jones, former Philadelphia banker.

Mrs. Jones said she was awakened by sounds on the second floor of her home. She saw a man creep into her bedroom and bend over the crib in which the baby, Marvin, was sleeping. She cried out and the man fled.

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 16 (AP).—William H. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, is confined to his bed at the home of his son here and denied all visitors on orders of his physician.

His illness, members of his family said, is a recurrence of the throat ailment which led to his being given a leave of absence from his duties in Washington.

Rigid Income Tax Measure Gains Favor

House Committee Seeks Tight Levy, Ignores Treasury Hints.

Chairman Hill Confident of Congress Backing in Drastic Rules.

By Robert C. Albright.

In the face of more conservative Treasury recommendations, the House Ways and Means Committee has decided informally to follow its own subcommittee's sweeping proposals for plugging income tax loopholes, rather than adopt less drastic Administration suggestions.

Estimating Treasury revision would cut in half the $270,000,000 in new revenue anticipated in subcommittee studies, Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, subcommittee chairman, thinks Congress will choose the subcommittee report.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who appeared before the committee Friday, would discard five of the subcommittee's nine major recommendations, throwing about $140,000,000 in revenues out of the bill.

While the committee listened to an elaboration of the Treasury's criticism by Prof. Rosewell Magill, tax adviser to Mr. Morgenthau, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, yesterday discussed revenue legislation with the President.

Lower Rum Tax Foreseen.

Following his White House conference, Mr. Doughton predicted a liquor gallonage tax of between $2.10 and $2.30, instead of the $2.60 rate originally recommended by the interdepartmental committee. A liquor tax bill will be rushed through Congress ahead of the general revenue measure, he said.

Following hearings yesterday, Representative Hill said Treasury arguments for changes in the subcommittee report "are not convincing." Committee members with whom he discussed the matter share his opinion, he said.

Representative Doughton said he was "inclined to go along with the subcommittee chairman."

Acting Secretary Morgenthau Friday took exception to subcommittee proposals to eliminating consolidated income tax returns, restrict corporate reorganization exemptions, abolish foreign income tax credits and depreciation and depletion deductions, and limit deductions for partnership losses.

Magill Favors Restriction.

Prof. Magill yesterday appeared ready to modify the last of these objections. He said he thought it "practicable" to restrict deductions from individual income for partnership losses, in the case of such large firms as J. P. Morgan & Co.

Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, proposed higher income taxes on the big partnerships, making a distinction between these and more modest enterprises. Knutson referred to Senate stock market investigation disclosures that some Morgan partners avoided payment of income tax by partnership deductions.

The committee yesterday delayed making a decision on a liquor tax program, pending completion of the general revenue hearings, which will continue four days of next week. An attempt was made Thursday to bind committee Democrats to a $2.60 liquor rate, but without success. There was also wide difference on interdepartmental committee proposals to allocate 20 per cent or more of Federal liquor revenue among the wet States. Chairman Doughton favors an allo-

Peek Successor's First Act Indicates Codes Will Be Altered.

Iowa Dairyman Succeeds King

Future Stress to Rest on Lower Yield Rather Than Marketing.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Appointment of J. H. Mason, Iowa dairyman, as acting chief of the milk section of the A. A. A. in place of Dr. Clyde L. King, who resigned, yesterday marked the second step in the reorganization of that recovery agency following the bitter controversy which came to a head ten days ago.

The first step was the transfer of George N. Peek, former Agricultural Administrator, to take charge of an organization to promote American trade abroad. Chester C. Davis, former A. A. A. director of production, Friday was named to succeed Mr. Peek, and yesterday assumed the office.

One of Mr. Davis' first actions was to announce the resignation of Dr. King, who has been the target for greater criticism from the outside than any other A. A. A. official. With the departure of Dr. King it is now expected that steps will be taken to revise substantially the 19 milk marketing agreements, which it is said have not worked satisfactorily.

Further Shake-Up Expected.

A further shake-up in the A. A. A. is expected during the next week or so. In leaving that agency Mr. Peek has taken with him to his new work his two principal assistants, Glenn McHugh and Wayne Taylor. William I. Westervelt, director of processing and marketing, will return to the mail-order house which loaned him to the Government as soon as he can clear his desk.

These men were reported to have been in sympathy with views held by Mr. Peek. The "brain trust" leaders in the A. A. A., including Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford G. Tugwell and Jerome Frank, general counsel of the A. A. A., opposed Mr. Peek's views as to placing emphasis on marketing agreements rather than production control and giving distrubtors and processors freedom from governmental code restrictions. The impasse which resulted caused President Roosevelt to transfer Mr. Peek.

In addition to those already mentioned as out or on the way out of the A. A. A. organization, several more key men are expected to relinquish their positions in the next few days. Subordinates of officials leaving usually go with their chiefs, so in all, it is expected that about 20 persons will leave the A. A. A.

Emphasis On Acreage Cuts.

As soon as the reorganization is completed a greater emphasis than heretofore will be placed on bringing agricultural production under control through the various acreage reduction programs. The start will

Beck Lashes Gen. Johnson For "Bullying"

Declares NRA Threats Have Debased Morale of Country.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Representative James M. (R., Pa), tonight answered criticisms of him by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, saying that he thought it "amazing the American people had 'suffered' as 'patiently' as they had under the 'threatening policies'" of the head of the NRA.

Beck spoke before the Pennsylvania society. With him was Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who spoke in defense of capitalism.

The Pennsylvania representative, presiding at the dinner, charged that under Johnson and President Roosevelt the morale of the American people had been debased; that American courage seemed to be completely devalued, and the people seemed to have forgotten the Constitutional conception of a democratic government.

Charges Press Bullied.

Beck said he was prompted to comment on Johnson because "one week ago in this hall Johnson paid his respects to me."

"In this speech * * * he said that everyone should do his own thinking," Beck said. "I agree with him, but to enable Americans to think it is just as well that an opportunity should be given to them to hear the other side of the controversy, and yet for six months the channels of the air have been denied to opponents of these policies. The press has continued under the threat that they, too, will be regimented by a system that no newspaper can be

Even Mrs. Roosevelt Can't Take Her Dog Into Building

A gallant gentleman is Walter Simpson, Guard No. 177 at the Walker-Johnson building, but the Government's rules are rules, and even the country's First Lady can't break them.

Simpson flicked an imaginary speck of dust off his immaculate uniform yesterday as Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Miss Lorena Hickok, walked through the door. He clicked his heels smartly, head erect and cap exactly right as the First Lady approached in a walking costume of favorite blue.

Then his heart sank. Tugging at the leash held by the First Lady was her diminutive Scottie, Meggie.

No dogs, Simpson reflected miserably, are allowed in Government buildings. His ears reddened as he made a mental stab to recollect whether the First Lady's pet was excepted, and failed.

He swallowed and stepped resolutely forward to perform the most unwelcome duty of his career. But Mrs. Roosevelt was first.

"Oh," she said, seeing the gleaming buttons and shield, "I can't take her up, can I?" She pointed to Meggie.

A passing Army officer paused.

"No," said Simpson desperately, "it's against rules."

The Army officer's jaw sagged. Then he stepped up severely. "Don't you know——" he addressed Simpson.

"Never mind," Mrs. Roosevelt interrupted, "I'll wait outside."

And while Miss Hickok, field inspector for the Federal Relief Administration, visited her headquarters, the First Lady and her Scottie strolled outside the building.

Simpson shook his head morosely. "What's a guy to do?" he demanded. "I know she is Mrs. Roosevelt, but rules are rules."

Tennessee Mob Suspects Seen

Warrants to Be Asked for Six Men in Lynching.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Sheriff L. A. Bauman, of Davidson County, said today that warrants were expected to be issued for six men who allegedly were seen kidnaping Cord Cheek, 20, Negro, who was lynched Friday night near Columbia, Tenn.

Relatives of Cheek told the sheriff that the Negro had been kidnaped late Friday in Nashville, where he had been released from jail after relatives of an 11-year-old girl had not appeared before the grand jury to prosecute Cheek on charges of assaulting the white child. Cheek had been arrested November 16 on the girl's complaint and later taken from Columbia to Nashville to prevent mob violence.

Two Negro students at Fisk University told officers that they witnessed the kidnaping of Cheek a half hour after he had been released from jail here by six men in two automobiles heavily armed. The cars carried no license plates.

Weir Election Report Studied For Legal Step

Labor Board Request for New Balloting Also Scanned.

A preliminary report on the allegedly illegal election held by employes at the Weirton Steel Co. plants Friday, was received yesterday at the Department of Justice.

The report was turned over to Harold M. Stevens, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust prosecutions, who is studying the Labor Board's request that legal action be taken to set aside the election to enable the board to conduct a new election.

Another and more comprehensive report is expected. After this report is received a course of action will be mapped. Both the Labor Board and the NRA have threatened the company with lawsuits.

Domination Charged.

Labor Board officials contend that the election of employes' representatives at the company's plants in Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, O., were dominated by the company.

At the same time the Labor Board was attempting to head off another attempted strike in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania, John D. Moore, expert on the anthracite situation, will go to the fields tomorrow, where he will study statements contained in the report of the anthracite fact-finding committee.

Meanwhile, Ernest T. Weir, head of the Weirton-Steel Co. and storm center of the election controversy, was reported by the Associated Press to be willing to talk about the fact that he is reading David Copperfield for the 101st time, but not about his controversy with the Labor Board and NRA. He has suggested that the Government go ahead and prosecute.

Employes Bewildered.

From Weirton, the United Press reported that company employes were bewildered by the fuss being made about the election, but that outside of union leaders and company officials, few workers were taking active interest in the affair.

Weir's fight with the National Labor Board began last week. He told the board he was through dealing with it because of what he termed an attempt to interfere with rules for the election of a general committee by the "company union."

Company officials at the Weirton reported 81 per cent of the employes voted in Friday's election. It was conceded that the Employes Representatives Association slate had been elected. Union members had refused to vote and immediately charged that employes were coerced into voting upon therats of losing their jobs and began preparation of affidavits backing up the charges.

50 Workers Start Strike.

The trouble, culminating in the present situation, began soon after NRA went into effect. The spark that set off the explosion was the refusal of 50 hot mill workers to work on Sunday.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers took over the strike and made it a vehicle for the union's demands for recognition.

The National Labor Board aided in reaching a settlement whereby all workers were to return pending an election to choose employes' representatives to deal with the company in collective bargaining.

General Motors Recalls Dubrul

Acting NRA Research Chief Quits After 7 Months on Temporary Job.

Stephen M. Dubrul, who came to Washington last May to help for a week or ten days in organizing NRA and who stayed seven months, yesterday announced he was returning to the General Motors Corporation.

Dubrul has been acting director of the Division of Economic Research and Planning, serving without pay.

"Last May," he said, "Dr. Alexander Sachs asked me to come to Washington to help him for a few days. When the few days were up, he asked me to stay until the end of the summer.

"This fall, when Dr. Sachs resigned as director of the Division of Research and Planning, Gen. Johnson asked me to take charge of the division. I consented with the understanding the job was temporary.

"I never was officially appointed to anything."

Gen. Johnson, announcing Dubrul's withdrawal, expressed appreciation of his work.

"If in the future Gen. Johnson feels he needs me, I'll be back," Dubrul said.

Mob Runs Relief Aid Out of Town

Needy Fail to Get Funds, Angry Citizens Claim.

Dayton, Tenn., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—A crowd of more than 1,000 angry citizens who charged that Federal relief funds are not being apportioned to the needy of this country, today took J. H. Miser, county superintendent of schools, and his wife out of town nd told them "not to come back."

Miser has charge of awarding work on school relief projects.

The mob, said to have been led by a retired Army officer, charged that funds were being apportioned by politicians to employes of wealthy plantation owners instead of Rhea County's destitute.

Catdom's Queen of Beauty was chosen last night while 175 would-be all-American cats mewed their disappointment during the climax of the Fourth Annual Show of the Columbian Cat Fanciers Association at the Lee House.

Copper Eyes of the Seven Elms, owned by Mrs. Frank Hobson, carried off top honors in a field ranging from the short-haired domestic cat to the dignified [illegible]. Among the entries were [illegible] of Washington [illegible] in addition to those of leading cat breeders and fanciers of other parts of the country.

Among the winners picked by the judging committee, headed by Mrs. Helen Brayton Tate, of Waban, Mass., are the following best in these classes:

Eiderdown Blue Spruce, blue male, best novice, owned by Mrs. M. B. Warfel, and "Ahlna of Newton," black female, owned by Mrs. Virginia R. Cobb, best novice of that sex; "Tigger Velveteen," black male, owned by Miss Lucille Hoyme, best domestic short-hair kitten, and "Rosebank Strange Interlude," white female, owned by Mrs. Lucille Ashcraft Purnell, best domestic short-hair of sex; "Zuzu," white male, owned by Harry F. Helwig, best neuter cat, and "Coco," red female, owned by Mrs. Emily Edwards, best neuter cat, opposite sex; "Ovid Gay Hussar," red male, owned by Mrs. Mabel Erdman, was adjudged the best kitten.

Million Begs

PWA Has Cash to Cool D.C. Buildings—No Takers.

A cool million, with emphasis on the "cool," is floating around town today with no takers. One million of American dollars, with the P. W. A.'s stamp of approval, and no one seems to know yet where it has gone or where it will go.

Thursday Secretary Ickes approved the allotment of $1,000,000 to air condition "certain public buildings in Washington, D. C." The announcement mentioned no department, agency, individual or anything else as recipient.

Inquiry yesterday failed to disclose who or what will get and dispose of the money, which buildings will get cooling systems or any other pertinent facts. A. E. Demaray, who specializes on buildings in the Interior Department's Office of Parks, Buildings and Reservations, said all he knows on the subject is what he read in the papers.

Charles Dickens' Son Hurt in Street

Titled Briton, 85, Struck by Motorcycle.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—Sir Henry Dickens, the sixth son of the novelist Charles Dickens, was injured seriously today when struck by a motorcycle. He is 85.

His son, Admiral G. C. Dickens, said his father was "suffering from shock in addition to injuries" and was "doing as well as could be expected."

It was believed Sir Henry's right leg was fractured twice. He was knocked down as he crossed a street near his home.

Michelson to Leave NRA And Return to Party Post

Publicity Director to Go Back to Democratic Committee.

Charles Michelson, $20,000-a-year publicity chief of the Democratic National Committee, who was drafted to become "director of public relations of the N. R. A." during chaotic days last summer, has decided to return to his political job.

There has been no dissatisfaction with his work, it was explained last night, but the NRA has become so well organized and the fanfare so faint that he feels the committee now needs him worse than does the recovery administration.

Michelson said he does not intend to relinquish his NRA title, but as soon as possible would begin spending only an hour or two a a day at the NRA, carry on in an advisory capacity, and pass the remainder of the time in his committee office.

The virtual retirement of Michelson will not save the Government money, since he never has been paid for his NRA publicity activities; but it throws most of the load of running the vast Government publicity machine on the young shoulders of William V. Lawson, chief of the NRA press section, who has been Michelson's mainstay.

Lawson, a former member of the Chicago Tribune Bureau here and of the Ayer advertising concern in Philadelphia, has been with the NRA since it was in embryo.

During that time directors of public relations have come and gone, but Lawson has remained, working from 12 to 16 hours a day, conferring with newspapermen, approving all and writing many of the news releases which have filled the press to mark the progress of the recovery program. In addition, he has had the job of directing the army of writers, editors, and reporters who assist in producing the government publicity.

There were public relations directors who preceded Michelson. There was Boaz Long, advertising man, who was quickly shifted and later appointed NRA chief for Puerto Rico. Next came Charles F. Horner, of Kansas City, who made a name for himself in assisting the Liberty Loan drives over the top. Then he retired to make way for Burt St. Clair, who had been with Barron Collier, the advertising agency. Michelson followed.

Gangster Trial Hung Verdict Jury Censured

Two Freed in Slaying, Third Case Results in Disagreement.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 15 (U.P.).—Anthony Reino and Charles Shore, whose gangster activities have been linked with numerous New York City crimes, were acquitted late today by a jury of slaying a Rensselaer, N. Y., detective.

Leonard Scarnici, credited by authorities with more than a dozen "professional" killings, gained at least a brief respite when the jury which deliberated more than 24 hours failed to return a verdict in his case.

District Attorney Harry Clinton said he would move for re-trial.

County Judge James F. Brearton severely criticized the jury for acquitting Reino and disagreeing in Scarnici's case. He conceded that an acquittal for Shore was not entirely undeserved.

Concerning the deadlock in Scarnici's case, Judge Brearton declared: "I can't conceive how 12 men could honestly fail to reach a verdict."

"In the face of overwhelming and convincing evidence, including testimony of reputable and disinterested witnesses, it is beyond comprehension how you could honestly and fairly disagree unless you have been motivated by fear," he asserted.

"You are discharged with the censure of the court," he added.

All three had been tried on first-degree murder charges in connection with robbery of the Rensselaer County Bank & Trust Co. last May, during which a detective, James Stevens, was shot down.

The nature of his illness was not revealed, but attendants said they did not expect him to live until morning.

Paula Brown Wed in Japan

Daughter of Washington Writer Becomes Bride of Oil Man.

A romance of the Far East culminated yesterday in Kobe, Japan, with the marriage of Miss Paula Churchill Brown, daughter of a Washington newspaper man, and George Allen Bell, jr., son of Mrs. George Allen Bell, of Reading, Pa., it was learned here last night.

The bride and bridegroom met last year when Miss Brown went to Tientsin, China, to visit her brother, Lieut. Rothwell H. Brown, U. S. A. Mr. Bell is representative of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, in the north China district.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rothwell Brown, of this city. Her father has been identified for many years with Washington newspapers. She was given in marriage by her brother.

Following a brief wedding trip through Japan, the couple will make their home in Tientsin, China. The bride completed her education in the Corcoran Art School, here, and the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts. She also studied in Paris. Mr. Bell is a graduate of Dartmouth.

Public Works Extension Due, Ickes Indicates

Secretary Wires 48 States to Speed Projects to Washington.

Indications that the public works program is certain to be extended were seen yesterday when Secretary Ickes ordered State engineers to continue sending projects to Washington.

The original P. W. A. allotment of $3,300,000,000 is expected to be used up by January 1. Mr. Ickes telegraphed public works engineers in 48 States to disregard this situation and to hurry their projects to him.

"While it is true that money available is being rapidly allocated, do not let this fact stop your getting in projects as fast as possible," he wired. "So far as your State is concerned I want you to go ahead with your projects without reference to date of January 1.

Officials said the action was precipitated when certain States, which already have had received large allotments for works, slowed down activities when preparing further projects. They explained that although the future of public works was unknown, it would not be possible to report on the desirability of enlarging the program until it was learned what qualified projects remained to be cared for.

Secretary Ickes some time ago stated that probably $3,000,000,000 worth of projects were certain to remain untouched on completion of the original program. This was an outside estimate, and the works administration now is anxious to know definitely the scope of specific projects that might be included in extension of the program.

To date, more than 1,000 non-Federal projects have been approved, with twice as many under consideration.

Chambers, Vance, Authors, Are Dead

tion. One theory was that he suffered a heart attack and collapsed as he attempted to rise from the chair.

Chambers underwent an operation for an intestinal ailment three days ago and never rallied.

The two authors had much in common, including a fascinating cadence in their works. Both began their careers as artists.

Vance was an artist for a New York Newspaper after he completed hist studies at Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn. Chambers studied art in Paris and was an illustrator for magazines.

Chambers was born in Brooklyn where Vance went to school. Vance was born in Washington where his father was a newspaperman.

Vance turned to writing in 1900 and wrote short stories for magazines, using many pseudonyms. Once he had seven stories apearing simultaneously under as many different names.

In 1906, he brought out "The Brass Bowl," and his fame was assured. Later came "The Lone Wolf" and such glamorous things as "Terrence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer," and "The Road to En-Dor," as well as such creping mysteries as "The Destroying Angel."

Prolific and tireless, he wrote rapidly and frequently. Many of his books were best sellers.

Chambers, temperamental and retiring, wrote his first novel "In the Quarter," in 1893. He wrote anything—verse, sociological novels, children's stories and plays. But his historical romances made him famous.

His style was virile and he wrote about things that fascinated men—wars and adventures on the grisly Middle Passage of the slave trade, pirates and gold and love.

Wrote for Magazines.

There are his "Ashes of the Empire" and "The Man They Hanged," and the "Drums of Aulone. Recently, he did magazine stories about pirates' adventures on the Spanish Main, gypsy love on the Rio Grande and tales of a woman Federal spy who loved a rebel.

Chambers married Miss Eisa Vaugh Moller in 1898 and they had a mansion in Broadalbin, N. Y. They also maintained a home here. His widow and son, Robert Edward Stuart Chambers, survive.

He was a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and many exclusive clubs. Friends remember him as a retiring sort, a bit shy but devoted to his small circle of close friends. His hobbies were guns and rods, rare furniture, books and paintings.

Vance is survived by his son, Wilson Vance, who edits a newspaper in Vienna.

Recently Vance returned from a voyage to the West Indies, and friends said he apparently was in good health.

He was a well-known contract bridge player and frequently clashed with Ely Culbertson over the game. He resigned from one club in protest at Culbertson's election.

In his apartment today, police found a medal of valor that belonged to his father. On it was this: "Second Lieut. Wilson Vance, Company D, Twenty-first Ohio Infantry, Volunteers, December 31, 1862."

Bootleg Liquor Armistice Denounced by Legislators

Reaction of Public First Thought of Officials Discussing Plan.

(United Press.)

House and Senate leaders yesterday denounced a suggestion that the Government proclaim a bootleggers' armistice to permit transfer of pure illicit beverages to the so-called whisky trust.

The plan has been discussed by responsible Administration officials in an effort to discover what the public's reaction might be.

"I have heard some rumor of that plan," Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee said. "But it was not presented to the committee by the Administration this week.

"I don' think it would be feasible. Why should the Government try to help the bootleggers out of trouble? They are in trouble and they can stay in.

"Old, Rotten Stuff."

"I don't see how the Government could enter into negotiations with these men they have been fighting for all these years. Anyway, they just have old, rotten stuff that wouldn't be fit to drink."

Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee was equally forceful. He said he had never heard of the plan and doubted if it would be proposed.

"If the Governmeent tried to deal with the bootleggers it would be subjected to the grossest kind of criticism," Harrison said. "It would be a bad political move and I don t thing the Administration will give any consideration to a thing like that."

The objective under this suggestion would be to increase the country's hard liquor supply, bring about lower prices to the consumer and remove illicit beverages from competition with tax-paid legal drinks. The revenue might be considerable.

Liquor Estimates Vary.

The House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee in joint session this week were told by L. H. Parker, congressional tax expert, that the illicit liquor supply was between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 gallons. Administration advisers question that estimate and in one case, at least, put the bootleg liquor hoard at no more than 1,000,000 gallons.

If public opinion and Congress would permit such a solution of the bootleg problem, the illicit stocks could be sold under an amnesty agreement providing for their disposal in a limited period. All liquors so transferred would pay a tax to the Government. Each lot would be subjected to rigid chemical analysis.

The States would have to be brought into the agreement to give owners of illicit beverage temporary immunity from State laws.

The attitude of the public toward such a plan is the question most urgently considered by officials who have discussed it.

Judge Scores U. S. Oil Rule

"Where Must Congress Stop?" He Asks in Texas Hearing.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 16 (AP).—United States Circuit Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson interrupted arguments by attorneys in an oil suit before a three-judge court here today to indicate disapproval of phases of Federal regulation of the petroleum industry.

"Where does Congress have to stop?" he inquired of Louis Titus, of Washington, counsel for the Petroleum Planning and Co-ordinating Committee.

"How far can it go in this matter of deciding what happenings within a State affect interstate commerce?"

Titus, opposing the suit in which east Texas oil operators seek restraint of authorities from prosecuting "so-called violators" of the Texas proration order and the National petroleum code, cited decisions which he said held that Congress had the power to regulate operations which appeared to be intrastate in character, but which in reality affected the normal flow of interstate commerce.

"I don't believe the time has come that the American citizen has to constitute himself as a sort of secret police," Judge Hutcheson remarked.

Mountaineers Guilty Of Murdering Price

Waynesville, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP).—Three mountaineers charged with the killing of Thomas Price, wealthy philanthropist, were convicted late tonight of second degree murder in Haywood Superior Court.

Senate Probe To Bare Profit In Air Lines

30 Agents Investigating Records of Transport Holding Firms.

(United Press.)

Revelation of private profits in the creation of a Government-subsidized air transport network in this country yesterday was expected to lead to another Senate investigation of Wall Street's foremost investment bankers.

Chairman Black of a Senate committee which has been investigating ocean mail subsidies, told the United Press he expected to reach the air mail phase of his inquiry some time next month.

More than 30 committee investigators already are examining records of various air transport holding companies which control scheduled commercial flying in the United States. One individual's paper profit of $12,000,000 from an original investment of $500 already has been discovered by committee investigators.

Hunt Swollen Returns.

Although such a return is not typical, the investigators believe they will be able to show numerous instances of swollen returns from corporations which have drawn $125,000,000 in Treasury subsidies in the past ten years. Congress appropriated $19,000,000 for air mail subsidies in the fiscal year which began July 1, 1933.

Private investors lost heavily in the 1929 slump of air transport, airplane and motor manufacturing stocks. Black said yesterday the sum lost to investors probably was in excess of $100,000,000. But for many investors who put their money in small companies which ultimately were absorbed by larger organizations, and became property of holding companies, there have been fat profits. Investment bankers who financed these pyramided corporate creations shared in the insiders' gains.

It is understood that J. P. Morgan & Co., Hayden Stone & Co., W. A. Harriman & Co., the National City Bank and Lehman Bros., of New York, were principal underwriters of air transport securities. Morgan & Co.'s underwriting of United Aircraft, which spans the continent with speedy mail and passenger service, already has been revealed by Senate stock market investigation.

All Records Available.

All records of that inquiry pertaining to air transport have been made available to Black's investigators, Ferdinand Pecora, stock market investigating counsel, has assured Black he will have immediate access to information obtained by the inquiry into pools, trading accounts aud syndicates which now is under way.

The investigation of United Aircraft revealed one of the six Morgan & Co. bargain stock lists which attracted wide attention last spring. January 21, 1929, Morgan & Co. offered to a selected list of purchasers 600,000 shares of United Corporation stock. It was quoted on the market at the time at $93 per unit, but bargain buyers got it for $75, a profit of $18 on each unit.

Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's European Ambassador at at large, received 500 units; F. H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., 1,000 units; Charles D. Hilles, Republican National committeeman in New York, 1,000; Col Charles A. Lindbergh, 300; William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of Treasury and now Senator from California, 250; R. B. Mellon, brother of Andrew W. Mellon, then Secretary of Treasury, 3,000; Gen. John J. Pershing, 250; John J. Raskob, then chairman of the Democratic National committee, 2,500; Albert H. Wiggin, then chairman of the governing board of the Chase National Bank, 4,000, and William H. Woodin, subsequently named Secretary of the Treasury by President Roosevelt, 1,000 units.

Woman Convicted Of 'Torch Murder'

14-Year Term Urged for Slayer of Husband.

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. May Hanson tonight was convicted by a jury of 12 men of the "torch murder" of her husband, Earl Hanson. The jury, which was out four hours, recommended a penalty of 14 years' imprisonment.

The sentence was the lightest possible under instructions given by Judge Arthur Fisher.

Hanson, a factory executive here, was burned to death last August on the lawn of his divorced wife's country home near here. The State charged Mrs. Hanson, because of marital unhappiness, threw a bowl of gasoline over him and then tossed a lighted match into his lap.

A. A. Stevenson, Steel Man, Dies

Philadelphia, Dec. 16 (AP).—Archibald A. Stevenson, 71, for many years a widely known figure in the iron and steel industry, died today.

He retired in 1929 after 21 years as vice president of the Standard Steel Works Co.

He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Margaret Dart Stevenson, and a daughter, Mrs. Maxwell McCreery, of Winchester, Mass., and a brother, Robert A. Stevenson, of Yonkers, N. Y.

U. S. Girl Held Abroad; Put Feet on Train Seat

Zurich, Switzerland, Dec. 16 (U.P.). Miss Christine Maple, 22, of Los Angeles, was arrested today for putting her feet on the seat of a railway carriage.

Miss Maple was on a train en route from St. Moritz to Paris. Signs forbidding passengers to put their feet on the seats were displayed in the carriage in French, German and Italian, but not in English.

100 Service Planes Stage Hains Point Show To Mark 30th Anniversary of Wright Flight

Post Staff Photos.

Some of the 100 Army, Navy and Marine combat planes, shown in the upper photo, as they participated in flying exhibitions over Hains Point yesterday in observance of Orville Wright's first airplane flight. Below, a spectator watches a smoke screen settle along the ground.

Army, Navy and Marine Fliers Join in Bombing Sector of Potomac River and Displaying Latest Formation Maneuvers.

War from the air was enacted with reality yesterday afternoon by more than 100 service flyers.

Despite a low ceiling and a heavy fog, Army, Marine, and Navy flyers "strafed" Hains Point, bombed a sector of the Potomac, and put on a show of formation flying that spectators said they would not soon forget.

An audience of thousands was at Hains Point and Bolling Field to witness the opening of the National Aeronautical Association's celebration in honor of the Wright brothers' first flight, 30 years ago.

Circle Over Washington.

The great air circus began with combat and bombardment planes from Langley Field, Va., circling over the city and simulating attacks upon Hains Point.

But the Marines and the Navy put on the climax with a show of brilliant maneuvers. Pursuit ships power-dived on the point to clear the way for bombers, which appeared out of the fog.

Again and again the maneuver was repeated until finally the bombers dropped their "eggs" in the river, the explosions sending up wild geese and ducks in formations rivalling those of the airmen.

After the bombs had landed, a smoke screen was laid along the river, out of which the bombers apjpeared to put the finishing touches to Hains Point, if it was still theoretically on the map.

No Accidents Occur.

After this last "strafing," the Marines headed off down the river toward Quantico and shortly afterward the Langley Field group took off for its flight home.

Despite dangerous weather conditions and wet landing fields, the show was put on without a single hitch or accident.

Later the scene of the celebration shifted to the Mayflower Hotel where leading aviators and aviation enthusiasts gathered at a brilliant banquet.

Official tributes to Orville Wright were paid by the Nation's air leaders. Famous pilots, foreign air attaches, Federal and civil air leaders were present. Speakers who were heard during the broadcast period at the banquet were:

Capt. Albert C. Read, U. S. N., who commanded the NC-4 on the first flight of any aircraft across the Atlantic.

Veteran of World Flight.

Lieut. Eric Nelson, Army Air Corps, a veteran of the corps' first flight around the world.

Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, British transocean flier, who spoke in behalf of English aviation.

Eugene L. Vidal, director of the aeronautics branch, Department of Commerce.

James Wedell and Frank Hawks, speed fliers.

Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, Army Air Corps, representing Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps.

Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle, stratosphere flier, who recent effort brought the world's altitude record to the United States.

Capt. William J. Tait, Coast Guard, who was host to the Wright brothers at Kittyhawk, N. C., when their flight was made.

Hiram Bingham Presides.

Former Senator Hiram Bingham president of the N. A. A., presided at the banquet and introduced the various speakers.

The Thompson Trophy for the year's best speed mark was presented to James Wedell, speed flier, by Mrs. Charles E. Thompson wife of the donor of the trophy.

Senator Bingham read a letter of congratulation sent to Orville Wright by President Roosevelt, in which the President paid tribute to the tremendous importance to which aviation has grown in its 30 years.

Other guests at the speaker's table included Maj. Norbert Champsaur, air attache at the French Embassy; Maj. Chester N. Fordney, Marine Corps, who made the stratosphere flight with Commander Settle; Mrs. Jack Stearns Gray, president of the Women's National Aeronautic Association, and Thomas Morgan, president of the Aeronautics Chamber of Commerce.

There was a musical program with vocal solos by Miss Elida Morris and Mrs. Margaret Louise O'Brien. Mrs. Howard U. Klosser accompanied both singers.

Second Program Today.

Today, the real anniversary of the flight, which was December 17, 1903, will have almost as elaborate a program as that of yesterday.

It will open some time in the morning, when Frank Hawks will leave College Park on a 2,000-kilometer jaunt to take him over Kittyhawk and Dayton, Ohio, the Wrights' home.

He will be trying to break the world record for the distance over a closed course. The record at present is held in Germany. He hopes to complete the trip in a few minutes over five hours.

On the speed hop he will drop floral tributes at Kittyhawk and at Dayton, where Orville Wright is observing the day.

At 12:30 p. m., the Women's National Aeronautical Association will honor the Wrights, when they place a wreath on the Wright exhibit at the National Museum.

The most important part of the day's events as scheduled for the afternoon at College Park Airport. There will be demonstration of civil and military flying and a program of speeches.

Youth to Receive Prize.

George B. Leffler, of 1006 B Street northeast, will be prseented the $150 first National prize of the Stinson Model Aircraft Contest. The local youth will receive the prize from Chester H. Warrington.

Tonight at the Willard Hotel, the W. N. A. A. has planned a program at which Dr. Paul Gerber, of the Smithsonian Institution, will speak.

Dr. Garber was heard at the banquet last night in an illustrated lecture on "The History of Flight." His lecture was followed by the showing of an Air Corps motion picture on the same subject.

Flying clubs and organizations which have been represented in the ceremonies include the Washington Air Derby Association, the Bureau of Standards Flying Club, the Aero Club of Washington and many others.

Beck Lashes Gen. Johnson For "Bullying"

Declares NRA Threats Have Debased Morale of Country.

conducted without a license granted by Gen. Johnson."

As to the "economic bondage" of the Blue Eagle, Mr. Beck said:

"The Blue Eagle is the signal for a Nation-wide boycott against any American who will not accept its demands. * * * Few of us ever believed we would see the day when the Federal Government would impose a Nation-wide boycott to compel the citizen to surrender his industrial liberty.

Cites Threat to Ford.

"Who can doubt what Gen. Johnson meant when he was trying to force Henry Ford to accept the Blue Eagle by his remarks about economic death as the penalty * * *? What did it mean except that Mr. Ford's business was to be injured if not destroyed, unless he signed a code which concededly he was under no obligation to sign.

"All that saved Henry Ford from irreparable injury was the sense of fair play which still animates the American people."

A thousand members of the Pennsylvania society heard Beck refer to Gen. Johnson as "the eminent general, who, by delegated authority, is the economic dictator of the United States."

Beck repeated the charge that the NRA was unconstitutional—a charge which he has made since that body was first organized—and said that, though Gen. Johnson said he welcomed criticism, he nonetheless, when some Americans began to express doubts concerning its legality or economic worth, subjected his critics to "a series of viturperative harangues which it would be difficult to parallel in our history."

Recalls Names.

"His critics were 'tom-tom talkers,' 'witch doctors,' 'hobgoblin seers,' 'social Neanderthals,'" Beck said. "A distinguished specialist in social economy, Dr. Oliver M. W. Sprague, who had been honored by the confidence of two nations, was referred to as an 'obscure professor.' Accepted leaders like Alfred E. Smith, to whom the country owes an immeasurable debt, were called 'corporals of disaster' and 'tories.'"

Beck said it was "common knowledge" that the major industries were "threatened" with codes by Gen. Johnson with the "possibility that if they did not accept Gen. Johnson's ideas the President would impose his own code.

"I am sure the bituminous coal operators and the steel men were not unconscious of that threat. The general said that nobody 'was ever threatened with anything.'

"Evidently the general's memory is not as good as his capacity for denunciation."

U. S. "A Socialistic State."

The government, Beck said, was being converted, "at least for the time being," into a "unitary socialistic state."

Atterbury, in defending the tenets of capitalism, said:

"Whatever else may be said about capitalism, it is common knowledge that it has produced wealth in unbounded quantities. Evils and inequities in the distribution of that wealth have undoubtedly arisen, but that the wealth has been created under the operation of the capitalistic impulse can not be doubted.

"It is indeed in the problem of the distribution of that wealth that the social reformer finds his material to work with. * * *

Believes in Roosevelt.

"But people tell us that this depression has shaken the very basis of capitalism. I do not believe that. It is in that disbelief that I have been glad to join with the great army of our American citizens who are supporting the policies of the President. * * * I am an enthusiastic believer in the patriotism, the courage and the resourcefulness of Franklin D. Roosevelt. * * *

"As I look back upon the situation, it might have been well for us in this country to have gone off the gold standard at the same time Great Britain did."

Gen. Atterbury said the "cart has been put before the horse in the attempt to raise wages in advance of increases in production and consumption."

He said if diligently administered the NRA code "will be a welcome part of our general economic framework.

Fears Codes Overdone.

"It seems to me, however," he said, "that we have gone too far and have perhaps bitten off more than we can chew. The many small industries, in their endeavor to become codified, have made successful administration of their affairs extremely difficult, if not impossible; whereas, had the codification been confined to the larger industries it would perhaps have embraced a relatively large proportion of our business with the disturbance of only a small proportion. As the success of the experiment was assured, its expansion would naturally follow."

Beer-Runner Jailed For "Playing Fair"

Offered $25 "Goin'" Fine, Loses It, Truck, Too.

Salt Lake City, Dec. 16 (AP).—George E. Gordon tried to do the square thing, he said, when he drove a truckload of beer up to the city hall at Bingham Canyon and proffered $25, which, he told officers, he understod was the "goin'" fine for beer possession.

But it was rejected with scorn, his truck and 21 cases of 3.2 beer were seized and he was arrested, found guilty and fined the $25.

Today he appealed to the District Court here to get his beer and truck back.

Pan-American Against War, Trade Barriers

Congress Also Unanimous in Choice of Lima for Next Conference.

Montevideo, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Pan-American conference unanimously approved today a United States resolution expressing a desire to lower trade barriers and an Argentine-Chilean recommendation inviting all American nations to adheer to existing antiwar pacts.

Approval also was given to holding the third Pan-American Commercial Congress in Santiago, Chile, in 1934, and the eighth Pan-American Congress in Lima, Peru.

Angel Alberto Giraudy, of Cuba, made adhesion to the tariff resolution unanimous with the acceptance by his government to the proposal made by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

"If the motion implies absolute equality between states and a complete abandonment of restrictive commercial policies," Senor Giraudy said, "if it means the right of my country to enter agreements with any nation it desires, and if it means the complete sovereignty of Cuba, my government accepts."

Paraguay approved in principle and Salvador praised the spirit of the measure, but made reservations.

Resolutions were approved providing for a continuation of the Inter-American Commission of Women, favoring a treaty of equal nationality rights and recommending that governments hasten civil and political equality.

The Colombian delegate, Alfonso Lopez, cast the vote that made Lima the unanimous choice for the next conference.

Equality Treaty Urged.

Hamilton Fish, ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, last night cabled Secretary of State Hull at Montevideo, Uruguay, in the interest of the National Woman's Party fight for adoption of an equal nationality treaty for men and women at the Pan American conference now in session.

"Urge you make utmost effort for adoption of equal nationality treaty by Pan American conference," the cablegram stated. "House passed unanimously May, 1930, my resolution declaring it to be policy of the United States that there should be no distinction based on sex in treaties, law and practice relating to nationality and commending United States delegation at The Hague, which voted against unequal nationality. Senate approved unanimously on March 3 equal nationality resolution and similar legislation now pending in House favorably reported from immigration committee."

Other cablegrams in support of the treaty were dispatched by the following:

Representative Florence Kahn, Senator Simeon D. Fess, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator Augustine Lonergan, Representative Virginia Jenckes, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, and James Brown Scott.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 16 (AP).—The barking of their collie dog awakened Leonard, 22, and Clarence Carlson, 19, in time to jump from a window in their night clothes today and save themselves from a fire which destroyed their home. Their parents, A. W. Carlson, 74, and his wife, Amanda, 61, were burned to death.

The brothers suffered severe face and body cuts from broken glass. The dog was saved.

The origin of the fire was not determined.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The lynching of Cord Cheek, 20-year-old Negro, near Columbia, Tenn., last night, brought the total number of lynchings in the United States so far this year to 28, according to records of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

This compares with only 10 last year, and is the highest total since 1926, when 34 were listed.

The records, which extend back to 1889, show that 3,686 persons have been lynched since that year. The highest number for any one year was 226 in 1892. In recent years lynchings have shown an irregular decline, until last year the lowest total of 10 was reached.

Apex Building Views Sought Of Roosevelt

Dr. Moore Will Confer With President on Construction.

Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, will request a conference this week with President Roosevelt to determine whether efforts shall be continued to start construction on the disputed Apex building.

The design and location of the building, which would be the easternmost unit in the Federal Triangle, were discussed at the commission's meeting in New York Friday, and Dr. Moore was authorized to carry on further negotiations with the President.

Secretary Ickes, who talked over governmental housing needs here with the President and Dr. Moore a week ago, also will participate in this week's conference, if he leaves Naval Hospital.

Objections to construction of the Apex building center around the claim its architecture would detract from the beauty of the Archives building across the way.

Ground should be cleared soon to permit erection of the Oscar Straus memorial, the Commissioners were told, and this matter also will be laid before President Roosevelt. The memorial fountain will be located on Fourteenth street on a site immediately north of the Labor building.

Wife of Vallee's Aid Loses Job, Ends Life

New York, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Edith Babson, wife of Rudy Vallee's secretary, Lester Laden, committed suicide by jumping from the roof of a six-story building at 19 Gay street, in Greenwich Village, where she lived with her mother, Mrs. Helen Babson.

She was 24 and had been living with her mother for several months. Yesterday she lost her job as a model.

New Cruiser Is Launched In Northwest

U. S. S. Astoria Takes to Water at Navy Yard in in Bremerton.

Bremerton, Wash., Dec. 16 (AP).—Christened by a descendant of one of the founders of the Oregon town whose name it bears, the U. S. Navy's 10,000-ton cruiser Astoria was launched at Puget Sound Navy Yard here today.

Immediately after the christening, the Navy's newest and most powerful cruiser was taken in tow by a fleet of tugs and moved from the building dock to a nearby pier, where the remainder of her equipment will be installed.

"I christen thee Astoria," said Miss Leila C. McKay, of Portland, sponsor, as she shattered a beribboned bottle of California champagne on the vessel's steel prow.

Christening followed presentation of a memorial plaque, given by school children of Astoria, represented by Mayor J. C. Tenbrook, of that city. A. W. Norblad, former Governor of Oregon, spoke for the State.

The Astoria is said by naval engineering officers to have more power than that of the greatest battleship in the Navy. She has engines of 107,000 horse power, designed to drive the 588-foot fighting machine through the water at a speed of 32.7 knots, or more than 37 land miles an hour.

The Astoria is the first naval vessel since adoption of prohibition to be christened with real champagne. The cruiser Louisville, which was launched from the Navy Yard here the day the keel was laid for the Astoria, September 1, 1930, was christened with water from Abraham Lincoln's spring in Kentucky.

Slightly shorter than the Louisville, the Astoria has a deeper draft, to increase its stability while firing. She is also designed to be slightly faster than the Louisville. The Astoria cost about $8,000,000.

U. S. Will Pass On War Story By Japanese

Pamphlets Confiscated in Honolulu Will Be Sent to Treasury.

Pamphlets describing an imaginary war between Japan and the United States, in which Japan is victorious, are on their way to the Treasury Department from Honolulu. The pamphlets were seized by customs officers when they arrived at the Hawaiian Islands aboard a ship from Tokyo.

The Treasury Department will determine whether the war story violates tariff prohibitions against documents inciting war, insurrection or rebellion.

It was stated that there are 1,200 of the pamphlets. They are reported to have been attached to magazines published in Japan. Publishers of the magazine are said to have disclaimed any responsibility for the article or any knowledge of how it was attached to copies of the publication.

The article is described as a vivid account of naval and air warfare in 1936, ending with Japanese occupation of the Hawaiian Islands. The article is said to have been written by a retired Japanese naval officer.

Final decision as to whether the pamphlet constitutes treasonable matter will rest with Acting Secretary Morgenthau.

Labor Board's Authority Held On Increase

Manufacturers' Body Says Old "Advisory" Group Is Now "Court."

The National Labor Board, in its three months of existence, has changed from an advisory board to the "supreme court of labor," the National Association of Manufacturers declared yesterday.

The association has prepared an analysis of the decisions of the board "to formulate its lines of thinking and the directions in which it is moving."

"It is recognized, of course," the statement said, "that much of the influence of the Board is exerted informally, and that its published material by no means covers it work. On the other hand, what has been published forms a valuable and already rather formidable body of precedent for the newly established supreme court of labor."

The manufacturers say at first it was planned that the board would be merely consultative, and that its decisions would be binding only if the parties in dispute would agree to them.

"But the board quickly outgrew this limitation," the statement continued. "The wording of the board's decisions assumed the tone of Supreme Court decisions. On September 28 Senator Wagner was saying that the board 'can not issue summonses, and it will not swing a club. It relies upon voluntary action.' But a month later, on October 31, he declared that 'to make its policies effective, the National Labor Board is backed by all the powers and penalties of the National Recovery Act. They will be used when necessary.' "

5-Cent Cigar's in a Bad Way

The Old Familiar Smoke Now "Needs a Good Country," Retail Dealers' President Tells Joint Hearing on Proposed Tobacco Code.

Times have changed since the late Vice President Thomas Marshall coined the after-dinner speech gem: "What this country needs is a good five-cent cigar."

Take it from William A. Hollingsworth, of New York, president of the Retail Tobacco Dealers of America, "the five-cent cigar now needs a good country."

The five-cent smoke was one of Hollingsworth's outstanding arguments in favor of price-fixing, yesterday, at a joint hearing on the retail tobacco code before the AAA and the NRA. He said the retailer's profit on five-cent cigars has become infinitesimal while to cheapen quality or raise the price to the consumer would curtail cigar popularity.

Predatory Competition.

"The retail tobacconists," he added, "cannot continue to meet the many types of predatory competition confronting them today. The loss-leader competition is the most deadly of them all.

"Stores such as grocery or department stores which depend upon other lines of merchandise for profit, and which, because of protection against loss by confidential or special allowances, use cigarettes and other tobacco products as a bait to lure traffic to them, have sent thousands of retail tobacconists to the wall."

Unless the industry obtains relief, Hollingsworth said, "even the Blue Eagle will walk the plank and in the place of this noble and hopeful standard, retail tobacconists will visualize a skull and cross-bones upon a black field—will prepare to expect no quarter from the new deal and in their hearts there will be engendered revolt against it."

Again looking into the future, Hollingsworth warned:

"If this code is not promulgated there will not be a single independent or little retail tobacco dealer in business a year from now. If price-cutting and loss-leaders are not eliminated, the whole retail tobacco business will be done as a side line and this will mean eventually less consumption of tobacco by the public and poorer prices paid to the tobacco grower by the manufacturer.

"The little independenet dealer can not compete with the chain store or the big department store, which sells tobacco products at cost or less than cost. Under such conditions he has to quit. This would mean the loss of a great many tobacco outlets, more than 100,000, and that would mean that, with lessened consumption, the manufacturers could not afford such tremendous advertising programs as they put on today."

No opposition to the proposed code has developed. The hearings, lasting two days, were closed yesterday.

Mason Named to King's Post In AAA; More Slated to Go

be made with the dairy section as soon as Mr. Mason takes charge. The marketing agreements will not be abandoned, but will be revised and supplemented by production reduction provisions.

It is contended that in the short time the milk agreements have been effective they have increased production, since the dairymen have visons of a guaranteed price. At the same time the agreements have decreased consumption, because pay roll increases have not kep step with the boosts in milk prices.

The result has been an increasing weekly spill-over of fluid milk into the butter industry, creating what Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace recently termed "an intolerable situation." Dairy experts now take the view that chaos reigns in the butter industry and that unless some corrective step is taken dairymen will be impaired seriously.

Before leaving for Birmingham, Ala., where he spoke yesterday, Secretary Wallace ordered the Dairy Marketing Corporation, a Government agency, to cease buying butter with A. A. A. funds on the primary markets of the country after last midnight.

The A. A. A. started on October 17 purchasing butter, an operation designed to stabilize prices, at 24 cents a pound, and similar on a smaller scale to the disastrous wheat and cotton stabilization operations of the Hoover Administration. Until recently the operation was successful in keeping the price pegged at around 24 cents a pound.

But with heavy shipments to market, resulting from the increased spill-over from the fluid milk markets, the price gradually slipped, and as soon as the Government agency limited its daily purchases, the price dropped to 20 cents. On receipt of news that the Government was through using A. A. A. funds for butter price stabilization, the price yesterday at New York dropped to 16½ and 17 cents. This is the result of the only price stabilization operation tried by the Roosevelt Administration.

The butter operation, however, differs materially from the Hoover stabilization operations, in that from the first is was intended to use the butter purchased for relief of distress. The 43,060,626 pounds of butter acquired at a cost of approximately $11,250,000 will be turned over to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation for distribution to the needy. The latter organization is committed to accept bids on 3,011,000 pounds of butter and has asked for bids to be opened December 28 on 15,000,000 pounds additional, making 61,071,626 pounds.

Although unsuccessful in maintaining a price for butter, the operation achieved the result of reducing the butter in storage, which now totals 77,018,000 pounds or about 7,000,000 pounds greater than the five-year average for December 1.

Dr. King had been charged with favoring large dairy interests to the detriment of producers. He was under fire during the Senate milk inquiry. Before becoming A. A. A. milk dictator he served as an arbitrator in disputes over milk agreements.

French Import Quota on Wine Facing Tangle

U. S. Seeks Details of New Embargo Against Farm Products.

Spokesmen indicated a belief that American products still would find a good market in France despite any possible increase in import levy.

While trade negotiations with France appeared to be heading into trouble, those with Ireland headed toward clearer sailing. The Irish Minister, Michael MacWhite, was authority for a statement that his country had received an increased quota, but the figures were not made public.

In the case of Ireland, the market for American products was understood to be more directly linked with the liquor and beer export industry of that country. California barley was described as being particularly suited to the manufacture of Irish stout, while grains also go into the manufacture of Irish whiskies.

Norway May Ask Quota.

Norway, it was revealed, also was considering joining the larger liquor exporting countries in asking for import quotas. The Norwegian Minister said yesterday the first cargo of akevit, a brandy, arrived at the port of New York, the initial shipment under the four-month quota.

Liquor tax legislation, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee informed President Roosevelt, would be given right of way over general tax legislation when Congress convenes. The bill, Doughton said, after a call at the White House, would be ready when Congress goes into action on January 3.

He predicted a levy between $2.10 and $2.40, which would cover the total State and Federal tax under proposed plans for a single Federal collection of the revenue. This single collection system, Doughton said, was favored by the President.

Seek "Reasonable Tax."

The liquor tax has been described by witnesses appearing before the House and Senate committees as directly related to the retail cost of the beverage and the closely allied question of bootlegging.

The Government, to date, has indicated that for the time it would adhere to publicity in its efforts to hold retail prices within reason.

While it holds the power of price fixing in some of the branches of the liquor industry, through the industrial codes, there is no retail code, with accompanying price fixing power, in existence.

Federal Alcohol Control Administration officials have indicated they are prepared to step into the picture if the codes, marketing agreements and the State control agencies fail to hold down consumer costs.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, in private life a physician, joined with another New Yorker, Representative O'Connor, in condemning the sale of blended whisky by drug stores. O'Connor Friday said he would ask an investigation of such sales by the food and drug division of the Agriculture Department.

"Outrage," Copeland Says.

"It is an outrage," Copeland told newspapermen, "to think that a doctor prescribes for whisky and the patient is delivered a pint which contains only two or three ounces of whisky blended with alcohol and other ingredients. It is an invasion of the rights of both the doctor and his patient."

Copeland also said he considered it a "violation of moral law, if not of the law itself."

The Senator said he proposed to talk with officials of the pure food division regarding an inquiry.

Of reports of a "liquor trust," Copeland said he had a "strong conviction" that such a trust actually did exist.

French "Satisfied."

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—The ministry of foreign affairs announced tonight that quota negotiations with the United States were proceeding "satisfactorily."

Christmas liquor from France by parcel post still is awating Santa Claus, however. In response to complaints from Americans that French postoffices refuse liquor packages, the ministry of posts, telephones and telegraphs announced it had been informed by Washington that such mailings were forbidden.

The basis for tariff reciprocity negotiations were described as a bargaining on the importation of fresh fruits from the United States in return for the exportation of French wine to America.

State Rum Sale Bill Wins.

Olympia, Wash., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Steele State-owned liquor-store bill passed the Senate, 33 to 4, tonight. The measure now goes to the House.

Business Men Urge Receiver For U. S. Bank

Tell Col. Cooper Delay in Reopening Is Having Bad Effect.

Receivership for the restricted United States Savings Bank will be requested of the Treasury Department this week by a committee representing the Central Business Men's Association and possibly depositors of this bank.

In the meantime, settlement of the case of the bank in District Supreme Court was hastened yesterday, when the Treasury Department sent a proposed finding of facts to Justice Jennings Bailey.

Counsel for Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the bank, whose suit compelling the Treasury Department to reopen it was dismissed November 29, will file their findings tomorrow. Formal decree settling the case in this court will follow.

Col. Cooper has made a new offer to the Treasury Department for reopening the bank. His offer is to pay in a reasonable amount for additional surplus to reopen it. Col. Cooper explained, however, that in his opinion, the bank was solvent and its capital unimpaired if the department would accept the valuation of the bank building by its own appraisers, which is $112,000, although it had been assessed for years at $129,000.

The Central Business Men's Association committee plans a conference with the bank's depositors prior to asking receivership. A depositor's committee seeking to learn the status of the bank and the possibility of a release of its funds was informed by the Treasury early this month that no discussions could be held until settlement of the court action.

An open letter sent to Col. Cooper by the association cites the bad effect on business in the section served by his bank due to its continued restriction. It stated:

"If this continued court action is prolonging the opening of this bank, our members feel that the sooner this bank is thrown into receivership the best it will be for the merchants of this vicinity and the members of the Central Business Men's Association."

Officials of Mount Vernon Savings Bank, which will reopen as a component of the prospective Mechanics-Franklin Savings Bank, yesterday reported receipt of agreements to the merger representing 87 per cent of a required $1,500,000 deposits. This is a 5 per cent gain since Thursday. Seventy per cent of $150,000 necessary stock has been sold, a 2 per cent increase since Thursday.

Franklin National Bank, another institution to enter this combine, still is awaiting the Treasury's decision regarding the percentage of deposits to be made available on its reopening. Circularization of Franklin Bank depositors for agreements and solicitation of necessary stock is delayed pending this decision.

The original trial ended with a directed verdict in the San Mateo County Superior Court against Mrs. Gavin. She claims to be an illegitimate daughter of Flood and Mrs. Eudora Forde Willette, former actress.

They were given a fraternal welcome. Elmer M. Blume and Milton A. Johnson, of Fort Wayne, Ind., agreed to vacate their room in favor of the visiting brethren, and took to the parlor davenport.

The brothers were gone next morning. And so were bits of jewelry, suits—and, worst of all, the choicest stock of neckties in the university.

A Note on Quotas.

According to a dispatch from Paris, the French government is contemplating raising the quotas on apples and pears, to be imported into France during the first quarter of 1934, to four times what they were last year. Since fruit exports account for an important volume of Franco-American trade, this news would seem gratifying to American exporters. It could be considered as a reasonable concession to our interests, given, doubtless, to induce us to adopt a friendly attitude on the question of French wine imports.

But the same dispatch reveals that the French government intends at the same time to levy duties on apples and pears at the rates of 125 francs ($7.75) and 175 francs ($10.75), respectively, for each 100 kilos (221 pounds). These rates are so prohibitive that they would make it almost impossible for California apples or pears to be sold on the French market. Thus there is little ground for the American grower to rejoice. The French seem to be taking back with the left hand what they are willing to give with the right.

France invented the quota system. In the beginning, it was meant to limit the importation of only a few agricultural products. Little by little, the system was extended under the pressure of those who had not been protected. Then it was realized that it could also be made a source of revenue. And now the French budget under discussion includes 225,000,000 francs to be yielded from the sale of import licenses.

If, on top of this, France raises her duties so that even the small quantities of goods allowed to enter the country can not be sold there, she must expect retaliation. Italy, for instance, has not hesitated to strike back and has been given relative satisfaction more than once.

The United States has had her share of thorns, too, such as the quotas on radio apparatus and canned vegetables. And by comparison in allowing France a wine quota equal to her prewar exports, while the present French apple quota is one-seventh of what it was before the war, this country has been particularly liberal.

A "Quiet" Lynching.

An Associated Press dispatch from Columbia, Tenn., tells of the "quiet" lynching of Cord Cheek, a 20-year-old Negro, whom a jury of Tennessee white men had refused to indict for an alleged attempted assault upon a white girl.

Sheriff Godwin had an anonymous telephone call, which, of course, he was unable to trace, telling him that the body of the young Negro would be found hanging from the limb of a cedar tree near the forks of a road outside Columbia. Cheek had been released from a jail in Nashville a few hours earlier, after the grand jury had exonerated him. Apparently he had returned home, believing that he had already been judged and found innocent.

The sheriff professed to know nobody connected with the affair.

"It was all handled in a very quiet manner," he told an A. P. reporter. "No one knew anything about it."

It was not, in other words, one of those vulgar San Jose or Eastern Shore mob demonstrations; it was a private, quiet, lynching bee to which a coroner's jury, observing all the customary forms, wrote the climax: "Cord Cheek came to his death at the hands of unknown persons."

For her own good name, Tennessee can not afford to be as complacent over her "quiet" lynching as Sheriff Godwin apparently was.

After Thirty Years.

Thirty years ago today Orville Wright made the first successful airplane flight at Kittyhawk, N. C. A crude machine weighing 750 pounds, including the pilot, made four sustained flights, the longest of which had a duration of 59 seconds. The Wright brothers' four-cylinder petrol motor propelled their flying machine at a maximum speed of 30 miles per hour.

Five years after this historic flight the Wright brothers had constructed an airplane that flew for an hour and 15 minutes without landing. After demonstrations at Fort Myer, Va., in 1908 the Wright machine was accepted by the United States Government.

In the short period since the Wrights proved that aviation is a practical means of transportation that industry has undergone remarkable growth. Today the airplane is an established agency of conveyance for passengers, the mails and light express.

Aviators have flown to virtually every part of the world. Airlines conduct daily service between most of the large cities of the United States and of other advanced countries. Efforts now are being made to extend regular air service between the United States and Europe.

Nearly every town and hamlet in America has recognized the need of acquiring airport facilities so as to afford their citizens the benefits of this new medium of transportation.

As Washington celebrated the anniversary of the Wright brothers' achievement the inadequacy and inferiority of the local airport stood out in bold relief. The Government early recognized the possibilities of aviation by accepting the Wright machine less than six years after the first flight had been made. But Uncle Sam has been pitifully slow in recognizing the urgent need for a modern airport in the Nation's Capital.

Millions of dollars have been spent by the Department of Commerce to mitigate the hazards of flying and promote aviation in other respects. Yet Washington, one of the most important air centers of the entire country, is still handicapped by the lack of an up-to-date landing field. The existing airport not only is a disgrace to the National Capital from an esthetic point of view, but it is unsafe as a terminal for extensive commercial flying.

It is astounding that the Government would permit such a condition to exist in the Capital, especially at a time when vast sums are being spent on public works, including airports in other parts of the country.

Crisis Legislation.

Every crisis produces a crop of legislative panaceas. Some of them are good and some are the outgrowth of ignorance and hysteria. Looking backward, the student of American history realizes that much of our regulatory Federal legislation is an aftermath of economic crises of greater or less intensity.

The Federal Reserve act, for example, had its origin to a large extent in the panic of 1907, which so mercilessly exposed the defects of our banking system that even the man in the street could not fail to see them.

Regulatory laws applied to the railroads and antitrust laws have come in response to felt abuses, and, although such measures have not always been linked to depressions, depressions have resulted in insistent demands for their amendment and more effective enforcement. Such was the case in the early part of the present century, following the severe depression of the nineties, when we were engaged in expanding and strengthening Federal control over interstate transportation and interstate commerce.

The war and the economic changes that resulted from the war introduced many new problems calling for legislative action. Barring the severe, but short, post-war crisis of 1920-21, however, the country experienced no major recession for a long period of years. Economic clouds were gathering in 1913, but they were dissipated by the stimulus of wartime demands and wartime buying of American goods. Consequently, until the collapse of 1929, the people of the United States were on the whole content with a policy of legislative drifting, although distress in farm areas caused demands for agricultural relief to become insistent, while the country as a whole still believed itself to be prosperous.

In spite of the indifference of the rank and file of the people evils were developing in those years which called for legislative intervention. For instance, there were increasingly strong demands from business for liberalization of the antitrust laws, in order to substitute regulated cooperation for guerilla competitive warfare. Gaps in our Federal system of railroad legislation, and the need for more stringent control over public utilities in the interest of both consumers and investors, were being urged with growing vehemence but with little effect. Similarly, the need for a basic reformation of our banking system was demonstrated by the continued high banking mortality of the years of prosperity.

In these and other fields of activity, it was more and more apparent that financial and industrial regulatory legislation was needed to correct defects in the existing system of Federal regulatory law. Unfortunately, it is, difficult to secure effective consideration for needed reforms when times are good and the general public indifferent.

The present crisis, however, has brought a deluge of proposals to regulate every known type of economic activity. In the guise of emergency legislation, the Federal Government already has invaded the fields of agriculture and private industry to an extent that would have seemed unbelievable a short time ago. We are also experimenting with our monetary system in strange ways, and when Congress assembles, unquestionably it will be deluged with more proposals designed to eliminate abuses, both real and imaginary.

When the public is aroused to the need for legislative reforms, it is time for the legislator to become wary. That does not mean that he should try to resist the public clamor; on the contrary, it is his duty to heed it, but in doing so he should separate the essential from the nonessential and the positively dangerous. The congressman who is familiar with the facts of American history and conscious of the fundamental economic verities that limit his discretionary powers will work to correct basically unsound conditions that were apparent even in the days of prosperity. He will not strike out blindly to alter practices that are merely symptomatic—the superficial results and not the causes of economic maladjustments.

Unwarranted Hopes.

Reports from Montevideo indicate that the United States once more has taken the lead in a movement to reduce world trade barriers. A resolution by Secretary Hull, pointing to "the disastrous effect of obstructions to international trade upon the full and stable business recovery of individual nations," and calling for a reduction of tariff barriers, was adopted enthusiastically by the economic commission of the Pan-American Conference. Acceptance of the resolution by the entire conference now is taken for granted.

The response of Latin-American statesmen to this move on the part of the United States sounds rather strange in Washington. President Roosevelt recently set in motion machinery that is designed to raise tariff rates against any imports that threaten industries operating under NRA codes. Efforts are being made to negotiate reciprocal agreements with Latin-American countries, but the President has indicated that the time is not now ripe for a general reduction of tariffs. Indeed, the trend is running toward higher trade barriers because of the confused monetary situation and the efforts of each country to deal with its economic problems in its own way.

Of course, Secretary Hull's resolution is carefully worded. It does not promise any immediate reduction of duties, but calls for the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements and a policy of "gradually reducing tariffs and other barriers to mutually profitable movements of goods, services and capital between nations." But the statesmen gathered at Montevideo are anxious to read more specific meaning into the document sponsored by the chief of the United States' delegation.

Several delegates have praised the United States for its "change of policy." Dr. Jose Manuel Cassaurance, Mexican foreign minister, refers to the resolution as a "noble, courageous step." "If the new tariff policy of the United States brings a scaling down of customs barriers," said Barreda Laos, of the Peruvian delegation, "we will see the dawn of a new era of peace and we can tell our peoples we are not returning with empty hands."

The danger is, of course, that our Latin-American neighbors will expect too much from this gesture of economic good will from Secretary Hull. At present there are no indications that the United States tariff barriers or those of any other country will be substantially reduced.

Science in Washington.

Washington is known chiefly as a political center but it serves also as a gathering place for numerous scientific and cultural groups.

The importance of Washington as a scientific center is emphasized by two events of last week: the annual meeting of the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution, and the exhibition at the Carnegie Institution of Washington. The Smithsonian directed or participated in 25 scientific expeditions during the last year. For the most part its work is not spectacular, but it continually adds to our knowledge of the world. Science has become so technical that many of its discussions are not intelligible to the layman, but the ultimate influence of its research is manifested steadily in the advance of civilization.

The public will have a good opportunity to view some of the tools of science and to appraise some of its accomplishments at the Carnegie Institution today and Monday. One of the most interesting exhibits presents data which led scientists to conclude that the earth may be the only inhabited planet in this universe. The atmospheres of Venus, Mars and other planets have been analyzed through the spectroscope. Temperature measurements on the planets have been made with highly sensitive electrical apparatus attached to the largest available telescopes. From the results of these and similar studies astronomers draw their conclusions as to whether or not life could be sustained on the earth's sister spheres.

Other exhibits concern the rate at which light travels, the position of the stars, electricity in the atmosphere, earthquakes, the use of cement by the ancient Mayans and the role of environment in determining growth of the cells. Even a layman who takes note of these exhibits can not fail to appreciate the rapidity with which science is widening its scope.

Washingtonians are particularly fortunate in having access to many of the exhibits and findings that mark the path of scientific progress.

A Suggestion on Gold.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Experience has shown that under an unchanged and unquestioned gold standard prices do fall, but they rise just as far and just as often. For example: The act of 1900 established the single gold standard. The lowest twentieth century price level was in December of that year, the highest in May, 1920. Since then prices have see-sawed up and down but never have reached the low point of November, 1900. At wholesale prices ascertained by the Bureau of Labor statistics, a representative bill of goods would have cost $531 in December, 1900; in May, 1920, $1,672, and at the worst of last spring's panic, during the week ending March 4, $576. Under this unchanged gold standard, goods cost over three times as much in 1920 as in 1900, and the depression had not brought their cost as low as it was in 1900 when the United States started to hoard its gold last spring. Evidently the gold standard alone does not prevent the unreasonable inflation of prices.

But experience also shows that when the boom is limited to a few lines, the shrewder dealers will sell their holdings in these lines, and then sell short or on margin until the prices in question are brought to a reasonable level. That is, if the market value of gold is too high, experience teaches that gold should be sold to all comers, at any price necessary to reduce our unjustifiable hoard of that metal to reasonable proportions. On the contrary, if the price of a thing is below its actual market value it pays to buy and store it until reduced supplies bring its price back to a proper relation with other prices. It is true the money paid out will increase the demand for other commodities and raise their prices too. It should be remembered that if this process is carried too far one's stock of the commodity becomes a hoard, its market value goes unreasonably high and other prices are driven down. This is what we seem to be trying to do with gold. Fortunately, we do not all have to buy gold and the money paid out for it so far won't increase taxes very much.

But would it not be better to return to the free and unlimited purchase and sale of gold at prices that would decrease our hoard of that metal very greatly, say to half or a fourth of the country's present supply? The money received for gold might be used in the purchase of silver. These purchases ought to stop when the Government's silver reserve was equal in value to its gold reserve. It might be well also to purchase and sell other generally accepted and indestructible commodities, such as copper, in quantities sufficient to keep the market supply of money unaffected by the suggested transactions in gold and silver. For is not that just what we want? That is, money issued by the Government in exchange for reserves of generally acceptable and indestructible commodities in such slowly changing volume that the effect of the changes can always be offset by the wisely regulated operations of our bankers.

WORTHY P. STERNS.

Referred to Mr. Ickes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am only one of several thousand local taxpayers who are not in on the easy money enjoyed by the army of "unemployed" beneficiaries serving as heads of the P. W. A. and their gigantic office force and outside aids in the dispensing of Federal funds. We would greatly appreciate the able assistance of The Washington Post in uncovering and publishing the amounts paid to the higher-ups of the Savannah administration department of the P. W. A., their favored clerks, stenographers and switchboard operators. Also we should like to know who authorized renting a four-story building for headquarters, putting in all kinds of expensive office equipment, telephone switchboards on first and second floors, renting other storerooms for registration of unemployed, an immense three-story building for housing transients, &c., all of which appears to be absurd and wanton waste of Federal funds.

Laws of Common Sense.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are three prime factors or laws of common sense. They are the moral, the physical and the economic laws. The moral law deals with the ethics of business, the physical law deals with the tangible assets and the economic law deals with the movement of merchandise. There is a fourth law called the statute, which is artificial, or made by man. That law governs all movements of society but, unless it is patterned after the three prime laws, disastrous results will be the consequence.

To those who think they are clever by avoiding their just obligations by some technicality in the statute, let them consider the results of their superficial ingenuity. It is possible to evade the statute, but it is not possible to evade any one of the three prime laws without causing serious trouble to the whole fabric upon which sound business is built.

They might succeed by unethical methods of getting the best of their fellow men, but by doing so they rob them of the necessary purchasing power which is absolutely essential in order to keep the merchandise moving. Without movement business can not continue. The net result is that a surplus is accumulated and, until dispensed, will result in depriving the people of employment.

How is business going to continue if by unethical methods the wealth of the Nation gets in the hands of a few? Common sense should tell them that it is impossible because they have evaded one of the three prime laws upon which the economic law is based. The economic laws are the laws of common sense.

W. GASTON BULLOCH.

A Boston Man Says We Are All Wet—Mentally.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Boston Transcript has reprinted from your paper an editorial commenting on the result of the eighteenth amendment, going on to say that some of the byproducts of this amendment were racketeering and lawlessness among an otherwise law-abiding people. No one, knowing anything of human nature and the events of the past 25 or 30 years, would make such a statement as that or put any stock in it when made by another.

That may apply to Washington, but not to this part of the United States. Most every "wet" or every one that had the "old habit" which they greatly desired to satisfy, have been harping on this for years; that is, the fact that because they wanted a drink legally and had to violate the Constitution to have it, that this condition had something to do with the breaking of other laws that always have been broken. Just watch the next year or two and see Also to any one able to look back a few years, how ridiculous such a statement sounds.

Miss Redell's Singing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing under the influence of a thrill occasioned by an item in your paper which appeared last Sunday on page 10. You informed us in Washington that Emma Redell, the Washington opera and concert star, would sing in Madison Square Garden the revival of the Wagner opera, "Rienzi." For years I had been hoping to hear her in our own city, to hear our own Emma Redell, who has thrilled tens of millions of music lovers in the far off corners of the globe, but has not been given to us in our own city by the managers who guide the destinies of our musical fare. And your item about her induced me to make the trip to New York to be present at the memorable performance.

As I sat at a distant point of the vast house and listened to the phenomenal beauty of Emma Redell's singing, as I heard her bell-like voice ring over and above an orchestra of 200 and a chorus of 500 men and women, I wished that every music lover from our city of Washington could have been here to hear this unusual thrill. It then became clear to me why the ministry of education in the Soviet Union had chosen Emma Redell as America's first singer to tour that country as soloist of the leading symphony orchestras. A country thousands of miles away had apparently kept its ears to the ground and found our Emma Redell to thrill their music loving audiences, while our Washington continues apparently to ignore the existence of this world-famous artist. We are certainly giving an exhibition of our adherence to the saying that a prophet is not honored in his own land.

I am trying to rush this off before catching a train back for Washington. If you ever inform us again where Miss Redell will sing, even if it be on the Pacific Coast, and I still have the cost of a ticket, you may rest assured that I will be among the cheering audiences. I venture the guess that many more of our Washingtonians with sufficient civic pride in them would do likewise.

DONALD BROWN.
New York City.

He Finds He Was Right.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Various eminently respectable papers devoted to defense of the status quo are quoting Smedley Butler's speech about the American Legion, delivered in New Orleans, with satisfaction. They indicate entire approval of his strictures of the Legion for its frequent servility to Wall street.

Well and good. I can unqualifiedly indorse such praise of Gen. Butler's statements. And it calls to my mind the fact that a little over a decade ago I was—with many other victims of the war's hysteria and sadism—jailed for calling attention to facts that are now cited by Smedley Butler and various men and women in high places without a word of censure from the public.

Yes, the world does move, albeit slowly. Today it is difficult to find a sane person who pretends that the war was productive of good. Today scores of war objectors who at one time wore the garb of felons, are the respected advisers of wiser and sadder citizens who were swept along in 1917-18 by the hypnotism of "The Great Madness."

"He laughs best who laughs last." We, who said the war was a fraud, a farce, a trap and a snare, camouflaged by the infamous hypocrisy of a pretended idealism, were right! Scott Nearing's phrase, "The Great Madness," was excellent. It was also "The Great Delusion" and "The Great Betrayal!"

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THOSE of us who have always liked personally Prof. Ray Moley, Mr. Roosevelt's "Dear Ray," will rejoice in the "recovery" of himself after his most bitter experience in our midst. It was enough to crush a fellow—and it did crush Ray. He went away from here with his head hanging very low and, notwithstanding his outward enthusiasm for his new job, feeling very low.

BARGERON.

But he is up and at 'em again now. He is the same old Ray, speaking with that same self-assurance with which he dropped in upon the London conference and which in that instance proved his undoing. It was because it did this I thought we would never see the same Ray again, that he never could attain that cockiness and air of authoritativeness which so characterized him the brief time that he was here.

But he has.

• • • •

SPEAKING before Columbia University a couple of nights ago he in effect demanded that Secretary of State Hull resign and read him out of the party.

That is what I call a come-back, to demand the gate for the man who previously had got it for him!

What dear Ray said was that Secretary Hull in asserting at Montevideo that our present policies were emergency in nature, not to be looked upon as permanent—he was not in step with the New Deal; that he was misrepresenting it and that we might as well recognize now that we are working toward a division by which Mr. Hull and his type of Democrats would be on one side and Mr. Roosevelt and the Progressive Democrats and Progressive Republicans on the other. We might as well put that in our pipe and smoke it, said Dear Ray.

NOW I say this is quite a come-back for Dear Ray to make, to demand that the President's Secretary of State—who has been a Democrat for a right long time, who, indeed, was a F. R. B. C. man—get out and give his seat to Dear Ray, who never had been heard of as a Democrat before. As I say, it is this attitude of Dear Ray's that got him in bad before, but his faculty of bounding back shows he is a very resilient young man and can take a lot of knocking down before he is through.

As to whether he speaks with any authority now is another matter, but one of considerable importance. He is the editor of a magazine devoted to nothing but Mr. Roosevelt's cause and to all doubters of his closeness with the President he can show that "Dear Ray" letter which avowed a friendship for him not to be diminished by the passing years.

I HAD thought that Mr. Hull, after being buffeted about by the Administration sufficiently to try the patience of a Job, finally had come to a task that was both pleasing to him and to Mr. Roosevelt, that at Montevideo he was engaged in negotiating such bilateral trade treaties as he could and in general trying to keep on friendly terms with other nations in order that we at least would have some contacts if and when it became necessary to abandon our nationalistic policies. By no stretch of the imagination could he be considered as doing any harm. If we are to maintain a State Department, in fact, there would seem nothing better at present that Mr. Hull could do.

The Montevideo conferees, though, will read of Dear Ray's remarks and wonder, as did the delegates at London, whether Mr. Hull knows whereof he speaks when he says our nationalism is impermanent or whether Dear Ray speaks authoritatively when he says it is the bunk.

Certainly, a contribution to the gayety of the times is Dear Ray!

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

Temperance, which all good citizens believe in and will strive to bring about, is a matter of long, patient and persistent education. The education for temperance, long neglected, should be resumed at once, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. The W. C. T. U. deserves great credit for announcing that it will devote its great energies to such a campaign of education. This is an intelligent procedure, and should be generally adopted. It behooves the governors and legislatures of the various States to organize the best brains at their command to set up such control of the liquor trade that former abuses will not be revived and that the new ones of bootlegging will be abolished.

WOMAN AND THE SNAKE.

In an early day it was promised to the serpent that the seed of Eve should "bruise thy head." Thus it has been. The enmity then declared between mankind and the race of snakes has been steadfast, according to the San Francisco Chronicle.

Yet it is being found that this enmity can be carried too far. Woman's fashion of reptile leather has bruised the snake too effectively. The East Indies and Africa, which produce most of the snake leather, are finding rats and other pests increasing too fast without the snakes to eat them.

EXEMPLARY YARN.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is credited, by her example while watching the Senate in action from the visitors' gallery, with setting the women of the Nation to knitting, says the Los Angeles Times, but we must await the opening of the next Congress to see whether the solons will follow her example and attend to theirs.

Litvinoff's Hand Is Seen in Case Charging Espionage.

Rome, Dec. 16 (AP).—The intervention of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, of Russia, while on a recent visit here was believed responsible for the liberation yesterday of the wife and daughter of former Deputy Umberto Bianchi, who had been in custody for months with Bianchi and several others suspected of espionage in favor of Russia.

Commendatore Donato Battelli and Capt. Marzio Perrelli, of the air services, were promised their freedom tomorrow.

Bianchi and another daughter were still held, together with nine others.

The reason given officially for the releases was lack of evidence. No indication was given, however, that the others will be released. The subject was not mentioned in official reports of Litvinoff's talks with Premier Mussolini, but it was understood the Russian scoffed at espionage fears.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

If December 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 8:55 a. m., from 2:40 to 3:40 p. m. and from 5 to 6:10 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11:20 a. m., from 4:15 to 4:45 p. m. and from 8:25 to 9:45 p. m.

You will probably be unsuccessful on this date if you try to put across anything in a hurry; errors of judgment will be made and furthermore, influences operating will tend to cloud some of the issues. Those who find it one of their duties to make public appearances will appear well on this day and will speak with conviction and sincerity.

The child born on this December 17 will be an indefatigable little one when busy at something that truly interests it. Will always complete anything it starts. A willing helper around the house and will not resent being called from its play to run errands. Girls will early learn to market wisely and well.

Born on December 17, you are more than likely a person who conceals well his emotions. You crave affection, but there is something within you that prevents you from reaching out for it. You take great likings to people and at times you hate with fervor, but always, you try to conceal your feelings. In attempting to strike a level for your emotions you often appear indifferent. Life will not have the great joys and sorrows for you that it holds for others, but more than likely your existence will not be a strain and drain on your strength.

If December 17 is the date of your birth, you more than likely will become interested early in life in some phase of existence. The chances are, that you will devote your life to research of a scientific nature. You like to dig into things and get to the bottom of them; you are methodical and persevering. You will get results from anything that you undertake. You are perhaps lacking in a desire for any kind of social life. You have few close friends and you enjoy them one at a time and not in groups. When you get out in a crowd you are inclined to shut up like a clam; you are not a good conversationalist and it is impossible for you to make light talk. Gossip bores you and you have little respect for the average person's idea on any subject.

Successful people born on December 17:

Henry R. Worthington, pump inventor.

Frederick W. Lander, engineer and explorer.

Alexander Agassiz, scientist.

William Harkness, astronomer.

William G. Farlow, botanist.

Julian Edwards, musician.

Several Other Posts to Be Given Up at Same Time.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Paul Quattlander has resigned as president of the Hahn Department Stores, Inc., effective January 31.

In his letter of resignation he reported that "for the ten months ending November 30, 1933, the profit and loss account showed a betterment over last year of $2,850,000.

Sure of Two Weeks' Work, Actor Says.

Saito Is Chosen As Ambassador To Washington

Young Japanese to Be Debuchi's Successor; Has Served Here.

Tokyo, Dec. 16 (AP).—Hiroshi Saito, present Japanese Minister to the Netherlands, today was chosen by his government as the next Ambassador to Washington, to succeed Katsuji Debuchi, resigned.

M. Saito, who will be 47 this month, is the most youthful ambassador Japan ever has sent to the United States. His diplomatic career has been marked by a series of rapid advancements over the heads of almost a dozen of his superiors.

Formerly a consul general in New York and consul at Seattle, M. Saito speaks and writes excellent English, and has many friends in the United States.

The Japanese press supported him favorably through the period of speculation as to who would be named to the Washington post.

Before his appointment to the Netherlands a year ago, the new envoy to America was the Japanese foreign office's "handy man" on both sides of the Atlantic.

Has Served at Washington.

He served as charge d'affaires in both the London and Washington embassies and for a time was third secretary at Washington.

His selection was backed by army and navy leaders in view of the fact, that, although Saito was active as a member of the Japanese delegation at the London Naval Conference in 1930, he escaped the accusations of lack of patriotism, which nationalist and militarist elements fastened upon other Japanese representatives, who accepted the unpopular naval treaty.

The young diplomat's familiarity with the whole fabric of post-war naval limitations was another important factor in the choice, since leaders dominating the Japanese government consider revision of the naval ratios favorable to Japan at the 1935 conference as the paramount Japanese-American issue.

Emperor Approves Move.

Prior to the selection, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota consulted at length with Debuchi. Afterward the premier, who concurred in the appointment, obtained the emperor's sanction for permitting the government to request Washington's consent.

The official announcement will be withheld until a reply is received from Washington.

Authoritative foreign office spokesmen said today that Toshiriko Taketomi, present councillor of the legation at Washington, will succeed Saito as Minister to the Netherlands.

The same sources said Kensuke Horinouchi, Consul General at New York, will return to Tokyo to head the foreign office investigation bureau, with Renzo Sawada, councillor of the Paris Embassy, succeeding Horinouchi.

In consequence of these changes, M. Shu Tomii, Consul General in San Francisco, will succeed Sawada.

War-Time Director of Fuel Now Gives Coal to Jobless

Snead Carries Out His Own Plan of U. S. Aid to Needy.

A Washington man who directed the distribution of fuel under the fuel administration during the war is serving in a similar post under the Emergency Relief Administrations project to provide coal for the unemployed.

The man is L. A. Snead, author of the plan by which local coal dealers are supplying fuel on orders signed by relief officials. Already about 20 per cent of the 10,000,000 tons of coal available has been given out on these orders, Snead said. As the coal is distributed from the dealers' regular stocks, the Administration attends to having replacements shipped to him.

Snead, who lives at the Kennedy-Warren, had the title of assistant to the Fuel Administrator during the war days. In addition, he was a member of the priority committee of the War Industries Board, the Commission on Car Supply of the Railroad War Board, the Tidewater Coal Exchange, and the Committee on Coal Production of the Council of National Defense. He also was commissioner of the Bituminous Coal Operators of the United States.

In Washington, coal for the jobless is being distributed by the Government fuel yards, which were allotted 2,015 tons. Local dealers are ready to deliver also, in an emergency, Snead said. Coal is delivered in lots of from one-quarter ton to one ton.

L. A. SNEAD, director of distribution of the Fuel Administration during the war, who has set up the plan for providing coal as part of Federal relief work.

Convention Also Calls for Greater Support of U. S. Bureau.

Resolutions indorsing "the principle underlying" the securities act, opposing national legislation which would fix maximum hours of labor for all industry, and calling for greater support of the Bureau of Mines, were adopted yesterday by the American Mining Congress at its thirty-sixth annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Howard I. Young of St. Louis, was elected president of the congress at the closing session. He is president of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. He and W. J. Jenkins, of St. Louis, were also named members of the executive committee.

Regarding the securities act, the resolution proposed "such amendment of the said act as will make possible issuance of honest securities for the financing of capital outlays and refinancing of existing companies to carry on capital operation."

The resolution concerning the Bureau of Mines stated that the mining industry in the United States was second only to agriculture. The congress asked authority to study the work of the bureau and to make suitable recommendations as to future activities.

Two Fliers Named Field Inspectors

Vidal Appoints C. F. Dycer and Beneter Griffin.

Appointment of two field inspectors of the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce was announced yesterday by Eugene L Vidal, director. They were Beneter Griffin, of Oklahoma, and Charles F. Dycer, of California.

Griffin, who will be assigned to the Dallas area, is a war pilot. In 1932 he and James Mattern attempted a round-the-world flight which they were forced to abandon in Russia.

Dycer has been a motion picture stunt flier. He formerly operated an airport at Los Angeles. He will be sent to the Chicago district.

Power Shovel Crushes Workman to Death

Jasonville, Ind., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Grover Griffith, 50, Jasonville, was crushed to death beneath a large power shovel while working in the Baker Dora coal mine here today. The engineer operating the shovel was unable to see Griffith due to smoke.

159-Year Term Swift Justice Given Convict

Escaped Prisoner Nabbed After Kidnaping Eight in Holdup.

Texarkana, Ark., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Justice moved swiftly here yesterday to pile up prison terms for an escaped Arkansas convict charged with kidnaping and robbery.

Leo Goins, 26, pleaded guilty to three charges of kidnaping and two of robbery before Circuit Judge Dexter Bush and was sentenced to 53 years' imprisonment on each, the sentences to run consecutively.

Goins faced his term in prison lightly.

"I'd rather be sentenced to 99 years than go back to Tucker Farm," the prison from which he escaped last October, Goins said. "If I were sent back to the farm they'd put me on the spot and kill me for escaping."

Goins, who assertedly confessed also to participation in a $1,200 machine gun robbery at Memphis, Tenn., faces Federal prosecution.

After sentencing him Judge Bush turned Goins over to U. S. Commissioner S. A. Phillips on a charge of robbing a postoffice at Keyville, Ark., last month. Goins waived preliminary hearing, pleaded guilty, and was held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

He will be tried in Federal Court at Little Rock next February, officers said.

Goins kidnaped eight Texarkanans, commandeered a truck, a taxicab and three automobiles and robbed his victims of $60 Thursday before he was captured by police as he fled in a stolen car toward Little Rock.

Check, Mate

Husband Prefers Jail to Giving Wife His Pay.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—If a fool and his money are soon parted, Michael Ryan is no fool.

Michael Ryan is spending the pre-Christmas season in a cell just because he won't part with his.

It was his first money in two years, Ryan protested as he waved his Civil Works Administration pay check, and he would not give it up.

"And me with nine children, Your Honor," cried Mrs. Ellen Ryan, who had her husband arrested.

Judge Harold O'Connell, who ordered Ryan locked up a week ago, asked him if he had changed his mind today. Ryan hadn't. He went back to jail for another week, still clinging to his C. W. A. check.

Liner Brittanic Hauled Off Boston Mud Flat

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP).—The White Star liner Brittanic was hauled off a mud flat in Boston Harbor on the high tide today after being stranded since shortly after midnight.

The Brittanic's start to Europe was delayed by a survey to determine if she had suffered damage before the line would permit her to proceed.

Insull Fights To Stay Abroad

Greek Lawyers Seek New Means to Prevent Extradition.

Athens, Dec. 16 (AP).—Greek lawyers for Samuel Insull, sr., deposed Chicago utilities king, today began a search for new means by which they might save their client from the United States authorities.

Observers believed that Insull's best chance to escape being returned to face charges of embezzlement lay in his present illness. A physician said the seventy-four-year-old man was suffering from diabetes and heart trouble.

This, he added, had been aggravated by the recent decision of the Greek government not to extend his permit to remain in Greece after January 31. The doctor ordered his patient to "rest and take things easy."

Forest A. Harness, special Assistant United States Attorney General, who has supervised the American fight to extradite Insull, said he was delighted with the Greek government's action in refusing an extension of liberty to Insull.

Candidate Talks Like a Candidate

Wants $10 Minimum Pay and Jobs for All.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Announcing his candidacy for United States Senator, Frank Harper, of Hattiesburg, Miss., said he favors a job for every man in the United States "with a minimum wage scale of $10 per day."

Other planks in his platform include enactment of a Federal sales tax, the proceeds of which would be used to pay operating expenses of State government, and issuance by the Government of $200,000,000,000 worth of greenbacks.

U. S. Seeking Higher World Gold Prices

Observers Think Fixed Policy Would Gain That End.

(Associated Press.)

A desire to force the world gold price up to a point nearer the figure fixed by the Treasury for newly mined domestic gold was given yesterday as one reason for the recent big increase in Administration purchses of the metal abroad.

This, too, has failed thus far to reduce the disparity, a factor that has set Washington to wondering if some new move may be in process of formulation in the frequent conferences between President Roosevelt andhis monetary advisers.

In this connection, those who have followed the subject closely are devoting some study to suggestions that the objective of a higher world price could be attained by the establishment of a fixed quotation at which the Government would purchase all newly imported gold.

Would Lift World Price.

The offer alone, some economists say, would be sufficient to send the world price soaring, and few if any actual purchases would be necessary. The process, they say, would follow these lines:

The R. F. C. would offer to exchange its 90-day notes for newly imported gold at a rate of possibly $34.01, the current price of domestic gold, or it might start at a lower point and work upward.

With gold selling for less in London, there would be an immediate demand for large quantities of the metal for shipment to America.

This would force the London price almost immediately up to a point almost equal to the domestic price. The difference between the two would represent the cost of shipping the metal to New York and of insuring it while en route.

Would Prevent Speculation.

The process would work so rapidly, economists said, that little if any gold would be bought abroad at a price low enough to afford the importer a profit. Consequently actual purchases by the Govern- would be small.

Objectors to the plan pointed out that the increase in the London gold price would be represented largely by an increase in the number of dollars and cents exchangeable for a pound; that is, a weakening in the foreign exchange value of the dollar. They agreed, however, that it would have a definite effect equivalent to decreasing the dollar's gold content.

The theory behind the gold buying plan is that the price of gold and the price of commodities bear a direct relation, that when one goes up or down, the other follows. By keeping the price of gold up, President Roosevelt hopes to forward his campaign for increased domestic commodity prices.

Price Held at $34.01.

The domestic gold price was held unchanged yesterday at $34.01, while the value of gold at London was $32.25, at an exchange rate of $5.10½ to the pound, that which prevailed at the time the Washington figure was set.

This difference of $1.74 compares with a disparity of 93 cents on November 27, $1.85 on November 28, $1.63 on December 4, $1.40 on December 9, $1.88 on December 12, $2.22 on December 14 and $1.60 yesterday.

The expansion of foreign purchases was begun less than ten days ago, Chairman Jones of the RFC has revealed, and in that time, it can be seen from the foregoing figures, the disparity has shown no tendency to diminish. Meanwhile, the dollar has displayed considerable strength.

Tourist Dimes Sought to Save $13,000,000 Deering Estate

Art Critics Hold Florida Home Comparable to Old Palaces.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—Viscaya, the $13,000,000 estate of the late James Deering, Chicago harvester magnate, is seeking tourist dimes after years of seclusion behind high pink concrete walls.

Acclaimed by critics as one of the finest country estates in America, and held comparable to palaces of Old World rulers, Viscaya's majestic simplicity has been concealed behind shuttered windows and storm boardings since the owner's death nearly ten years ago.

The heirs have paid infrequent brief visits to the bayside mansion and yesterday Chauncey McCormick, of Chicago, executor of the Deering estate, told the governing bodies of Miami and Dade County that the estate must have relief from the annual tax of $32,000.

If the taxes are lifted and the heirs are permitted to admit tourists for fee, McCormick said, maintenance of the estate will be continued and the collection of art treasures preserved.

Appearing with McCormick before the commissions to urge acceptance of the plan were Dr. Robert Bartholow Barshe, director of the Chicago Art Institute; Arthur Brisbane, newspaper columnist, and D. C. Rich, associate director of the Art Institute.

Dr. Barshe told commissioners of an inventory he made years ago for Deering.

"The doors, bronze gates, textiles, statuary and other art objects were brought here by Mr. Deering from hundreds of palaces throughout Europe," he said. "There is a Marie Antoinette room with fabrics designed by her own weaver, treasures from Byzantic palaces, from Italy and other parts of the Old World."

The commissioners withheld immediate action.

Three Maim Selves To Evade Jail Toil

Texas Prisoners Cut Off Feet, Arms, Fingers.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 16 (AP).—An account of how two convicts chopped off their fingers and a third cut off his arm to escape hard labor came from the Retrieve Farm of the State prison system today.

Officials of the farm expressed the opinion that the men maimed themselves to get transferred to the Central Penitentiary at Huntsville, where work is lighter.

Julius Joch, 26, of Houston, said he chopped off three fingers of his left hand with a cane knife so he could "make the Huntsville walls."

Harry Bertoline, 35, of Fort Worth, hacked off his arm above the wrist on December 9. Capt. B. H. Tarver, assistant manager of the farm, said Bertoline explained he did not want to work.

Simon's Resignation Hinted.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Daily Mail said today that possibility of Sir John Simon's resigning as foreign secretary was being suggested in "some quarters."

Spaniard Planning Transatlantic Hop

Maj. Franco Arrives in New York.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Ramon Franco, one of the premier fliers of Spain, arrived in New York today en route to Cuba and Mexico. Franco said he would attempt a transatlantic flight from New York to Europe in May.

Maj. Franco, who flew the South Atlantic in 1926 in the first major non-stop flight across the ocean, said:

"Spain should be among the first nations in aviation. She is not." The flyer said that "for a time, Spain was supreme in modern aviation. My aim is to return her to that supremacy."

His last oceanic effort, in 1929, ended near to disaster. His plane was forced down near the Azores, but a nearby steamer rescued him.

Drastic Income Tax Is Favored By Committee

House Subunit Ignores Administration Ideas; Seeks Tight Levy.

cation of 20 to 25 per cent to the States, and, following his White House visit yesterday, represented the President as favorable to the scheme.

The nine major recommendations of the House subcommittee for plugging income tax loopholes, which Chairman Hill yesterday predicted will be adopted by the committee despite Treasury opposition to five of them, are:

1. Use of one normal income tax rate of 4 per cent, and adjustment of the surtax rates so the tax burdens on incomes other than dividends and partially tax-exempt interest will remain practically unchanged.

2. Reduce allowances made for depreciation and depletion by 25 per cent during the years 1934, 1935 and 1936.

3. Limitation of capital losses to capital gains.

4. A tax of 35 per cent on "undistributed adjusted net income" of personal holding companies.

5. Rewriting the exchange and reorganization provisions of the income tax law, to restrict income tax exemptions now possible under such corporate changes.

6. Taxation of dividends out of profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, as in the case of any other dividends.

7. Repeal of provisions allowing foreign income taxes to be credited against Federal income.

8. Elimination of consolidated returns.

9. Denying partners the right to offset, against their ordinary income, losses sustained by the partnership.

Acting Secretary Morgenthau recommended against the second, fifth, seventh, eighth, and ninth of these proposals.

In supplementary testimony yesterday, Prof. Magill told the committee that, while the Treasury opposed elimination of consolidated income tax returns, he thought an alternative plan of placing higher levies on consolidated returns might be employed.

He said he feared no statute could be adopted on the subject that "ingenious lawyers" could not find some means to get around.

Representative Hill said yesterday his subcommittee is favorable to reducing the tax on earned income under that now charged for investment income, in line with Treasury recommendations. He declared, however, the committee will not write such a recommendation into its bill unless it finds the Treasury "can spare the revenue."

"And we haven't been convinced of that yet," he said.

Crawford Guilty, But Wins Mercy

the prosecuting attorneys who addressed the jury allowed a hint of the prisoner's color, in contrast to that of his victim, to creep into their studied, dispassionate statements.

The day's honors went to Dean Houston, trying his first murder case, who addressed the jury on the hypothesis that Crawford was guilty of complicity in the murder, and pleaded for him as for a "homeless, hungry dog, caught in a web of circumstance and led into the crime by a stronger mind."

"Not everyone guilty of first degree murder deserves the same penalty," argued Houston. "There's a distinction between Crawford and the actual killer.

"If you accept Crawford's confession, he has 'come clean' and the law takes cognizance of that. He is not the killer type."

Houston then concluded with the plea which won over the jury.

"Consider this," he urged, in an earnest, modulated voice. "If you ever hope to catch Charley Johnson and put him in the chair for this dastardly crime, there is only one man who can help you do it.

Death Would Save Other.

"If you ever hope to catch the man who really is guilty, don't wipe out George Crawford. If you do wipe him out, Charley Johnson is gone forever.

"Although there are two honest women lying in their graves, the law does not say that you must take an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, regardless of the degree of guilt of the accused. I submit that if you find George Crawford guilty, this is not a case for the supreme penalty."

Search for "Charley Johnson," the tall, slim Negro who was with Crawford on the night of the murder of Mrs. Ilsley and her maid, Mrs. Buckner, will be spurred by the verdict, Commonwealth Attorney Galleher said tonight. It will turn toward Richmond, where already the trail of a suspect has been picked up. In his confession, Crawford named "Johnson" as the actual slayer and said he himself acted as lookout.

Race Issue Discussed.

Only once today was the question of racial prejudice in choosing Virginia juries raised. This was after the jury had retired and the judge and opposing counsel were indulging in expressions of mutual regard.

Referring to the fact that the most gruesome features of the testimony and the most incriminating admissions in Crawford's confession had left the audience in the overstuffed little courtroom entirely unmoved, Houston said:

"The composition of our juries must rest for the moment upon their acceptance by the community. We can not expect a change over night. But if the question is treated with sincerity by both sides, we shall progress. We can not hope to rise by tearing down your institutions, we can only hope to convince you that we are entitled to share in them."

Judge Lauds Procedure.

Judge McLemore, who received a telegram from the Independent Labor Defense at Richmond denouncing "your denial of the rights of Negroes to serve on the Crawford jury as part of the special oppression of the Negro nation," referred warmly to the admirable conduct of both sides during the trial.

"I came expecting to find instances of race prejudice," he said. "But it never has been my privilege to try a contested case of this sort where the temper in the courtroom has been as splendid as it has been here. The people have been dignified and reserved. This case has been an oasis in the desert.

"I have caught a new vision of what can be and what ought to be in the conduct of criminal trial."

Florida Investigates 2 Fatal Bus Crashes

Tallahassee, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—A rigid investigation by Gov. Sholtz, of two school bus accidents in Florida this week, in which 10 were killed and upward of two score injured, some of them critically, was started today, as residents of the rural section near Crescent City turned to burial of the dead there.

Son Admits Killing Father.

Mercer, Pa., Dec. 16 (AP).—State police announced tonight they have solved the mysterious slaying of Clark Witherup, 51-year-old Venango County oil operator, through a confession by the man's 19-year-old son that he accidentally shot and killed his father.

Synthetic Zoo Alp to Be Boon To Wild Sheep and Poor Artists

Mount Civilwork Building Should Start Soon, Dr. Mann Says.

Mount Civilwork, a synthetic alp which will be a boon to captive Rocky Mountain sheep and hungry artists and craftsmen, has been modeled and construction of the zoo's latest embellishment should start soon, Dr. William M. Mann said yesterday.

The mountain is one of three art projects well under way at the zoological park, made possible by the civil works program to employ 2,500 needy artists. Five have been put to work under Director Mann's supervision, two on the mountain, two on native backgrounds in the reptile house and one on the painting of map panels for the lion house.

Papier mache model of the hollow sheep mountain, that is, ex—sheep hollow mountain—anyway, it is to be hollow—reveals it will be about 15 feet high and 30 feet long. It will be made of cement with the prevailing thickness of about 6 inches.

There is a tunnel with three openings, designed so that a sheep in flight can not be cornered by his adversary and injured or killed in combat. The crags have no fissures, a safeguard against broken legs. An artificial spring flows from just below the peak over two sheer drops.

A start on the painting of scenic backgrounds in snake cages probably will be made tomorrow, Dr. Mann said. Artists assigned to this improvement were busy preparing designs last week.

The lion house panels will be painted by a young woman artist. Two are to be outline maps of the Eastern and Western Hemispheres. Paintings of specimens will be imposed upon the continents, showing the cat family's distribution over the world—a lion over Africa, tiger across India, wildcat springing about North America, and so forth.

All the continents will be shown, but Australia draws a blank, because it has no native cats. But Borneo, Madagascar, and other islands do, so they will rate animal paintings.

The canvases will be 6 by 8 feet, and will be placed inside at either side of the entrance.

Kentucky Leaf Floors Closed

Governor Orders Holiday Until Federal Crop Plan Is Ready.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 16 (AP).—Gov. Ruby Laffoon tonight asked all Kentucky tobacco warehouses to close.

The proclamation said the governor "respectifully requests the loose-leaf tobacco warehouses of the State be closed until the National Government may perfect reduction of acreage and a fair adjustment of prices."

More than 100 delegates who told the governor they represented Burley tobacco growers in 20 counties petitioned him to declare the holiday to allow the Government's acreage reduction plan to be put into effect.

As the group crowded around the governor insisting on immediate action various ones called out, "If you don't issue the holiday proclamation, well have to have the militia," and "Governor, we are likely to have lawlessness in Kentucky if these warehouses are not closed. We don't want night-riding in Kentucky again."

Ickes Planning Further Attack On Lobbyists

Ways to Halt Activities Sought; Congressional Probe Impends.

Rigid rules to prevent diversion of Public Works money into the pockets of experts, advisers, attorneys, and just plain lobbyists, are being considered by Secretary Ickes, it was learned yesterday.

Ickes plans to continue vigorously the battle against "influence bootleggers," who see in the $3,300,000,000 fund being distributed by the P. W. A. a golden opportunity to obtain some of the money for their own personal financial relief, rather than for its intended purpose, relief of unemployment.

The P. W. A. has evidence of attempts of attorneys and persons with alleged influence to collect millions of dollars in fees. As in most cases the only money concerned is that of the P. W. A., the fees are coming out of these public funds.

As reports grew that a Congressional investigation of lobbying in the P. W. A. and other relief administrations is almost inevitable, plans were being made to put a positive halt to all such activities.

Would Demand Data.

The new regulations being considered would require that anyone appearing before P. W. A. in behalf of any project would be required to state, under oath, the work he is doing and the compensation he expects to receive or has received. In addition, contracts may require that the person or organization receiving a P. W. A. allotment make an affidavit stating the amount of legal fees that have been paid and to whom they have been paid.

Consideration of these plans follows action of P. W. A. in publicly declaring two agents, who have sought favors from the administration "persona non grata" in P. W. A. offices and the writing of letters to employers of others warning them that their agents were "persona non grata." It also follows the action of P. W. A. in turning over to the Justice Department and to local law enforcement officials facts on which some lobbyists may be prosecuted on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses. It is held that in cases in which lobbyists have sold their services on the ground that they have unusual influence with the P. W. A. they have committed an act which constitutes false pretense.

Further Safeguards.

As a further safeguard against "influence peddlers," P. W. A. applications are received in triplicate form, one copy each going to the engineering, legal and financial divisions of the administration. Attorneys or other representatives of applicants are not allowed to appear before their bodies unless their appearance is requested. When representatives are requested to appear, P. W. A. officials insist on hearing only from persons familiar with proposed projects and not from agents who have been employed merely because they are supposed to know someone or to have voted right in the last election.

There is nothing particularly new about the use of "influence" to obtain favors from the Government, but the practice is more widespread than ever now because more favors are obtainable. Never before has the Government passed out billions of dollars almost for the asking.

"Going Out of Business" Sale Must Be Real, Code Decrees

No New Stock Can Be Moved in Back Door, Dealers Warned.

Perpetual "going out of business" sales were banned yesterday by an order of the National Retail Code Authority. Hereafter, the code authority ruled, a "going out of business" sale must be exactly what it sounds like and new merchandise must not be moved in the back door to replace that carried out the front door by customers.

The retail code of fair competition, it was ruled, "shall be interpreted to apply to closing-out sales, going-out-of-business sales, or any sale of like nature, either by auction or otherwise, and it shall be considered as false, inaccurate and misleading advertising and a violation of the code if any merchandise whatever, except as such as may be in transit, on order, or under firm contract, be added to the stock of merchandise which is on hand at the beginning of such sales."

"For years," said Lew Hahn, temporary chairman of the Retail Code Authority, "retailers have been subject to the competition of merchants who advertised that they were discontinuing business and who by such advertising deceived the public into believing they were offering special 'close-out' values, when as a matter of fact such merchants were constantly replenishing their stocks and frequently continued such sales for months beyond the time that would have been required to conduct a legitimate discontinuance-of-business sale."

Hahn said the interpretation has been forwarded to local code authorities with instructions to warn violators and, if violations persist, to bring legal action.

Seizure of Guard And Cash Related

Police Doubt Man's Story; $39,000 Missing.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—While authorities sought Allen Robert Hammel, Brinks Express Co. guard, who disappeared simultaneously with $39,000 from one of the company's armored trucks, a stranger appeared at a police station tonight with the story that he and Hammel had been abducted by several men.

Police were dubious of the story, but took him into custody while they checked his tale.

The man declared he was standing near the express company truck in front of the Bankers Building yesterday, when Hammel disappeared. He said several men seized Hammel and himself and forced them into a car. They released him shortly and speeded away with Hammel, he said.

Judge Delays Augusta Liquor Appeal Verdict

Drys Told Property Loss Must Be Shown for an Injunction.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 16 (AP).—Efforts of drys through court order to prevent the sale of licensed whisky in Augusta have been continued until Tuesday after the court said no injunction against the ordinance would be granted unless the petitioners showed their property would be damaged.

Judge A. L. Franklin, in Richmond Superior Court, heard arguments from both sides and then postponed further discussions of a permanent injunction against licensing liquor dealers until Tuesday, with a decision promised by Friday.

City council recently refused to reconsider its action in setting up a scale of license fees for both wholesale and retail sale of whisky in this city. Georgia had been bone dry since 1907.

Must Show Damage.

The suit for permanent injunction (a temporary one has been granted) was brought by a number of prohibition leaders here. Council said, however, that in no event would it become effective until the first of the year.

Judge Franklin, at the outset of the hearing yesterday, told both sides that no injunction would be granted unless the petitioners could show their property was damaged by the passage of the ordinance.

The judge commented further:

"Anyone who takes out one of these Augusta City licenses is subject for a lunacy hearing.

Can Be Held a Nuisance.

"Anyone who takes out such a license and sets himself up to do business can be enjoined as a nuisance.

"Blind tigers can be enjoined now. There is no need for a jury hearing in such cases."

W. H. Fleming, counsel for those seeking the injunction, contended that the passage of the ordinance would decrease property values and increase the cost of prosecuting liquor cases.

Fleming read a letter he said he had received from Chase Colvin, of South Charleston, Ohio, addressed to the president of the Augusta W. C. T. U., in which the writer said that if Augusta licensed liquor he would change his itinerary on his way South this winter. He said he usually came by way of Augusta.

Van Dosen said he was blinded by the glaring lights of an approaching automobile as he drove under the viaduct.

The Naval Hospital said Secretary Swanson, suffering with a cold, had spent a comfortable night and was resting well.

The condition of Secretary Ickes, who fractured a rib in a fall on the ice, was described by the Naval Hospital as "splendid."

Fate Worse Than Flame Awaiting Coast Moths

Half Moon Bay, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP).—Into a beautiful blue glow all the country moths hereabouts are going to flutter joyously to their doom if Dr. Max Leonard, county horticulturist, has his way.

Dr. Leonard, who said the moths are forever nibbling at the artichoke crops, plans to lure them to death with bright blue lights, strung between the artichoke rows. On each light will be an electrode, which, Dr. Leonard said, is worse than a flame for a moth to flutter against.

An additional several thousand dollars is expected from the Special Gifts Unit, which has yet to report.

Among the larger contributions were received from Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, $750; Bureau of Engraving and Printing Restaurant Association, $400; Herman Goldberg, $100, and James C. Dunn, $100.

Lieut. Eckstrom and Lieut. C. D. Hart were engaged in aircraft battle practice with camera guns. Hart was killed.

Temporary Positions Ruled on by McCarl

Government positions left vacant because regular occupants are on leave of absence can not be filled through temporary appointments without displacing regular employes, Comptroller General McCarl ruled yesterday.

The State Department had asked if it could appoint temporary clerks to Foreign Service jobs whose regular occupant was taking leave prior to resigning. McCarl said, "the appointment of another person, either on a temporary or permanent basis, to a field position occupied by an employe on leave of absence would automatically terminate the appointment of the incumbent."

The Administrator appointed seven prominent architects and scholars to draft plans and direct the survey. Four committee members were selected by the American Institute of Architects at the request of Ickes. They are Dr. Leicester B. Muscle Shoals Group Fights "Propaganda"

Leaders From Six States Form Organization to Support TVA.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 16 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Association at a meeting here formed an organization to promote the program of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

About 200 members of the association from Tennessee, Alabama, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Kentucky attended.

They organized support of the authority after hearing addresses from its three directors, Dr. A. E. Morgan, chairman; Dr. H. A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal.

"We expect to build up an organization to make it impossible for anybody to rock the boat," Will R. Manier, of Nashville, president, told the group.

"A lot of propaganda against this enterprise has been subtly spread around," he explained. "Powerful selfish interests are opposed to the authority's projects."

Lilienthal, in addressing the group, referred to "much misinformation" which he said had been circulated about the TVA projects by "enemies."

He said one of the first policies determined by the authority was "to deal fairly with the public utilities already operating in the valley."

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Hand Out Mission's Gifts

Needy Children to Receive Bags at Fox Theater on Saturday.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has accepted the invitation of Supt. and Mrs. John B. Bennett to assist in distribution of 1,000 bags filled with gifts to needy children at the Central Union Mission's annual Christmas party, in the Fox Theater Saturday morning.

The doors of the theater will open at 8:30 o'clock. Santa Claus, movies and a concert will entertain the children until Mrs. Roosevelt arrives at 9:15.

Each bag will be tagged with a child's name, and in addition to toys and candy will contain some useful article of clothing. Needs of the children are now being ascertained by mission officials.

Several hundred bags will contain shoes and stockings from William Hahn & Co., which will be distributed through friends of the mission. George D. Horning has provided 125 pairs of shoes and 250 pairs of stockings. Bernard Harding will give 50 pairs of shoes and stockings, and the Washington Wholesale Confectioners' Association a like number.

Mission officials also are preparing for the annual Christmas dinner, at which several hundred men and boys will be fed.

Rep. Stalker Owes $129,486

New York House Member Lists Assets of $15,235 in Bankruptcy Plea.

Representative Gale B. Stalker, of New York, had liabilities of $129,486 and assets of $15,235 when he filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in District Supreme Court last week, it was revealed yesterday when he filed a schedule of claims against him.

The representative's home at Elmira, N. Y., valued at $10,000 and carrying a mortgage which with interest amounts to $13,500, was one of the items. A one-half interest in a gas and oil lease in Steuben County, N. Y., and another interest of 10-64th in another similar lease, both of which are of an unestimated value, $185 in cash and wearing apparel valued at $250 are other items.

Income tax of $4,200 and a real estate tax of $400 are among his liabilities. First National Bank, of Canton, Pa., with a $4,500 claim, and the First National Bank, of Elmira, with a $13,500 claim are others.

An item of $26,000 due William O. Duntze, of Garden City, N. Y., and one of $17,500 due O. H. Braman, of Carthage, N. Y., make up a substantial portion of the liabilities. Telephone bills of $365 and a bank claim amounting to $6,900 conclude the major responsibilities. Attorney Wilson L. Townsend represented Mr. Stalker.

New Machine for Predicting Earthquakes

This device, recently perfected by scientists of the Carnegie Institute, makes it possible to learn of earthquakes before they happen. Preliminary jars or "slips" which precede the shocks are recorded on a revolving drum.

Hundreds See Light Clocked At Carnegie

Institution Is Turned Into Hall of Wonders for Visitors.

Carnegie Institution turned itself into a hall of wonders yesterday and played host to hundreds of visitors who came to learn how the speed of light is measured, to observe the effect of tumors on mice and to find that Washington's atmosphere contains about 500 molecular ions per cubic centimeter.

Two floors of the Sixteenth street building were devoted to exhibits, which were demonstrated by a staff of specialists. Most popular, perhaps, was the "ion counter" which counts the minute particles by the billion.

Manning the exhibit on light measurement was Dr. Francis G. Pease, whose recent findings may upset the long-held theory that the light of speed is constant. Experiments conducted by Fred Pearson, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Pease resulted in its velocity being set at 186,277 miles a second.

Dr. A. A. Michelson, whose work they have carried on since his death in 1931, set the figure at 186,284 miles a second.

The development of leukemia, tumors and other malignant growths in mice was shown by motion pictures, charts, specimens and microscopic samples The exhibit emphasized the role of environment in spreading and nurturing these diseases. The influence of environment in the life and death of plant life was depicted in another exhibit.

Secret of Life Traced.

Just what constitutes the difference between living and dead matter in general was treated by Dr. C. B. Davenport yesterday in his annual report as head of the institution's department of genetics. The secret of life, he said, is traceable to the gene.

Besides carrying physical characteristics, like the shape of hands or the length of nose, from one generation to another, genes sustain life by dividing into molecular groups, Dr. Davenport reported.

"Before the self-dividing molecule had been evolved, this was a lifeless world, unless it has been evolved in other planets, they are lifeless still," the scientist said.

"When we understand the structure of the gene, we shall know the essential difference between living and nonliving matter."

Suspended spheres, all in proportion to one another, drew a large share of attention throughout the afternoon and night. They represented the planets, from tiny earth and its tinier moon to the great ringed Saturn, all of them dwarfed by the sun.

Distribution of 33,000 stars was shown by a chart divided into six sections.

Reconstruction of a lost period from such surviving vestiges as a bit of pottery or a stone object was demonstrated in the exhibit on ceramics and Maya history. The archeologist has found that changes in styles of decoration are reflected in the period's pottery, establishing the accuracy of this method of research.

Mayan Causeway Shown.

Another Mayan exhibit was on the Yaxuna-Coba causeway, which is about the same length as the route between Washington and Hagerstown, Md. A survey of the causeway, which is in Yucatan, near Chichen Itza, was completed last winter.

The seismometer, sleuth of earthquakes, was on exhibit a few feet from lantern slides of the last California disaster. This instrument is so sensitive it can indicate where shocks will occur some time ahead.

The exhibition will continue today and tomorrow. Afternoon hours are from 2 to 5:30, evenings from 7:30 to 10:30.

Lectures will be given tonight on "Electricity of the Atmosphere," by G. R. Wait, and "The Interaction of Heredity and Environment in a Malignant Disease," by J. S. Potter and Joseph Victor. Tomorrow night Henry B. Roberts will speak on "Ceramics, a Clue to Maya History," and Dr. Pease will lecture on "Measuring the Speed of Light."

Centers Push New Boys' Club Plans for City

Macfarland Unit, First in System, Will Be for Older Youths.

Organization of a number of new boys' clubs at community centers here will be the first step in amplifying the community center service of the school system, it was announced yesterday.

A club for older boys and young men will be found at the Macfarland Center early next month as the first stage.

Henry I. Quinn, chairman of the Board of Education committee, announced the amplified program after Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, stressed the need for more use of school buildings.

Plans for the community Christmas tree in Sherman Square are completed, Mrs. Peeples declared. Plans are now being made for a special program at the Sylvan Theater when the National Educational Association meets here next summer. The Greater National Capital Committee also is cooperating in these plans, she said.

Policeman Freed In Fatal Shooting

Man Reported Tampering With Car Slain.

Police Private Joseph H. Johnson, 36, of the Tenth Precinct station, yesterday was exonerated by a coroner's inquest in the fatal shooting of John Francis Smith, 20, colored.

Smith was shot December 5 by Johnson in front of the officer's home, 1113 Morse street northeast, when he found the colored man tampering with a spare tire on his automobile. Smith resisted him, Johnson said, and attacked him with a heavy tool.

Acting Coroner A. MacGruder MacDonald said Johnson "acted in line of duty." Smith died at Casualty Hospital Friday.

O'Ryan Named New York City Police Leader

LaGuardia Picks General Who Withdrew From Mayorality Race.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Mayor-Elect Fiorello H. LaGuardia, World War flier, today turned to a World War general, Maj. Gen. John F O'Ryan, to command the city's peace-time army of 19,000 policemen.

O'Ryan, who commanded the Twenty-seventh Division in France, stepped aside as a candidate for the Fusion mayoralty nomination in LaGuardia's favor, and was rewarded by appointment as police commissioner to succeed James S Bolan.

At the same time LaGuardia announced that when the Fusion administration takes office January 1, Fire Chief John J. McElligott, a veteran of many years, will be elevated to the post of fire commissioner.

O'Ryan, who started in the National Guard as a private and 20 years later emerged from the World War a major general, asserted he was "going into this job with every enthusiasm."

"I want to say this to you," said the commissioner-designate, slapping his desk with his hand, "any one who knows men can't contemplate this job without a thrill. And that thrill is concerned with the men in the department."

He brings to the office years of practical experience with men—experience gained in a distinguished military career.

O'Ryan's horsemanship brought him the promotions that placed him in the commissioned officer class, and he rose rapidly. In 1912 he became commander of the State National Guard and he transformed the unit into a model military organization. He ranked as division commander when the guard went to the Mexican border in 1916.

He is an attorney, a student of international affairs and an active participant in civic and public matters. He is a former member of the State Transit Commission and also has headed a large airways corporation.

O'Ryan's appointment was praised by one of his predecessors, Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

PER diem employes in Navy Department are urged by Herbert I. Lucas, president of Lodge No. 80, American Federation of Government Employes, to give more support to the Federation.

"My attention has been called," Mr. Lucas said, "to the fact that many per diem employes do not know of the benefits of the Federation as particularly concern them. The Federation in its fight for restoration of pay lost through the economy act is trying to aid all Government employes, be they per diem or per annum, and any project which the Federation sponsors is of benefit to all employes. I, therefore, urge all per diem workers to work shoulder to shoulder with the per annum employes for the common good of all."

SECRETS.

Annabelle of T. V. A.
Had a secret, dark and deep,
Told her friend in A. A. A.—
Made her promise it would keep

But this friend then went and told
Her best chum in R. F. C.—
Made her promise she would hold
It in utmost secrecy.

For a while she did, the vulture,
But the secret soon revealed
To a friend in Agriculture
Who said that her lips were sealed.

So this friend then told a neighbor
Who swore that she wouldn't tell.
Then from her it got to Labor,
And then back to Annabelle

But when this fair maiden heard it,
She was very much surprised—
Travel so had changed the joke, it Wasn't even recognized!

France Aligns Allies Against League Change

Breech Sought by Duce for Germany Opposed by Little Entente.

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's suggestion that the League of Nations should be reformed met with the answer from France, Poland and the Little Entente today that the fundamentals of the league must not be tampered with.

The Italian leader had asked changes in the set-up of the league in order to permit the entrance of Germany into international disarmament discussions. Today's developments indicated a united front opposing his suggestion.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign secretary of France, and Dr. Eduard Benes, foreign secretary of Czechoslovakia and virtual spokesman for the other two countries in the Little Entente—Yugoslavian and Rumania—emerged from a series of conferences to declare that destruction of the League of Nations would open the doors to war.

They made it clear that any disarmament negotiations between Germany and the five members of the united front would have to be carried on through the channels of the league at Geneva.

They said that even though the fundamentals of the league might be a fragile support for peace, they had been erected painfully and must be maintained.

Paul-Boncour, speaking for his government, said, "We will be the last nation in the league even if all the others withdraw."

The foreign minister said France was willing to talk disarmament with Germany but, together with the Little Entente, it flatly rejected a separate agreement.

"The final result must come from Geneva," he said.

Now that the ties between France and the Little Entente appear definitely solid, Paul-Boncour is expected to go to Warsaw to solidify the cooperative policy with Poland.

Ireland Not to Outlaw New League of Youth

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 16 (AP).—Although an official announcement was lacking, it was understood today that the government of President Eamon de Valera has decided not to outlaw the new "League of Youth" organized by Gen. Eoin O'Duffy.

For the present, it was said, the government's attitude will be that of awaiting a test of the league's legality in a high court action to be initiated by Gen. O'Duffy.

Commissioner Sets the Example

Nightmare

Sleep-Walker Who Stole Auto Gets 4 Months.

Carrington Caster, 45, colored, who blamed somnambulism for his arrest on a charge of attempted automobile theft, will not walk far in his sleep during the next four months.

After hearing evidence that Carrington climbed in an automobile owned by Alvin Beale, of 607 A street southeast, near Beale's home, stepped on the starter and began to roll away, Judge Given sentenced him to four months in District Jail.

"I sleep walks, Judge," Carrington said. He explained his foot found the starter as he slumbered.

A shower of stones from Beale, which smashed two windows, finally brought the automobile to a halt and caused Carrington's arrest, the court was told.

Tuberculosis Death Increase Cited in Drive

Toll 6 Per Cent Higher in Washington, Seal Sellers Note.

Tuberculosis deaths in Washington this year have been more than 6 per cent higher than last year, the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis warned yesterday in calling on all Washingtonians to buy Christmas Seals.

So far this year, 575 persons have died as a result of the disease, compared with 540 last year. This total still keeps Washington fourth from the top of the list of cities rated by tuberculosis mortality.

"Less than half of the fund absolutely necessary to carry on the broader program of protective services has so far been received," said Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, association president. "The annual sale of our Christmas seals is the association's only means of financing this work through the coming year."

More than two-thirds of the persons to whom seals were sent have not been heard from, Mrs. Grant said. She asked that all who are able use the seals now and pay after Christmas if that is more convenient. She would like to have a reply now expressing this intention, she said.

Fire, Starting in Car, Causes $10,000 Loss

Elizabeth City, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP). A fire believed to have started from a short circuit in the ignition system of an automobile caused damage estimated at about $10,000 to the Pasquotank Motor Co. garage here today.

Germany Files Bonds Under Securities Act

Nation Is First to Take Cognizance of New American Law.

First filing by a foreign government agency of securities under provision of the recent securities act was announced by the Federal Trade Commission yesterday.

The German Konversionskasse fuer Deutsche Auslandsschulden, of Berlin, registered a statement of its intention to issue certificates of indebtness in Reichsmarks in lieu of making dollar payments on interest due American holders of German obligations. Interest of $13,500,000 is due on bonds held in the United States for the half year ending December 31.

A German law of last June authorizes tihs Konversionskasse (conversion office) to collect the interest due from German debtors in Reichsmarks. Half the sum is to be converted into foreign exchange, in this case dollars, and paid over to the foreign creditor. The other half will be covered by these certificates, known as "scrip," which bear no interest and specify no maturity date.

Simultaneously, the Konversionskasse announces the Golddiskontbank of Germany is prepared to purchase this scrip through an American agent at half its value. In short, holders of German obligations of all categories will get half the interest due for the current half-year in cash and can obtain a further 25 per cent in cash if they choose to surrender their "scrip."

This privilege is only open to the end of the year. After January 1, the Golddiskontbank will make the scrip available to German exporters under certain unspecified conditions. The Konversionskasse will purchase the scrip from exporters at par in Reichsmarks, which may indicate that something more than 50 per cent of the face value of the scrip will eventually be available to holders who sell to German importers.

It is estimated that a total of 80,000,000 Reichsmarks in scrip will be issued for use in all creditor countries, while 41,015,365 Reichsmarks are already in the hands of the public.

Vatican City Salaries Cut 10 and 15 Per Cent by Pope

Vatican City, Dec. 16 (AP).—Sweeping pay cuts for clergy and church employes in the Vatican City and home were ordered today by Pope Pius.

Those of them who received salaries of from $85 to $170 monthly are to receive 10 per cent less after January 1 and those who receive more than $170 monthly are to be cut 15 per cent.

The slash applies only in Vatican City and Rome.

At the same time was announced the dismissal of all specialized artisans who have been working in Vatican City factories pending the reorganization of the factories and the completion of the new Vatican City industrial quarter.

Church officials explained that the cut is not applied to allowances and will not affect churchmen who do not hold salaried offices.

It applies mainly to the cardinals who are stationed in Vatican City and Rome, since most of them hold such offices. The number of bishops affected is smaller in proportion.

Many high civil officials will be included, from the governor of the Vatican City, who receives 100,000 lire (about $8,000) annually, on down the line.

The churchman and civil employes received their last general pay increase four years ago. Those who have been living in the Vatican City proper since its establishment as a free state have enjoyed exemption from Italian taxes and exemption from high import duties.

Monsignor Alfredo Ottaviani, the Vatican Undersecretary of State, said that those abroad who draw their salaries directly from the Vatican, such as the nuncios and their staffs, were exempted.

Statistics show that the cost of living is only about half as much in Vatican City as in Italy.

10,500 in New York Work After Repeal

Newspaper Figures Do Not Include Brewers.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Repeal of prohibition has given jobs to an estimated 10,500 New Yorkers, a survey by the World-Telegram disclosed today.

This is in addition to 15,000 put to work in the brewing industry when beer was legalized last spring.

It does not include the not inconsiderable number of persons who have found work as salesmen for wholesale houses, workers in bottling plants and in factories producing restaurant and bar fixtures, glassware and such equipment.

Rialto Offers Film Starring Pair From Air

Myrt and Marge Transfer Talents to Screen in Current Picture.

"MYRT AND MARGE," Universal picturization of a story by Beatrice Banyard, starring Myrt and Marge, with Ted Healy and his Stooges, Eddie Foy, jr., and Trixie Friganza. Directed by Al Boasberg. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

From Radioland came the principals of the latest story of stage life, the old story of a show on the rocks and finally floated by communal effort. Thus Myrt and Marge come to the screen, in a picture named for no reason than the stars themselves, "Myrt and Marge."

Though the story is senile and the development of the plot is, to say the least, translucent, "Myrt and Marge" has one distinct advantage over others of its ilk—the show in question could have been put on the stage! That fact, together with the appearance of Ted Healy and his stooges—Howard, Fine, and Howard—raises the picture out of what might have been justifiable oblivion.

The presence of Myrtle Vail and Donna Damerel—Myrt and Marge, to the radio audience—on whom is hung the entire movement of the play is not an especially inspired bit of casting. It does, however, offer their followers the chance to hear them in something slightly less impersonal than a loud-speaker. The association with radio is brought to bear at the very end by revealing that the previous yarn represented a broadcast.

But, to this reviewer, it was the recurrent inanities of Ted Healy and his inimitable stooges that made the intervening action tolerable. Too, the cock-sureness of Eddie Foy, jr., helped, as did the plump presence of Trixie Friganza, the fleeting glimpse of Grace Hayes and one "Sue, called Suzanne for short"!

Three songs of passing merit—"What Is Sweeter," "Isle of Blues," "Draggin' My Heels Around"—composed for the occasion by M. K. Jerome, are used with reasonable effect and to the accompaniment of the Colinette Ballet. Among the others appearing are Thomas Jackson, J. Farrell MacDonald and Ray Hedge.

Heading the list of auxiliary attractions is "Out of Gas," an amusing comedy, with Louise Fazenda and Madge Bellamy, opposite whom are Paul Hurst and Ben Alexander. A release of the cinematized Washington Post feature, John Hix's "Strange As It Seems," and an issue of the Universal News complete the list.

concealed weapons, not to affect sportsmen or householders, and fingerprinting of autoists engaged in interstate transportation. In this connection, Senator Copeland said he personally favored universal fingerprinting, but the recommendation does not go so far.

Means to enable States to extradite fugitive witnesses as well as defendants would be provided in another measure, if constitutional objections can be met. The group also favors modification of the present requirement of unanimous verdicts for convictions, but this would require an amendment to the constitution, and is merely being considered with the other proposals.

In general, closer coordination between Federal and State police is essential to success of a Nation-wide war against crime, Senator Copeland said, adding that personally he favored consolidation of all Federal law-enforcing agencies into "a sort of Scotland Yard."

Under this plan, officers would be recommended by State governors to the special department, at the same time retaining authority in their home States. In this manner the Senator believed jealousies now thwarting law enforcement might be stifled. In all, he thought the force should consist of about 1,000 men, an increase of several hundred over present personnel.

President Roosevelt, who has been outspoken in his condemnation of crime and mob violence, was described by the Senator as deeply interested in the subcommittee's investigation. One of the purposes of his visit was to give the President material for use, if he chooses, in his annual message next month.

'Kidnap' Victim Says He Fled To Dodge Bills

New Yorker in Gallinger for Test After Playing Hoax on Police.

After admitting the falsity of a story he told police Friday night, that he was kidnaped in New York Sunday as he made his way to early mass, Joseph A. Trischitti, 29, was in Gallinger Hospital last night for observation.

Trischitti, who walked into a delicatessen at 1505 North Capitol street and told his tale of abduction, confessed to detectives yesterday that he left New York because he "owed some bills."

In a typewritten statement, Trischitti asserted he came to the District "after spending a few days in Philadelphia to let my beard grow." Later he added he left home because of a "quarrel with one of his brothers."

His intention as first was to commit suicide, Trischitti said. Then he decided to come to Washington.

Trischitti had told of being captured by two men who leaped from an automobile, struck him on the head with a blackjack and took him to a house, where he was "well fed." Later, after a wild ride, his captors brought him to the District, where he escaped, he said.

Lancaster, N. H., Dec. 16 (Spl.). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's personal Christmas tree—a six-foot fir—was chopped down here today by Girl Scouts of the White Mountain Troop.

Tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., at the Portland, Maine, airport, three members of the Cumberland County Council of Girl Scouts will place the tree on board a plane.

Relays of Girl Scouts will handle the tree at each airplane transfer point, and the last group of scouts will personally deliver the tree to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Myrtle Congdon and Scouts Mary Bishop, Betty Morrow and Ruth Sullivan, of White Mountain Troop, the quartet who conceived the idea of sending a New Hampshire tree to the First Lady of the Land, this afternoon gave the tree into custody of three members of Cumberland County Council of Girl Scouts.

This group, Eleanor G. Warjanski of Troop 10 and Doris Reddy of Troop 2, Portland; and Elizabeth Lunt of Troop 2, South Portland, will guard the tree until tomorrow when they will start it toward the custody of East Boston Troop No. 2.

Scouts McCormack, Catherine Laurano and Betty Logan, of East Boston Troop, will at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, send it via the lines of American Airways from Boston to Newark, N. J.

There other Girl Scouts will place it on board a plane of Eastern Air Transport Lines for Washington.

"Second Lieut. Myrtle Congdon. Scouts Mary Bishop, Ruth Sullivan, Betty Morrow, White Mountain Troop, Lancaster, N. H."

In addition to the tag of the Girl Scouts the tree will also bear a tag of Coos County Farm Bureau, reading: "This tree brings a Christmas message from the great out of doors. It's cutting was not destructive."

Woman's Body Found While Curious Watch

Traffic was snarled for half an hour on the Arlington Memorial bridge late yesterday as hundreds of curious motorists and pedestrians watched the Fire Rescue Squad drag the Potomac River for the body of Margaret Bush, 30, colored, of Richmond.

The woman leaped 40 feet to her death. Her cries attracted a passer-by, who summoned aid before she sank. The woman was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital and removed to the District Morgue.

Arlington Court Barred in Case Of Nonsupport

Judge Hedrick Restrained From Action Against L. R. Barghausen.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy in the Circuit Court of Arlington County yesterday issued an injunction against Judge B. M. Hedrick of the County Court, restraining him from taking further action in the case of Lawrence R. Barghausen on a nonsupport charge until the final hearing on a writ of prohibition, returnable in Circuit Court December 27.

The case is the first of its kind since the County Court was established nearly two years ago.

In the writ of prohibition, which was filed through Attorney Richard B. Washington, of Alexandria, Barghausen claims he was tried by Judge Hedrick on a warrant improperly issued by that official on February 2, 1933, charging Barghausen with nonsupport of his wife. He was fined $500, the fine being suspended upon the posting of a bond conditional upon his paying his wife $50 a month for one year.

An appeal was filed, it is claimed, and on November 15, 1933, Judge McCarthy held the warrant was improperly issued in that it was not based upon a petition and that the proceedings before the trial justice were void.

Notwithstanding this decision, it is claimed in the petition, Judge Hedrick on December 15 found him guilty of not complying with the terms of the bond and declared the bond forfeited in the sum of $45.

Veteran a Suicide At Soldiers' Home

Thomas Hatton, 58, Kills Self in Plunge.

Thomas Hatton, 58, veteran of the Spanish-American War, committed suicide last night by jumping from a third-floor balcony at Soldiers' Home.

Hatton, who had been an inmate of the home for several years, had been lodged in detention quarters recently because he took leave of absence without permission. He was not confined to the lodging house, however, and the jump apparently was made from the nearby King Building.

Authorities notified Mrs. Anna Hatton, the veteran's widow, who lives in Dornia, Tex. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Roosevelt Cuts Callers to Scan Week's Accumulation of Mail

Swamped by a week's accumulation of mail—which has become the largest of any American Chief Executive—President Roosevelt yesterday denied himself to all but a few callers in an effort to catch up with his voluminous correspondence.

So high have stacks of letters and telegrams grown that the White House has found it necessary to establish a night shift of assistants, recruited from departments, which began work last night.

Even with this help, the amount of letters requiring the President's attention absorb much of his time, and yesterday he remained in the White House all day to answer correspondence a full week of daily conferences had forced him to put off.

Eleven thousand letters were received Tuesday, it was learned, and even ordinary days bring an average of 6,000 letters to the White House. Many of them concern the NRA and its operations, and are mostly commendatory, it was said.

Only three callers were scheduled during the day. Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles reported he had assumed charge of Latin-American affairs after returning as Ambassador to Cuba. He declined to comment on the Cuban situation, other than the statement, "We are all hopeful everything will work out all right."

The President also discussed taxes with Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and crime legislation with Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman of the special Congressional committee investigating crime.

Doctors' Trial Set Tomorrow At Rockville

State Calls 16 Witnesses Against Pair in Cancer Death of Woman.

Trial of Dr. Harry R. Street, of Washington, and Dr. Sherwood Ferris, of Chevy Chase, Md., on charges of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Cora Britton, will begin tomorrow in circuit court at Rockville, Md.

The two doctors were indicted by the Montgomery County grand jury after a Baltimore coroner's jury held them responsible for the death of Mrs. Britton, whom they treated for cancer.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott has summoned 16 witnesses for the State. The defense, which will be conducted by Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, of Rockville and Leonard Liepman, of Baltimore, has summoned 33 witnesses.

According to Capt. Cissel, well-known residents of the county will take the stand for the defense to testify to successful treatment administered by the doctors in cancer cases. The defense contends the death was due to complications from the cancer and not as a result of the treatment.

The prosecution will attempt to prove that the death came as the result of administration of corrosive salve which ate through the woman's chest and ribs to her lung.

Mrs. Britton, wife of a prominent Mays Landing, N. J., physician, died in a Baltimore hospital several days after she had been taken there from the Chevy Chase residence of Dr. Ferris, where she had been under treatment for two months.

Dr. Britton testified that she had undergone the treatment against his wishes, at a preliminary hearing in county police court.

Lerroux Forms Cabinet Easily; In Posts Today

Republican Group Leans Toward Conservatism; Crisis Thought Over.

Madrid, Dec. 16 (AP).—Alejandro Lerroux, a veteran Spanish statesman, had little difficulty today in forming a Republican party cabinet with definite conservative leanings.

A crisis that grew out of recent elections and involved a short-lived Anarchist-Syndicalist rebellion and the downfall of an interim ministry headed by Diego Martinez Barrios, was believed ended, for Lerroux claimed the support of 300 deputies of the Centrist and Rightist parties.

In addition, the premier designate said 110 parliamentarians of the Agrarian and 50 of other small parties were behind him, thus giving the new cabinet a substantial cortes majority.

Potential difficulties which may confront the new government include the task of holding government supporters together because of widely differing political platforms and parties.

In the opposition there are about 125 deputies at present headed by Socialists and Catalonian Leftists.

New members of the government are Jose Marcia Cid, Agrarian; Jose Estadella, Radical Republican, and Jose Pareja Yebenes, Radical, and Valdes Alvarez, Liberal Democrat.

Rico Avello will occupy the ministry of interior until a state of alarm, invoked when disorders broke out last week and caused about 100 deaths and injuries to many more, subsides. Afterward, it was reported, he will become president of the council of state.

Premier Lerroux announced that the ministers would assume their positions tomorrow and be presented to the president and to congress early next week.

The cabinet follows:

Premier—Alejandro Lerroux.
War—Diego Martinez Barrios.
Marine—Jose Franchy Roca.
Interior—Rico Avello.
Public Works—Rafael Guerra del Rio.
Justice—Alvarez Valdes.
Education—Jose Pareja Vebenes.
Labor—Jose Estadella.
Communications—Jose Maria Cid.
State—Pita Romero.
Treasury—Gomez Lara.
Agriculture—Cirilio del Rio.
Industry—Ricardo Samper Ibanez.

Lerroux announced that Estadella, a physician, had been ordered to create a new ministry of health and probably would become head of that department.

Birds, Fleeing Cold, Die Flying Toward Lights

Mitchell, S. Dak., Dec. 16 (AP).—The city's lights were blamed today for the destruction of more than a thousand longspurs, or snowbirds, found dead in the streets here yesterday.

J. C. Lindsey, superintendent of schools, said they probably had been forced close to the ground by cold and snow and, perhaps attracted by lights, battered themselves against windows and buildings.

Year-Old Cafe Rum Rule Out In New York

License Bars Let Down for New Restaurants by State Board.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The State alcoholic beverage control board today erased the one-year clause of its regulations as it affected bona-fide restaurants.

That's the clause that prevented any restaurant from getting a license to sell liquor unless it had occupied its premises for at least a year.

Edward P. Mulrooney, board chairman, announced the modification.

Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, city health commissioner, continued his drive against poor liquor.

He said a "black list" will be issued next week and a list of names of whiskies found containing flavorings, coloring matter or large quantities of alcoholic dilution. It also will include blends of unaged whiskies, Dr. Wynne said.

His staff is analyzing whiskies picked at random in the city.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that the market has been flooded with brands of liquor that, while not actually harmful in any degree, are unpalatable and not a good drink."

Modifications of the regulations, the first change in the rules, might be made to apply to other restaurants not in business a year, but for which, in deference to the board's regulations, no applications have been filed, Mulrooney said.

He said the one-year rule was adopted with regard to restaurants to prevent the return of the saloon and the "licensing of mushroom establishments falsely called restaurants, but which were organized solely for the purpose of selling liquor."

The committee on alcoholic beverage control law of the Federal Bar Association, which is holding open hearings, today received from Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, a list of proposals in which the Federation said the problem is not so much one of law but of regulation.

Oregon Opens Biggest Plant To Produce "Heavy Water"

10,000 Gallons Yield Two of Double-Weight Hydrogen.

Eugene, Oreg., Dec. 16 (AP).—Establishment of the largest "heavy water" manufacturing plant in the world was announced tonight at the University of Oregon.

This new plant starts with a 10,000-gallon tank of water, in which theoretically there are two gallons of "heavy water," the liquid which resembles normal water, but whose two hydrogen atoms are twice the weight of ordinary hydrogen.

It is not expected to squeeze all the two gallons out of the 10,000 but several quarts are expected to be the yield. The largest previously announced heavy water plant is at Columbia University, which has a pint, with present plans for producing a quart.

An electrolysis method will be used to extract the heavy drops of water. From the tank the water flows into 228 large glass cells, where an electric current breaks it up into hydrogen and oxygen.

During this cracking a little of the heavy hydrogen is trapped. The rest of the hydrogen and oxygen recombines to form water again and to flow back into the tank. From there it starts again to make the round of the cells. By many repetitions the heavier form of water is nearly all trapped.

Most manufacture of heavy water heretofore has been done on laboratory tables. The plant here occupies a corner of a large building, with a 50-kilowatt direct current generator which has an effective amperage of 25,000, in another part of the structure.

The Eugene Water Board presented the generator and the tank, both of which it formerly used in the city water plant. The National Research Council assisted with a grant. The electrolysis method was perfected by Dr. E. W. Washburn of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, which is cooperating. The project is directed by O. F. Stafford, head of the Oregon Department of Chemistry.

Ordinary water weighs 32 ounces a quart. The heavy stuff weighs 34. Although the hydrogen is twice ordinary weight the gain in total water weight is small because oxygen forms the largest portion of the weight.

Santa Freed

Burlington, N. C., Dec. 16 (AP).—Two little girls in Oklahoma, stirred by news that Santa Claus had been arrested here for delivering circulars without a license, secured his release today through habeas corpus proceedings.

Mayor Horner released Santa and wired an apology to the children for not acting sooner.

Spectroscope Traces Crime, Identifying Putty Crumbs

Science Finds Way to Use Clews Too Small to Be Seen.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 9 (AP).—A new field of hidden clews to crime, traces too small to be seen by any other method, apparently has been opened by the spectroscope.

The story starts with a roughly dressed man idly brushing crumbs of putty from his jacket, while standing on the fringe of a crowd of milk drivers in the dim light of dawn watching the police from a radio car investigating a burglary call.

The milk drivers were from a nearby dairy. They were looking at a window of the American Supply Co., which had been broken to gain entrance.

Because the roughly-dressed man was not a milk driver, the police asked him how he happened to be there.

Found Putty on Clothing.

The police were not satisfied with the suspect's story. They took him to headquarters for questioning. There they noted particles of putty on his clothing.

From the broken window they gathered similar particles of putty, brushed loose apparently when the glass was broken. George Keenan, research officer of the Rochester Police Department, gave his opinion that this putty was identical with that on the suspect's clothes.

But to the eye all putty looks more or less alike. So the police sent the samples to the Bausch & Lomb Optical Laboratories. There it was heated to incandescence and its light passed through a prism which broke the rays into the shadows of the spectrum.

In both lots of putty the spectroscope photos showed the presence of tiny amounts of copper, lead and aluminum. Every batch of putty, the scientific sleuths argued, has impurities, which are likely to differ from those of any other batch.

Can Be Traced to Factory.

The spectroscope will identify these impurities and so a few crumbs of putty can be traced back to the place from which it came, or even to the factory which made it.

Confronted with this evidence, the suspect confessed. He pleaded guilty to third degree burglary and petit larceny and won a suspended sentence.

All Japan Yearns and Prays Royal Birth Will Supply Heir

If Fifth Hirohito Child Is Boy, He Will Be 125th Mikado.

Tokyo, Dec. 16 (AP).—All Japan is anxiously awaiting the Gokeiji, "the honorably auspicious event," the birth of an infant to the Emperor and Empress, which physicians of the imperial court have announced may be expected between Christmas and the New Year.

Before the shrines of the national gods and ancestors of the imperial house in sanctuaries of the palace, in hundreds of Buddhist temples and Shinto fanes, and before thousands of humble household shrines throughout the empire, prayers are being offered that the empress may bear a son to be heir-apparent to his father, Emperor Hirohito.

Four Daughters Born.

Four times since the marriage of Hirohito and his consort, Nagako, January 26, 1924, the sovereigns and their subjects have looked forward hopefully to a similar Gokeiji. Each time the baby has been a girl, and a girl can not succeed to the throne.

The empire thus is still without a crown prince, and there is uneasiness, which has deepened with the birth of each imperial princess, lest direct succession to the throne become impossible. In that event the emperor would be succeeded by the oldest of his three brothers, Prince Chichibu, now designated heir presumptive.

In the eyes of orthodox and patriotic Japanese, viewing events against the background of 2,600 years of Japanese legend and history, the birth of this infant, if it be a boy, is of far greater importance than any of the crises that vex the modern world, than the fates of cabinets, of budgets or monetary and commercial policies.

Would Be 125th Mikado.

For such a child would become the 125th Mikado, something more than mortal in the eyes of nearly 100,000,000 future subjects, another of the divine rulers who have carried on the "line unbroken for ages eternal." Orthodox Japanese historians trace this dynasty in one continuous succession from the establishment of the empire of Jimmu Tenno, the first emperor, great-great-grandson of the sun goddess, which tradition assigns to the year 660 B. C.

There has been great activity in recent weeks in the inner precincts of the palace in Tokyo in preparation for the birth of the Imperial child. The lying-in quarters of the Empress, built when her first baby was born in 1925, have been refurbished and reequipped.

Two eminent Japanese physicians are in constant attendance. Early this month two nurses were appointed for the expected princeling, selected from candidates sent to the capital by the governors of seven prefectures, who were commissioned to choose young women "of the best physical condition and unimpeachable moral character" for this post, considered one of great honor.

Empress' Health Excellent.

The empress, who will be 31 next March 6, has been pronounced in excellent health by her physicians.

Of the four girls previously born to Empress Nagako only three are living; the second, Princess Hisa, died in infancy.

If yet another daughter is born to the sovereigns, Prince Chichibu must continue to occupy the uncomfortable position of heir presumptive. Should this modern-minded young man of 31, partly educated in England, eventually succeed his brother, his American-educated princess, formerly Miss Setsuko Matsudaira, daughter of a one-time Ambassador to Washington, will become Empress. According to common report—which officials of the Imperial household naturally will not confirm—Prince and Princess Chichibu, after their experiences of the freedom permitted young people in America and England, find restrictions of their present position rather cramping.

26 Oppose Changing Alexandria Street Name

Twenty-six residents of Harvard street, Alexandria, have signed a petition to be presented to the city council, protesting the proposal made by the Alexandria Park and Planning Commission to change the name of that street to Monroe.

The petition says the name, Harvard, is not a duplication, and there is no reason for a change, and claims the change would cause confusion and expense to residents.

Miners Denied Right To Sue Under NRA

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 16 (AP).—U. S. Circuit Court Judge Louis Fitz Henry ruled today that the Progressive Miners Union could not bring its troubles with the Illinois coal operators into Federal Court under the National recovery act.

Prosecution for violation of the NRA or its industrial codes could be started only by the United States district attorney and not by private parties, the court held.

Beer Revenue Here Reaches $300,000

125,760 Barrels Used in Eight Months; Peak in August.

970 License Applications Not Yet Acted On; 1,560 Approved.

While the Commissioners and their legal advisers wrestled with the job of framing a new liquor law for Washington yesterday, Walter C. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel and chairman of the beer board, made public a summary of the board's operations showing more than $300,000 had been derived from beer taxes and license fees during the eight months from April to November, inclusive.

During that time Washington has drunk more than 125,760 barrels of beer, according to Mr. Fowler's figures. Beer drinking reached its peak in sultry August when taxes amounted to $18,455.28, and the lowest point in November when $11,366 was recorded. Beer is taxed at $1 a barrel of 35 gallons or fractional part thereof.

Revenues from fees during the eight months totaled $96,202 for 1,560 finally approved licenses.

970 Not Yet Approved.

Several licenses have been approved, subject to final check. License revenues were given by Mr. Fowler as follows: On-sale, 530 at $100 each; off-sale, 637 at $50 each; manufacturers, 1 at $1,000; wholesalers, 40 at $250 each; and solicitors, 352 at $1 each.

There are 970 license applications that have not been acted on by the board; 99 have been held up pending improvements ordered on premises; 29 canceled, and 399 denied and revoked, Mr. Fowler reported.

Taxes collected during the eight months were: April, $14,181.35; May, $15,855.23; June, $17,375.76; July, $16,851.52; August, $18,455.28; September, $17,678.37; October, $13,997.01, and November, $11,366.

While the figures were accepted as indicative of what might be expected in revenue from beer, officials said they did not afford a basis for estimating total revenues which might be expected from legalized liquor.

The Commissioners still have to fix the fees for various classes of liquor licenses as well as the tax to be added to the Federal levy.

Federal Tax Plan Awaited.

Suggestions for retail licenses have ranged from $800 to $1,000 as a maximum. No effort has been made to fix taxes. No decision will be made until Federal taxes have been fixed, it was said. Total revenues are expected to be several times the sums realized from the present beer law.

No limit is to be fixed on the number of places licensed to sell beer and other alcoholic beverages. Restrictions are to be imposed against extensive holdings by individuals, corporations and chain stores. Commissioner George E. Allen believes preference should be given to the small merchant.

Grocery stores, drug stores and others would be licensed to sell liquor when they meet other requirements of the proposed license law, it was said by William W. Bride, corporation counsel, who with Vernon E. West, principal assistant, is drafting the measure.

Drafting is not expected to be completed for a week or 10 days.

Park Police Face Forced Furlough

Eight and Half Days Lay-off Ordered in Effect.

Because of a decrease in the appropriation for their department, park policemen will have to take 8½ days furlough during the remainder of the fiscal year, it was announced yesterday.

This will not result in any material decrease in the amount of police protection, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, said. He also pointed out that absences without pay due to sickness might increase the money available and so reduce the furlough necessary.

The furlough will be taken at the rate of two days per month from January through May 15. This will insure that all policemen will be available during the summer. The park police appropriation for the present fiscal year is $170,588, about $10,000 less than in the previous year.

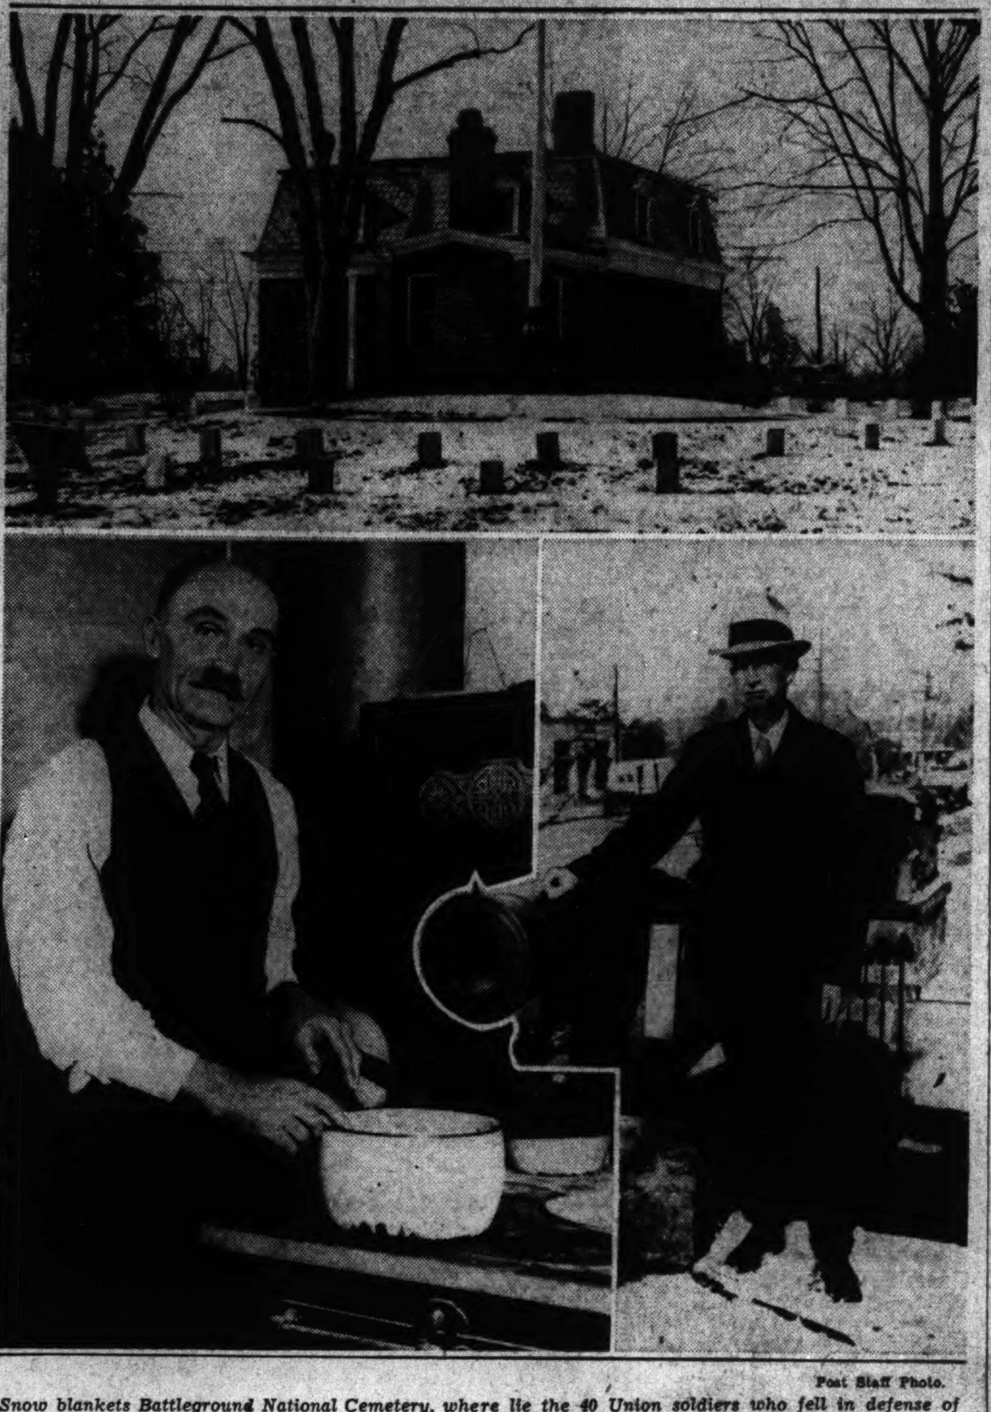
Mrs. Breslau Calls Husband to Court

Asks Judge to Order Him to Tell of Profits.

A petition asking that Henry J. Breslau, 1109 F street northwest, be required to account to his wife, Rose S. Breslau, for the profits of Breslau's, Inc., was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Mrs. Breslau informed the court she and her husband started the business several years ago. She furnished $800 in cash and a promissory note of $2,000. They conducted the business as a joint enterprise, she said, and $500,000 "has been realized" from its operation.

2 Live Veterans Form Graveyard Partnership Guarding Battleground National Cemetery



Post Staff Photo.

Snow blankets Battleground National Cemetery, where lie the 40 Union soldiers who fell in defense of Washington against Gen. Jubal A. Early's Confederate invasion on July 11-12, 1864. Old Fort Stevens, for which the battle is named, is a few blocks south off Georgia avenue. Not a veteran has been buried there since the Civil War, but the reservation is immaculately maintained by Capt. Herbert Turner, shown standing beside a cannon at the entrance, who is superintendent, and William Allen, who is defying an old warning that a watched pot never boils.

Bakery Official Robbed of $750 By Masked Pair

Held Up on Entering Auto to Deliver Receipts to Downtown Bank.

Two masked colored bandits yesterday held up Leslie G. Hudgins, of 1801 Wyoming avenue northwest, manager of the Dorsch Bakery, 641 S street northwest, as he stepped from the shop with money to be deposited in a downtown bank, and escaped with $400 in currency and $350 in checks.

Hudgins, carrying the funds in a small satchel, had just entered his automobile at the bakery when one of the bandits thrust a nickel-plated revolver against his chest.

"Give us the money, quick," he commanded.

When Hudgins handed the satchel to the robbers they backed away.

"Stay still there until we get a cab, or we'll blow your brains out," warned the bandit with the pistol.

The pair ran up the alley. Hudgins called police.

Peter Dorsch, proprietor of the bakery, was to have joined Hudgins on his trip to the bank, but was delayed in his shop.

Parents and Teachers Meet Tuesday Night

Parents and teachers will gather Tuesday night for a dinner at Friendship House, 326 Virginia avenue southeast. Christmas carols will be sung and stories will be told.

The Lucky Friday Boys Glee Club and the Sing Song Glee Club will sing at the Women's City Club at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

All's Well

Cab Driver Returns Rich Find, Gets a Share.

A taxi driver's honesty will make Christmas merrier in two Washington homes.

When John Evans, 808 Nineteenth street northwest, Diamond driver, found a pocketbook in his cab early yesterday, he turned it over to the company.

The purse contained $700 in jewels and $570 in cash—the life savings of Mrs. Anna Sullivan, 1514 Seventeenth street northwest. She had brought the jewels and money with her from her old home in Griffin, Ga.

Police returned Mrs. Sullivan's purse to her. She gave Evans a $10 reward.

Evans didn't know last night just how he would spend his extra Christmas money. He is unmarried and lives alone.

Captain Turner Recalls Visit of Mrs. Hoover, Justice Holmes.

Jurist One of Few Union Survivors of '64 Fight That Saved Capital.

William Allan, who used to be chief gunner's mate on the U. S. S. Dolphin, held a Bermuda onion in one hand and a paring knife in the other.

"No, we don't have many visitors. Except on Decoration Day. Then the school children hold exercises here and flowers are laid on the graves and maybe a thousand or more people come."

Allan is Capt. Herbert Turner's man Friday. Capt. Turner is superintendent of Battleground National Cemetery. And Battleground National Cemetery is the prominent yet secluded, famous but in one sense little known resting place of 40 Union soldiers killed or mortally wounded in defense of the Capital 69 years ago.

Georgia avenue's all-day bustle—the cemetery is situated on that thoroughfare between Van Buren and Whittier streets — is in deep contrast to the tiny, peaceful plot where rest the Blue defenders, who fell in the Battle of Fort Stevens. Thousands pass its gates every day and yet relatively few Washingtonians are familiar enough with the cemetery even to name its location.

40 Fighters Buried There.

Set aside for Union soldiers who engaged in the Battle of Fort Stevens, the cemetery has not had a burial since the original 40 were interred there, except to receive the bodies of four keepers, who died in service. The defenders' graves are in a circle about the flagstaff. A simple headstone over each gives the name of the man resting there.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover visited the cemetery two years ago, accompanied by an elderly gentleman whose erect bearing hinted a military career of another century. Capt. Turner recalled that while showing them around he mentioned that the graveyard was reserved for survivors of the Brightwood Battle that saved Washington and possibly the Union and, so far as he knew, no more were left.

The elderly gentleman promptly interposed: "I am eligible to be buried here. But," and he pointed a steady hand in the direction of Arlington, "I suppose they will put me over there."

He was Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, a lieutenant on the staff of Maj. Gen. Horatio G. Wright, whose Sixth Corps saved the day at Fort Stevens. Justice Holmes had chosen to visit the resting place of his comrades on his ninetieth birthday, March 8, 1931.

The only other known survivor of the battle now living in this vicinity is Maj. Edward R. Campbell, of the Eleventh Vermont Heavy Artillery, who lives at Takoma Park, Md. John M. Kline, of 3811 Gramercy street northwest, was in the Sixth Corps, but at the time the Civil War battle was fought he was a prisoner of war in Andersonville.

But getting back to Allan and his onion: "There," says Capt. Turner, the other half of this unusual graveyard partnership, "is a good cook, a wonderful nurse, a carpenter—he can do anything. Why, I've seen him take a pocket watch apart and put it back together."

Both Served in Two Wars.

The retired sailor, left alone for a short while, had been interrupted in the act of preparing dinner for the "Cap" and himself, which accounts for the onion. He was in the Navy 30 years and served in the Spanish and World Wars. The Dolphin was the Navy Secretary's yacht when Allan was aboard her. He is 56 years old, a native of Paisley, Scotland, and his voice still has a noticeable burr.

Capt. Turner is a bachelor, his companion is married and has three grown children. The retired Army officer is an Englishman, 66 years old and doesn't like women or cats snooping around the premises. Not long ago he had a run-in with an inquisitive matron, who sought to venture past the "office" into his and Allan's living quarters in the rear of the old brown-stone lodge.

Mostly oblivious of goings on atbout them, the former chief gunner's mate and the former captain on Infantry (also a veteran of the Spanish and World Wars) eat, sleep, work, cook, talk and otherwise obey routine independently of the outside world.

Allan tenderly lifted the lid and solicitously stirred the soup.

"Come up and see us again," he said as the reporter departed.

Restaurateur Can't Give Up Eagle; 'I Have None,' He Says

S. G. Hatch, proprietor of the Idaho Cafe, 814 Seventeenth street northwest, who was ordered yesterday to surrender his Blue Eagle, announced he could not comply with the edict because he has never obtained the emblem.

"Although I never signed the President's reemployment agreement, I have complied with the restaurant code," Hatch told a Post reporter.

Hatch was charged by the local NRA compliance board with paying a chef $3.55 for a working week of 64 hours, when he should have been paying a minimum of $12.96 for a 48-hour working week.

"This chef," Hatch explained, "was employed here before I became owner of the cafe. According to the former manager, the sum he was not receiving represented the amount that was being paid directly to an employment bureau to whom he was indebted for getting him the position. Since I became owner of the cafe, I have paid NRA wages and I have intended getting a Blue Eagle."

Hatch was charged by the compliance board with failing to respond to three requests to appear before the group. He said he was away from the city and "too busy" to see the letters.

"My nephew, who was managing the cafe, opened the letters and failed to tell me about them until the last one was received," he said. "Now the Government is spending money sending me telegrams, accusing me of something of which I am not guilty and ordering me to surrender a Blue Eagle which I haven't ever owned."

District May Plan Library For Petworth

$125,000 for Building Is Unlikely, Officials Tell Citizens.

$300,000 of CWA Cash Declared Available for Schools.

Preparation of plans for a public library in Petworth may be made a District C. W. A. project following a conference yesterday between the Commissioners and other District officials and 58 representatives of North Washington civic organizations.

The citizens outlined a program calling for expenditure of $550,000 which they urged be made a part of the local C. W. A. program. They proposed expenditure of $300,000 on the repair and improvement of public school buildings and grounds, $125,000 for a branch library in Petworth and $125,000 for an addition of seven classrooms to the Roosevelt High School.

Building projects, such as the school addition and the library, can not be made a part of the C. W. A. program, Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner said. The Commissioners felt, he said, that appropriations for such projects should be left to the judgment of Congress.

$300,000 for Schools.

More than $3,000,000 probably will be expended in improving school buildings and more grounds under projects already approved, he said.

Preparation of plans for the library would be taken under consideration, the Commissioners agreed during the discussion. Mrs. A. C. Norcross, chairman of the library committee of the Petworth Woman's Club; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations; Edward R. Williams, president of the Roosevelt Parent-Teacher Association; Herman J. Galloway, president of the Macfarland Junior High School Parent-Teacher Assoication, and the Rev. R. L. Wood, pastor of the Petworth Methodist Church, acted as spokesmen for the citizens.

Nearly 20,000 men and women are actually at work or assigned to C. W. A. or C. W. S. projects, Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner and executive officer of the District administration, said yesterday.

Pay checks were given to 15,600 men and women on C. W. A. projects yesterday. In addition, checks were paid to 1,250 on C. W. S. projects. There are, Capt. Clark said, approximately 3,000 others who have been assigned to jobs who will receive their first pay checks this week.

Pay Roll of $188,000.

The pay roll amounted to $188,000, of which $181,000 was pay for those employed on C. W. A. projects. William C. Cleary, in charge of job assignments and the pay rolls, said 10,000 men had been given pay checks at four stations at the District woodyard in an hour and 45 minutes.

The Commissioners were called on to decide a dispute over apparently conflicting authority in the relief administration when Miss Mary Stocking asked who shall have supervision of planning and assignment of women's work at emergency relief headquarters. Miss Stocking was named to that post by the Commissioners on December 5. At that time it was planned to put the C. W. S. program under Capt. Clark. Later this work was put under Leroy A. Halbert, director of emergency relief, and Mrs. Maude Bradbury, who previously had been doing the work, was instructed to continue in charge. Miss Stocking was assinged by Capt. Clark to take charge of sewing center assignments. The question will be settled in a day or so without difficulty, Commissioner Allen said.

Mrs. Howard Lectures Tomorrow at Church

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will lecture at 8 o'clock tomorrow night on "Current Topics" at the All Souls' Unitarian Church parish hall under the sponsorship of the Business and Professional Women's Club of the church.

18 Suits, Overcoats Stolen From Store

Eighteen suits and overcoats and two dresses, having a total value of more than $200, were stolen from his clothing shop at 1027 Ninth street northwest, Frank Townsend, proprietor, told police yesterday.

The thief gained entrance by sticking a bar through the rear window and unlatching the back door, he said. He named a colored suspect.

Boy, 4, Wins Doll House At The Post Benefit Show

Other Children Applaud When Prize Is Given at Theater.

There was joy at The Post Toy and Doll Fund benefit show at Keith's Theater yesterday morning for Emile Kohler, 4, of 1016 B street southeast. He received the gift doll house, made by Andrew Gemeny and donated by him to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, to be given away to some child at yesterday's performance.

The fact that a boy had received the doll house was rather amusing to some of the other lads in the big audience, who wondered what one of their sex would do with a doll house.

Emile knew. He had watched that doll house with shining eyes for a half hour before the show began and it was the fondest wish of his heart that the prize might come to him. For this toy was more than a mere doll house; it had electric lights that went on when you pushed a button, and Emile has many uses for it. The children applauded vigorously when he was named winner. Afterward came a flood of congratulations, picture taking and excitement somewhat puzzling to a 4-year-old, but the big fact remained—the prize doll house was his.

Popular in Neighborhood.

One thing is certain, Emile will be the most popular boy with the little girls of his neighborhood for some time to come.

Emile kindly lent the doll house to The Post Toy and Doll Fund for a week to attract interest to the decorated windows of the headquarters of the fund in the Washington Building, Fifteenth and New York avenue northwest. The house will be handed over to Santa Claus then, with special instructions to have it waiting beside Emile's Christmas tree on Christmas morning.

Despite the rainy morning the children arrived at Keith's Theater smiling and ready to enjoy the movie good things the management of the theater had prepared. The program had been specially arranged.

The shouts of appreciation that went up when film comics came on the screen could have been heard almost to the White House. Then the children settled down to see a film of "Micky" the famous little boy actor playing detective and catching a chicken thief red-handed. handed.

Toys Given As Admission.

Hundreds of toys were added to The Post Toy and Doll Fund by the audience, children and grown-ups alike bringing a toy as their admission. The pile of toys in the Keith's lobby grew higher and higher and S. L. Sorkin, assistant manager, who came personally to see that everything went well, was as pleased as the managers of The Post Fund that such a notable contribution had been made.

Word came from Joe Turner that the benefit match at the New Auditorium Friday night would net around $150 for The Post Toy and Doll Fund. That was good news, for it meant that the fund will then be nearing $600.

Those who wish to give to the fund should do so at once; for in many homes and institutions in the Council of Social Agencies groups, to whom the money will be distributed, people are eager to assist Santa Claus. The shops are crowded and those who must purchase toys for the children should have the money at the earliest possible moment.

Send your gift today to The Post Toy and Doll Fund, Washington Post.

Trio Released In Gang Killing Of Bootlegger

Indictments Against Men Held Since Last Fall Taken Off Books.

The gangland slaying of Charles Jones, 32-year-old bootlegger, became an unsolved crime yesterday when indictments charging three men with the shooting were dropped in District Supreme Court.

Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein went before Jesse C. Adkins, in his chambers, and notified him that the Government had little or no evidence against the three. He asked that the indictments be "nolle prossed" and was given permission to wipe them from the books.

Shortly after that Buford Findley, Michael Vigliucci and Max Peltz, named in the indictments as the slayers, were released. They had been held at the District Jail since last fall.

Jones was "rubbed out" as he stood with two friends in Jackson alley, in the rear of the Government Printing Office, September 18. He died on an operating table in Sibley Hospital an hour later.

Police learned that a fast roadster sped into the alley and cornered Jones. Before he could scurry to safety with his companions, a blast of gun fire was directed at him and the car was on its way before spectators could even see the occupants.

Police believe the shooting was in reprisal for a liquor hijacking laid to Jones.

Man Hangs Self From Cell Bars

Suspect in Larceny Case Dies in Precinct Jail.

Fashioning a noose from his shirt sleeves, a prisoner who was registered several hours before as Casey Jones, 34, of 438 C street northwest, ended his life by hanging himself in his cell at the First Precinct police station late yesterday.

Policeman T. R. Woodson, in charge of the cell blocks, discovered Jones' body dangling from the bars.

Jones was arrested earlier in the day by Private C. C. Wrenn, of Seventh Precinct, for investigation in connection with a larceny.

After attempts to revive Jones proved futile, his body was removed to the District morgue, and Acting Coroner A. Macgruder MacDonald was notified.

Pass Holders May Board Street Cars at Front.

Front loading of holders of weekly street car passes is under study by Acting Chairman Riley E. Elgen of the Public Utilities Commission. Commissioner Elgen said the change had been suggested as a means of speeding movement of street cars.

In Baltimore, it was pointed out, bearers of transfers enter street cars by the front door and give transfers to the motorman. Display of a weekly pass is all that is necessary in Washington and front entry by holders would relieve congestion at the rear of the car incidental to purchase of tokens and change-making by conductors.

Officers of the Capital Transit Co. are pleased with the growing acceptance of the weekly pass. More than 38,000 were sold last week, they said.

1,500 Need Free Lunch At Schools

Ballou Gets Reports From Supervising Principals.

Allen to Push Program for Food Service for Needy.

While Commissioner George E. Allen awaited information on which to base a program for supplying lunches to needy school children, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, studied reports from his supervising principals yesterday showing that at least 1,500 children are in need of nourishment in white schools alone.

Dr. Ballou announced that the reports confirmed his belief that the need for an adequate lunch program is much greater than last year. He said the report would not be ready for presentation to Commissioner Allen until tomorrow.

Principals said they had to gather the information on such short notice that an exact estimate could not be made, and that it is quite possible that the actual needs will be greater than at first suspected.

Allen to Speed Project.

Commissioner Allen said that he would lose no time in starting the program after the facts are given him. However, the program is not expected to be put in operation until after the Christmas holidays as only four more days of school remain before the vacation.

Meanwhile, teachers will continue to see that needy children receive food in the middle of the day. This service supplements the regular mid-morning milk and cracker lunch at which all children who cannot pay for this nourishment are given free service. The teachers take pains to see that the needy children are not made aware of being recipients of philanthropic service.

The pressing situation applies to the elementary schools. Junior and senior high schools, Dr. Ballou said, will be able to take care of needy students through school funds and by allowing impecunious students to earn meals by working in the cafeterias.

The most severely stricken elementary schools are in Georgetown, in Southeast and Southwest Washington, at the Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest, and the Polk School, Seventh and P streets northwest.

300 Need Luncheons.

Approximately 300 children are estimated to be in need of the lunches in the Georgetown schools. The number in the Southeast and Southwest schools was not revealed, but is believed to exceed 600. About 200 children are in need of lunches at the Thomson and Polk schools. Demands in the third and sixth division are expected to bring the total well over 1,500.

Supervising principals showed, in many instances, that facilities are available at the schools for furnishing lunches. They favor the plan of preparing and serving the food at individual schools, rather than bringing it to the schools from a central distributing point as was done last year under a private charity program.

Commissioner Allen is considering the plan of having the food furnished from the Federal surplus foods program, and employing jobless under the civil works service to prepare it.

Speaking over WRC last night on the relation of schools to social conditions, Dr. Ballou said:

"It is recognized now that a child's intellectual progress may be restricted if his physical condition is below par. As a result the public schools are concerned that every child shall have proper clothing, shoes and food and that every child shall have all physical defects adjusted as far as possible in order that classroom progress may not be impaired."

He pointed out that Washington school teachers in one week performed the following services for pupils:

Gave food to 509, provided 3,175 articles of clothing and 440 pairs of shoes, furnished 517 children with car fare, and had shoes repaired for 107.

Christmas for Birds Will Start Thursday

Christmas for District of Columbia bird life begins officially Thursday afternoon, when Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, presses the button that will illuminate an evergreen tree presented by District Girl Scouts at the Sylvan Theater.

The tree will be kept filled with bird food this winter. During the holidays it will be illuminated by floodlights, which will silhouette on either side an imitation bird 4 feet in height. The birds, one a blue jay and the other a cardinal, were painted by R. Bruce Horsfall of Nature magazine.

She said he had not been heard from since he left, and to police expressed the fear he had been robbed.

Police also searched for Anna Calhoon, 17, of Rockville, Md. Her family reported her missing early Friday.

Guggenheim Entries Victor In Horse Show

Firenze Fairfax Awarded Hunter Championship for Fine Display.

By Marian May.

Firenze Fairfax, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's excellent sorrel gelding, proved to Washington Friday night that he was worth $4,000 when he won the title of champion hunter at the Riding and Hunt Club's opening show of the season.

Fairfax, who put up a brilliant performance, is a consistent winner. He took the jumper championship against stiff competition at the World's Fair Horse Show at Chicago last October, and was in the ribbons at the National Horse Show at New York and the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto in November.

Firenze Fairfax easily won the Handy Hunter class out of a field of 20, taking all four 3-feet 6-inch jumps without hesitation, even the whitewashed barrels laid side by side, which drew snorts and distrustful glances from most of the horses. Firenze Marocan won second honors, and Firenze Popover placed third. Miss Betty Couzens' Bean Beetle was fourth.

Entry Wins Pair Class.

Firenze Fairfax teamed with Firenze Marocan to win the Hunter Pair class. Brilliantly ridden by their gracious owner and Danny Shea, Fairfax and Marocan seemed to fly over the course of four 3-feet 6-inch jumps with the finesse of the international champions that they are.

Mrs. Guggenheim's Firenze Popover and Firenze Judge jumped their way into second place. Betty Couzens' pair wedged into third honors, and another Guggenheim pair composed of Firenze Maybe and Firenze Opagemak made a good fourth.

Firenze Marocan, Firenze Judge, and Firenze Opagemak, by the way, were members of the Swedish military team which won the military jumping competition over the United States, Ireland, Czechoslovakia and Canada, at the National Horse Show this year. They were purchased by Mrs. Guggenheim shortly after the National Horse Show.

Miss Louise Herron's Papoose gave an excellent performance to place second to Firenze Fairfax as reserve champion.

Papoose Reserve Champion.

Amid applause, Miss Herron rode Papoose into the blue in the exciting fault and out class, after taking the four 4-foot jumps clean the first time around, and knocking down the first jump in the final elimination. Mrs. Guggenheim's Firenze Opagemak placed second, after touching the first jump in the elimination following a beautiful performance the first time around.

Correctly turned out in pink, Allen Hechter, of Baltimore, guided his Ask Him into first place over four 4-foot jumps in the Corinthian class. Ask Him won the grand championship of the series last year. With one touch against her, Mrs. William G. Hill placed second with Questionnaire.

Although not largely filled, the Open Saddle class was interesting as to quality and performance. The show was held up for a few minutes at the beginning of this class due to a nasty fall received by William Carter, riding the entry of Eugene Meyer. Carter had to be carried from the arena after being thrown and trampled by his excited mount. It was later reported that he had received no serious injury, but he was unable to ride again that evening. The Meyer horse was withdrawn, leaving five entries. Jack Lightning, owned by Mrs. V. G. Owen, captured first place after a stylish, high-steppnig performance.

High Hat Wins First.

High Hat, owned by R. F. Norton and well ridden by Miss Elizabet Martin, out-jumped Miss Margaret Cotter's Impulse for the blue in the Lady's Hunter class, Impulse placing second. Third place went to Mrs. William G. Hill's Questionnaire; and Miss Louise Herron's Papoose went high, clean and fast for a good fourth.

Model hunters were shown stripped, and a pretty picture they made as they were led prancing into the ring, necks arched and tails held high. Mrs. Guggenheim's Firenze Yessiree captured the blue in the baby division—for hunters 3 years old and under. Charlotte, F. M. McConihe's entry was best in the division for hunters over 3 years old.

The members of the show committee, of which J. J. Cotter is chairman, deserve a bouquet for doing so much to satisfy exhibitors and spectators by running off the classes fast.

Hunter Pair Revised.

The summary of events was published in yesterday's Post, except that the hunter pair class was revised as follows:

Hunter pair—Firenze Fairfax and Firenze Marocan, owned by Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, first; Firenze Popover and Firenze Judge, owned by Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, second; pair owned by Miss Betty Couzens, third; Firenze Maybe and Firenze Opagemak, owned by Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, fourth.

5 Now Openly Boomed to Get Utilities Post

G. W. Offutt, D. J. Callahan Latest Proposed, But Roosevelt Is Mute.

George W. Offutt and Daniel J. Callahan have been proposed to President Roosevelt for appointment to the vacancy on the District Public Utilities Commission caused by the retirement last September of Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, retired, chairman.

Disclosure of the names of Mr. Offutt and Mr. Callahan brought to five the list of those known to have been proposed. Others have been suggested but their backers kept their names secret.

William A. Roberts, special Assistant Corporation Counsel, who acts as counsel for the commission, was said to have been placed first on the list before the President. The name of William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations and a veteran of utilities battles for more than two decades, also was among the first to be presented.

Walker in Forefront.

Following the surprise appointment of George E. Allen as District Commissioner, the friends of Ernest G. Walker, who was prominently mentioned for that post, urged him for the utilities commission. Mr. Walker formerly was a newspaper man. For the last several years he has been engaged in supervising his real estate holdings. He has been active in District Democratic politics, although he has not been very closely identified with the Democratic central committee, of which John B. Colpoys is chairman.

Mr. Offutt is a lawyer. He was president and conservator of the Potomac Savings Bank and formerly was president of the Board of Trade. He has taken an active part in discussions of traffic, tarnsportation and other problems related to utilities.

Mr. Callahan was operating head of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. for a number of years. He is a director of the Riggs National Bank. Those opposed to his appointment have objected to his steamboat company experience and the utilities holdings of the bank.

President Roosevelt has given no indication when he will appoint the new utilities commissioner nor the new United States District attorney. Leo E. Rover still has the latter post, although long ago he asked to be relieved.

William A. Collins, assistant district attorney, is said to have the unqualified support of James Roosevelt, son of the President. Mr. Roosevelt has been in charge of handling Massachusetts patronage, and has won a reputation for getting what he wants.

Garnett Seeks Bench.

The name of Leslie Garnett, law partner of C. C. Carlin, of Alexandria, Va., has been thrust more and more to the fore in private discussions in local political circles, despite the fact that Mr. Garnett was one of a delegation of lawyers who called on the Attorney General to approve the candidacy of David Pine. Mr. Garnett seeks a place on the bench of the District Court of Appeals.

Ralph A. Cusick, who was active in the Roosevelt campaign, still has the unwavering support of the local Democratic organization. President Roosevelt has ignored the organization, however, in each District appointment so far. Lucien Vandoren has the support of a group of lawyers. Charles J. Arth, who formerly was assistant district attorney under John E. Laskey, also has been proposed. Mr. Arth, however, has said that he would take the post only if Mr. Vandoren could not get it. Others actively seeking the place include John P. Bramhall and Levi David.

Wide Hunt Planned For Kidnap Band

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Plans for a Nation-wide hunt for a gang of kidnapers, every resident of the 48 States to take part, were outlined today by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

Chief of those sought were W. A. Hendrickson, former county highway policeman; John (Handsome Jack) Klutas, reported to have undergone surgery to alter his features and destroy his fingerprints; Charlie (Ice Wagon) Connors, and Basil Hugh Banghart, the latter two classed by Courtney as Chicago gangsters.

Fluctuations in Light Speed Fail to Hit Einstein Theory

German Comments on New Tests Undertaken by Dr. Michelson.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The New York Times quotes Dr. Albert Einstein as saying the speed fluctuations disclosed in the A. A. Michelson speed-of-light measurements announced Friday hardly would have anything to do with foundations of the theory of relativity.

Dr. Einstein, now at the Institute for Advance Study at Princeton, N. J., added, however, that the results "probably will be most interesting from the geophysics standpoint if it really should be true that they are due to deformations of the earth's surface.

"The new apparatus of Michelson, which was used recently in Pasadena," he explained, "measures with remarkable precision the time that light needs to go from a designated point on the earth's surface to a point B and back again to A in a practical vacuum.

"The striking point in the results obtained by the Michelson tests is that this time, if measured at different periods of the day, is not constant, but varies by a little less than 1-10,000 of its value. It seems, therefore, that either the distance A to B, or the speed of light, are subject to small changes, depending on the time of day at which the tests are being conducted.

"It is almost impossible to find the reason for this phenomenon in the variability of the velocity of light, so that the results of the Michelson tests hardly will have anything to do with the foundations of the theory of relativity."

Radical Bishop Quits Christian Nazi Movement

Hitler Acts to Unite Youth Organizations Under State Control.

Berlin, Dec. 16 (AP).—Bishop Joachim Hossenfelder and other extreme leaders of the Nazi German Christian movement resigned tonight after a hot all-day session attended by German Christian leaders from all parts of Germany.

Two factions, those who, like Bishop Hossenfelder, insist on anti-Semitism in the church and who would relentlessly oppose all who refuse to join their ranks, and the moderates who would support the less radical policy of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, clashed during the meeting.

Crisis Expected Tuesday.

Which will triumph was conjectural tonight. Probably the issue will not be settled until Tuesday when a new national board emerges.

Meanwhile, leaders of the Evangelical youth movement, which embraces a million and a half young Protestants, on reaching Berlin today in response to a summons by Reichsbishop Muller, found to their chagrin that the bishop had left town and had deputized a subaltern to receive their answers to an ultimatum.

This order forced the submission of the youth movement to a plan for coordinating it with the Reichs youth movement and alleged this was the express wish of Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Control Given as Issue.

Leaders of the Evangelical group said they do not oppose the Nazi state regime, but do object to its control by the Reichs youth leaders.

Leaders of the Evangelical Young People's Movement, among them many Nazi German Christians, declined to negotiate with Mueller's deputy and demanded instead to be shown the text of Mueller's treaty, which provides that Protestant youths be in the hands of Evangelical leaders two days a week, and two Sundays a month, and in the hands of leaders of the Reichs youth movement a like period.

Guy F. Phelps, Famed Author, Dead in Idaho

Former Resident Here, 62, Also Was Well Known as Lecturer.

Death of Guy Fitch Phelps, 62, former Washington author and lecturer, in the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank Colthorp, in Boise, Idaho, Friday, was reported by the Associated Press here yesterday.

Until seven years ago he had occupied a house at 206 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

He was a writer of international reputation, having published a number of novels, serials and books of poetry. After serving with American forces during the World War, he lectured on classical exhibits in the Louvre.

Mr. Phelps was born in Coffeyville, Kans. In his boyhood, his family moved to Idaho, where he grew up in mining camps and on cattle ranges.

After leaving the District in 1926, Mr. Phelps lived in Salem, Oreg., and at the time of his death maintained a residence in New York.

Old Phone Books Take Tales Of Heart Pangs to Oblivion

Every One, It Seems, Has Something to Write While Talking.

You scribble, I scribble, we all scribble—on telephone directories. Well, maybe not all of us, but judging from some of the scrawls in the space reserved for "numbers frequently called" in the fall-winter 1933 directories now sold to junk dealers, Washingtonians seemed to find a great deal to "scribble" about, as well as a great many numbers to "call frequently" during the past season.

One dog-eared directory certainly must have hung on a nail in a young men's boarding house. It pictures the nervous etchings of swains who evidently trembled on the verge of asking for the first date, for the curlicues and triangles resulting from telephone communications bear silent witness to a certain lack of composure over and above the irresistible urge to write or draw while talking, a habit common to most of us.

Experts have claimed to be able to read character from such hieroglyphics, but no expert is needed to imagine, at least, that another directory on which was scrawled "red satin" indicated that at least one young man found the right girl at the other end of the line and that she accepted the invitation to go dancing.

A struggling artist found inspiration somewhere in the telephone directory, for in addition to Herr Mouse there's quite a pretty lassie gazing wistfully forth from what is left of a cover.

And so it goes. Figures, of the digests and other varieties, depict everything from family budgets to the pro-rated cost of a case of beer. Maybe it was liquor. Maybe the family milk fund, for, from the look of it, surely some child did more than pause and cast longing glances at the tearable sheets within the once whole covers of this directory. Or, perhaps, as Christopher Morley might put it, "My friend saw fit to give it to his mastiff as a teething ring."

But lest we go a little too strong along the thoroughly human impulse to put ourselves in writing on this and that—the gentle art of defacing, as behaviorists would term it—there are not a few in this collection of out-dated directories which appear to have been kept carefully from dust and daylight, and, doubtless, prized highly and rightfully for the indespensible information they contained.

Incidentally, not all out-of-date phone books hang from downtown buildings as starling scarecrows. Most of the directories are sold to junk dealers as a precaution against wrong numbers.

Small Lumber Firms Failing, Johnson Told

Representative Fulmer Claims Only Big Mills Benefit by Code.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, yesterday charged in a letter to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, that the lumber industry's NRA code is forcing small Southern operators out of business because of its hours and wages provisions.

Fulmer made public an exchange of correspondence he has had with Gen. Johnson in an effort to have the code modified. He took up the matter on complaint of South Carolina mills, but said a similar situation exists throughout the entire Southern pine lumber belt.

Referring to the higher wages and shorter hours provided in the code, Fulmer wrote Johnson that the "large operators can and are permitted to fix prices to take care of these additional expenses—the very thing they have always wanted to do in the face of the anti-trust act."

Claims Discrimination.

"In fact," Fulmer wrote, "these small mills would have been closed long ago if the Department of Justice had permitted the large industries to form the same type of combination that they have been permitted to form under the NRA program."

In answer to Fulmer's first letter of protest, Gen. Johnson cited a resolution of the lumber code authority November 16 exempting the small operators from all provisions of the code except those governing the hours of work and the mining wages.

Fulmer, in answer, said these were the provisions the small operators who saw lumber for their local trade are not able to meet.

Johnson's letter said, in part:

"It is not the intention of the National Recovery Administration to acquiesce in any undue hardship on any small operator, but it must be realized that the deplorable conditions in the lumber industry, brought about by excess production and ruinous competition, must be corrected and the restriction of production and the establishment of cost recovery prices are absolutely essential if timber, one of our most valuable natural resources, is to be conserved."

Sees Bread Line Gaining.

Fulmer said many small mills work local farm labor, adding:

"These laborers are paid more for mill work than they receive on the farm. But not in line with what you propose under the code.

"If you permit the authority to enforce articles VI and VII (those governing hours and wages) without modification, you not only are working a hardship on these small Southern sawmills but you are putting them out of business and are placing thousands of employes in the bread line.

"In the meantime, you are stirring up a revolution with farm laborers whose wages are much lower."

Defunct Bank To Be Opened

Stock Being Sold Under Reorganization Plan.

Rapid progress toward reopening Industrial Savings Bank as the new Industrial Bank was reported last night following a largely attended enthusiastic meeting of its reorganization committee, team captains and workers at the Twelfth Street Branch, Y. M. C. A.

Stock sales under the new bank plan providing capital of $50,000 and $15,000 surplus, were reported highly satisfactory. With the opening of the new bank approximately 35 per cent of deposits of the old one will be made available. Further dividends will be paid as liquidation progresses.

Names of directors and officers will be submitted for approval of Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

Jesse H. Mitchell is chairman of the reorganization committee and Prof. Jesse W. Lewis, acting head of the department of commerce and finance, Howard University, is campaign director. W. H. C. Brown, president and conservator of the old bank, is working with the committee.

Keep Up Standard, Baker Warns U. S.

Living Status "Necessary to Civilization."

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP).—The necessity of retaining the American standard of living throughout the present depression as a guarantee to future civilization was stressed today by Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, former Secretary of War.

Baker spoke before the first general meeting of the Boston Emergency Campaign of 1934, in which 1,200 persons participated.

The American standard of living was defined by Baker as that which gives the American citizen a large enough income for living a little more. The government, he said, would take care of food and shelter, but the private agencies would have to supply the necessities which have built up the standards of civilization known as American.

48,000 Acres Given to Trees

Six Months' Planting by CCC, PWA Exceeds Any Previous Year.

(Associated Press.)

More than 48,000 acres of National forests have been planted to trees in the last six months.

Most of the work was done by the Civilian Conservation Corps, with some planting by men paid from Public Works Administration funds.

The Forest Service said yesterday the six months' total was greater than the acreage planted in any previous year. In 1932 only 24,900 acres were planted.

Plantings by the C. C. C. were distributed as follows: California region, 23 acres; Pacific Northwest, 920 acres; Eastern region, 1,800, and Lake States, 35,302. Public works plantings included 4,000 acres in the northern Rocky Mountain region and 5,516 in the Lake States.

Johnson Deaf To Consumers' Demands Here

Refuses Conference's Plea for Representation on Code Authority.

(Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery Administrator, last night refused the demand of a group attending a consumers' conference here for consumer representation on code authorities, but told them he would accept all the advice they had to offer.

To show he meants this, he asked two members of the conference to come to Washington for a few weeks as his special assistants.

They were Leon Henderson of New York, who had made several emphatic statements and demands, and F. J. Schlink of Washington, N. J.

Climax of Conference.

The meeting with Johnson was the climax of the conference on consumer problems which opened Friday under the aegis of the consumer's counsel of the Farm Administration and the Consumers' Advisory Board of the NRA.

The first session, at which was outlined a program calling for county consumers' councils charged with activities ranging from price investigations to symphony orchestra encouragement, was an open one.

At subsequent closed sessions the Federal consumers' bodies came in for criticism, and yesterday afternoon Mrs. Mary H. Rumsey, chairman of the advisory board, suggested that all Government representatives withdraw while a program was formulated.

Johnson Gets Demand.

The result was that 15 members of the conference presented to Johnson last night the demand for specific consumer representation on the code authorities.

Johnson told the group it was criticizing the NRA "conjecturally" when it had not seen fit to do so factually at a public hearing called for December 15, but postponed to January 9.

"The way you can help me most," he said, "is to see that people who are not cooperating in the program do not get the patronage."

Don't ask "him" what he wants for Christmas. Take that question to the "Holiday Hints" appearing every morning in the Classified Columns of The Post.

Football Officials Recommend 4 Major Changes in Playing Rules

Robert Tells Colonials to Seek "Natural" Rivalry in Football.

Name Ed Clark Captain; Leemans Is Voted Most Valuable.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY was urged to schedule nearby "natural" rivals and "not go too far away" for its football games by Assistant Secretary W. L. (Chip) Robert, guest speaker at the Colonials' annual football banquet last night before an enthusiastic throng of 300 alumni and undergraduates.

Himself a former football star at Georgia Tech, and chairman of its athletic board, Mr. Robert commended the Colonial gridmen for their excellent work during the past season which saw them defeat such ranking teams as Auburn and Washington and Jefferson.

He dwelt at length on the merits of the game and its importance as a character builder and the standard by which a school is measured. Robert said that after giving the matter serious thought he had arrived at the conclusion that it was best for a school to specialize in one or two branches of sport when its athletic budget prohibited the promotion of all sports.

Suggests Track Team.

"I understand you don't have a track team here at George Washington," he said. "It is the easiest thing in the world to have, and meshed with football, with perhaps basket ball in between, I believe would be an important factor in the development of good football teams."

Robert emphasized the importance of building up strong rivalries with teams in the same territory. Battles royal between rivals were not injurious in any manner he said. Nor would a few wrecked dormatories hurt.

"Fifty years from now it will all be forgotten," he advised.

The absence of Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the university, who was confined to his home with a cold, and of Coach Jim Pixlee, who departed Friday for a schedule-making trip through the Midwest and to the coast, precluded any possibility of announcing the 1934 schedule.

Dr. Daniel LeRoy Borden, toastmaster, announced however, that the Colonial schedule included two major Southern opponents and one major Western opponent. The rest of the card would be on par with these three games, he predicted.

Clark Named Captain.

Ed Clark, a tackle, hailing from Covina, Calif., was elected captain of the 1934 team. "Tuffy" Leemans, half back, was awarded the Omicron Delta Kappa Fraternity trophy awarded the most valuable player.

Maryland Plays Indiana in 1934

Game With Hoosiers at College Park in '35 Listed.

THE University of Maryland will meet the University of Indiana at football in 1934 and 1935, it was learned yesterday. Next season's games will be played at Bloomington, Ind., on November 17, with the Hoosiers due to appear at College Park in 1935.

H. C. (Curly) Byrd, Maryland athletic director, is expected to make the official announcement of the home-and-home series next week when the entire schedule is to be announced.

Maryland's 1934 schedule is virtually complete with one open date still listed. Kentucky and West Virginia are considered the likeliest opponents for that date.

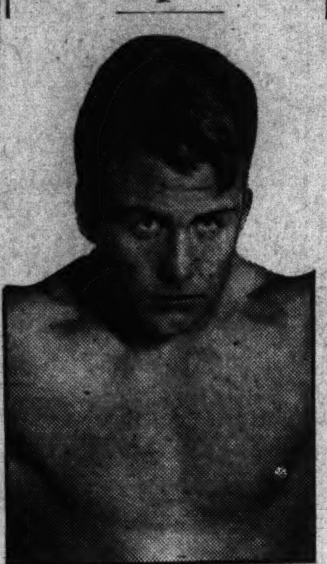
Hurt Hockey Ace Faces Crisis Today

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP).—Irvin "Ace" Bailey, injured Toronto hockey player who was operated on for a skull fracture Thursday, was reported resting comfortably late today. Bailey today exchanged a few words with his nurse, although Dr. Donald Munro, who operated on Bailey, said there was no change in his condition.

Bailey was injured when knocked to the ice while playing with the Toronto Maple Leafs against the Boston Bruins Tuesday night.

Dr. Munro said the injured man had held his own throughout the night and that the next 24 hours would tell whether the emergency operation had been successful.

Madcap of Mat



EVERETTE MARSHALL.

Alienists Will Determine Marshall's Mentality Before Lifting Ban.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16 (AP).—The State Athletic Commission ruled today that before young Everett Marshall, Colorado cowboy turned wrestler, can enter a Pennsylvania ring again, he must be examined by three alienists "to determine whether his mentality is such as to justify his reinstatement."

The commission suspended the challenger to the heavyweight wrestling title indefinitely and ordered him to forfeit half of his purse for his pummeling activities which broke up his match with Jim Londos, of Greece, Pennsylvania-recognized champion, last night.

Suffering from what his seconds described as a mental lapse, the Coloradoan swung on the referee, Ben Paul; his manager, Billy Sandow, and police who rushed into the ring.

Not Wholly Responsible.

The commission's action was taken at a special meeting. It ruled the members felt "more drastic action should have been taken in this case."

"But in view of the testimony submitted by the two commission physicians," the ruling said, "at the time Marshall engaged in the altercation with the referee, he was not wholly responsibile for his actions, due to a body slam administered by Londos, when Marshall struck his head with great force.

"It is the judgment of the commission that before Marshall can wrestle again in Pennsylvania, he

Court Thriller Lost by C.U., 34 to 30

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 16 (Spl.).—Three games in as many nights proved too great a hurdle for the Catholic University basket ball stars and Coach Forrest Cotton's courtmen, who had trimmed Duke University's Southern champions and St. Joseph's College on successive nights, lost to the La Salle College passers tonight, 34 to 30.

Foul shooting of a better variety gave La Salle its advantage just as the Cardinals' charity counters overcame St. Joseph's. Each team tonight tallied eight field goals as Catholic's defense didn't appear any way near as strong as it was against St. Joseph's.

All the thrills were packed in the second half, the score being deadlocked on seven different occasions during the 20 minutes. Capt. Eddie White, Philadelphia, thrilled his followers with a pair of field goals in the first minute to tie the count at 20-all.

Then there were ties at 21, 23, 24, 26, 28 and 30 before Milt Blitz caged two fouls and Charley Mosicant added a field goal at the final gun. The four winning points were tallied within the game's last minute, just as the Cards had produced two goals to beat the Hawks last night.

Shields Rated No. 1 Player In Tennis

Tops '33 Rankings With Allison Second; Vines, Now Pro, Ignored.

Miss Jacobs Tops Women as Mrs. Moody Loses 11-Year Honor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—Frank X. Shields, giant New York youth whose come-back was a sensation of the tennis season at home, and Helen Hull Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., victor by default in her memorable match for the national women's singles championship with Helen Wills Moody, are the official nominations for No. 1 American ranking for 1933.

Their selection, Shields for the first time in his meteoric career, and Miss Jacobs for the second successive season, was made public today by the ranking committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The complete national ranking list is subject to ratification or change by the annual convention of the U. S. L. T. A., to be held February 10 in Pittsburgh.

Vines Not Ranked.

H. Ellsworth Vines, jr., of Pasadena, the 1931-32 national champion and No. 1, is omitted entirely from the men's ranking list, due to his action in turning professional before the close of the calendar year. This follows the precedent established by the U. S. L. T. A. in 1926 when Vincent Richards, a rival of Big Bill Tilden's title for the top ranking position, was unranked because he joined C. C. Pyle's professional troupe. A minority attempt at that time to rank Richards among the amateurs was defeated and no issue over Vines is likely to be raised.

The recommended 1933 men's ranking is featured otherwise by Wilmer Allison's retention of the No. 2 position, the failure to rank Sidney Wood better than sixth and a number of striking shifts, including the jump of Bryan Grant, jr., diminutive Atlanta star, from No. 13 last year to No. 7. Grant overthrew Vines in the National championships, and has been regarded by experts as one of the most improved players in the country. He advanced over such stars as Frankie Parker, Keith Gledhill and George M. Lott in the 1933 shake-up.

Shields Davis Cup Hope.

Shields earned his top-ranking position by sensational play in the late-season invitation tournaments and by reaching the semifinals of the National-singles championship. His highest previous ranking was No. 2, below Johnny Doeg, in 1930. Shields is regarded as the Davis Cup hope for 1934, with Wood as a doubles partner. Wood's location on this list may lead to controversy.

Mrs. Moody is placed at No. 2 in the women's singles, marking the first time since 1922 that she has failed to win the top position, if ranked at all. In three previous seasons, 1926, 1930 and 1932, Mrs. Moody was not placed on the National list because of her absence from the American women's singles tournament. The former champion held the No. 1 position seven times.

Women's Singles.

1. Helen H. Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif.
2. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, California.
3. Alice Marble, San Francisco.
4. Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, Mass.

6. Josephine E. Cruickshank, California.
7. Baroness Maud Levi, New York.

Westrope Shut Out For Day at Epsom

Houston, Tex., Dec. 16 (AP).—For the first time since the Epsom Downs meeting opened on November 30, Jack Westrope, the country's leading jockey, was shut out today.

His total winning mounts for the year remained unchanged at 296, still four shy of the 300-mark no American jockey has touched since V. Powers rode 324 winners in 1908.

Chicago Bears Hosts Today To Giants

20,000 Expected to Watch Pro Grid Teams Fight for World Title.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 (AP).—The New York Giants go into another World Series tomorrow. This time it's football.

The Giants, led by Harry Newman, Michigan all-American quarter back star in 1932, will battle the Chicago Bears for the National Professional Football Championship at Wrigley Field, with the prospect of more than 20,000 seeing the opening kick-off at 1:45 p. m. (Central Standard Time).

The teams qualified for the title conflict by winning their respective divisional titles in the league, the bears conquering in the West and the Giants in the East.

Are Evenly Matched.

The elevens are so evenly matched defensively that the game probably will be decided on mistakes or "breaks," with the chances that it will develop into an aerial battle.

The Bears' back field will be made up of Bronko Nagurski, former Minnesota star, at full back; Jack Manders, another former Gopher, at right half; Keith Molesworth, who learned his football at James Millikin University, at left half, and Carl Brumbaugh, former University of Florida star, at quarter back. In the Giants' back field, playing behind Newman, will be Ken Strong, New York University, right half back; Bo Molenda, a one-time Wolverine, at full back, and Dale Burnett.

Grange Also to Play.

Also missing from the Bears' starting line-up will be Red Grange, the famous "Galloping Ghost" of Illinois. After nine years of battering on a professional gridiron, Grange no longer possesses the speed that carried him through a Michigan team for five touchdowns, but he will get into the game before it is over, because he is still rated as one of the most dependable backs on defense.

It will be the third meeting of the rival teams this season. The Bears won the first game of the series, 14 to 10, by opening up with a spectacular last-period rally, while the Giants won the second, a field goal by Ken Strong being the margin of victory.

The probable line-ups:

Chicago Bears.	Position.	N. Y. Giants
Hewitt	L. E.	Badgro
Lyman	L. T.	Grant
Carlson	L. G.	Gibson
Miller	Center	Hein
Kopcka	R. G.	Jones
Musso	R. T.	Owen
Carr	R. E.	Flaherty
Brumbaugh	Q. B.	Newman
Molesworth	L. H.	Burnett
Manders	R. H.	Strong
Nagurski	F. B.	Mclenda

Funeral Services For Dick Glendon

West Harwich, Mass., Dec. 16 (AP). After brief funeral services at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Richard J. "Rich" Glendon, Columbia crew coach, was laid at rest today in the Catholic cemetery at Harwich center.

Glendon, who with his father, "Old Dick" Glendon, Navy crew coach, was widely known in the rowing world, was found dead of a gunshot wound Thursday after he had been missing overnight. A medical examiner's report said his shotgun apparently had been discharged accidentally as he climbed a fence while hunting.

Friends from New York and Cape Cod attended the services, in which the Rev. Dennis Spykers officiated. The bearers were neighbors and friends from this section.

Former Wife of Baer Yields $10,000 Gems

Los Angeles, Dec. 16 (AP).—Jewels she said were valued at $10,000 were turned over to an attorney today by Max Baer's former wife, Dorothy Dunbar, to satisfy a replevin action brought against the boxer-actor and the stage and screen actress in Alameda County Superior Court.

The jewels, an engagement bracelet studded with diamonds, emeralds and sapphires; a wrist watch covered with diamonds, a platinum dinner ring and the actress' engagement ring, were given her by Baer.

The suit was brought by Harriett S. Isaacson, an assignee for the Davidson & Light Jewelry Co., of Oakland. It was brought on the claim that Baer had purchased the gems, along with other items of jewelry, on a lease contract on which a balance of $2,200 was due.

Mr. Baer a Better Bearcat At Crooning Than Fighting

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (U.P.). Max Adelbert Baer admitted tonight that he is even a better actor, crooner, and dancer than fighter, after making two successive debuts in one week, once at a night club and once at a theater.

Baer put aside his boxing regalia early in the week, slicked down his hair, and stepped out as entertainer at the Casino de Paris. Last night he put on his act at Loew's State Theater. His act goes something like this:

"Ladies and gentlemen (smiling his best movie actor smile): I trust you'll bear with Baer. I have a little number here that I'm going to attempt to sing if you'll bear with Baer."

The orchestra strikes up the tune and Baer croons lovingly into a microphone the words of "Dinner at Eight." Baer also can sing another song—a chorus of "I'm a Lucky Fellow."

After displaying his naturally rich barytenor voice Baer steps back from the mike and goes into his tap dance routine, aided by eight chorus girls.

For comedy relief, the theater management has provided George Givot, known as the "Greek ambassador of fun," who calls Baer various names, such as Mr. Wolf, Mr. Elephant, Mr. Leopard, Mr. Lion, and titters. Baer, in this part of the act, just titters.

Baer does this four times a day and gets $3,000 a week for it.

Ruppert Denies Releasing of 2 Yankees

Refuses to Say, However, If He Plans to Drop Sewell, Pennock.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—On the word of Col. Jacob Ruppert, who owns their contracts, Herb Pennock and Joe Sewall are still members in good standing of the New York Yankees, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

During the recent baseball meetings in Chicago word came from an official Yankee source that the two veterans had been unconditionally released, but Ruppert today denied that was true while declining to discuss whether such action was planned. Ed Barrow, Yankee's business manager, added a like denial.

"Only Barrow and I are authorized to speak for the Yankees," Ruppert said, "and neither of us announced the release of Pennock or Sewell. They are both still members of the Yankees. I don't care to say what we may do about them later."

Are 10 Year Men.

Pennock, the best left-hander of them all in his day, and Sewell, one of the American League's outstanding infielders for several years, both are "ten year" men and entitled to their unconditional releases when the Yankees no longer desire their services.

Neither was of any great service to the Yankees last year and the Chicago report was accepted generally. Even with today's denials, baseball men believed some such action was planned even if the actual releases had not been signed as yet.

Pennock, at his home in Kennett Square, Pa., said he had received no direct word from the Yankees and was as puzzled as others over the conflicting reports. He professed a belief there were still several games left in his good left arm.

McCorry Pilots Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Bill McCorry announced last tonight he had signed a contract to manage the Albany Baseball Club of the International League next year.

He signed a one-year contract.

Mackenzie Selection Brings Rift at Congressional Club

AMID clashing statements of Congressional Country Club officials, affirming and denying the appointment of Roland Mackenzie, former amateur star, to the post of club professional, one member of the board of governors yesterday resigned and the charge made that Mackenzie's appointment was "railroaded" through a special meeting.

Despite the statement of one member of the board of governors in attendance at the meeting, who declared that a resolution had been passed directing Club President John C. Koons to offer the post to MacKenzie, formerly a star amateur here, Mr. Koons denied that Mackenzie had been offered the post to succeed Sandy Armour, the incumbent pro.

Effective at Once.

The resigning member of the board who asked that his resignation be "effective at once," yesterday declared that Mackenzie's selection was "railroaded" through the meeting by friends of the former amateur. This board member, one of the original founders of the Congressional Club, declared that notice of the special meeting conveyed the impression only that a report of the economy committee of the club was to be considered.

The board's action in selecting a professional at a special meeting with only 10 or 15 members of a board of 36 present was deemed an "inexcusable affront" to the membership of the club.

Absent from Friday night's meeting of the board was Henry J. Richardson, chairman of the golf, greens and grounds committee, who said he was unaware of Mackenzie's selection until the following day.

President Koons declared that no negotiations had been entered into with Mackenzie, who was among more than 200 applicants for the position. The opposition to Mackenzie's choice was founded on the belief that several better known professionals of more experience are available for the post.

May Not Take Post.

Doubt was expressed yesterday that MacKenzie would accept the post inasmuch as the club's proviso denied him social and club privileges at Congressional. He would be denied the privileges of the dining room, the billiard room and other recreational rooms, and would not be permitted to live at the club as has been the custom of club pros.

Mackenzie's father, Albert R. Mackenzie, former Middle Atlantic golf champion, yesterday doubted that his son would accept the position at Congressional under the conditions of the offer. Mackenzie's salary would be $1,200 per year, half his earnings from giving lessons, with no income from the golf shop, which concession the club would take over, according to reports.

Mackenzie is now en route to California to compete in winter tournaments. Sandy Armour, resigning professional, will join his brother, Tommy Armour, at the Boca Raton Club in Florida after New Year's.

Wynne to Take Grant, Aid, to Kentucky Job

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 16 (AP).—Coach Chet Wynne, whose Auburn eleven won five and lost five this season, will take Porter Grant, his end coach, with him as an assistant at the University of Kentucky.

Grant was an outstanding end for three years on Auburn teams, and was credited with developing the smart wing play that marked the Plainsmen eleven this year.

No official announcement has come from Auburn regarding a successor to Wynne, who leaves January 1, 1934, for Kentucky.

Four Chicago Bears Selected On All-American Pro Team

CHICAGO, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—The real All-American team—the eleven outstanding players of the country's fastest football league—is named today by the United Press.

The squad was selected with the aid of four of the National Professional League's coaches. They were George Halas, Chicago Bears, Curley Lambeau of Green Bay, Paul Schissler, Chicago Cardinals, and "Lone Star" Dietz of Boston.

Revised Code Would Aid Offense

Urge Return of Posts to Goal Line; Blocked Kick Rule Hit.

Would Count Forward Pass Into End Zone Only as Down.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—First of football's official family to swing into post-season action, the members of the Eastern Association of intercollegiate football officials today suggested four important changes in the playing code.

There were no formal recommendations, no record votes among the 200 members of the association who gathered for their annual meeting here, but it was the sentiment of the men who run the game on the playing field that something should be done about the balance of power they agreed rested now with the defense.

Their suggestions to be laid before the rules committee during its winter meetings by Bill Crowell and A. W. Palmer, both members of the committee from the ranks of the officials, were as follows:

Four Recommendations.

1. A forward pass grounded in the end zone shall not be ruled touchback except when the grounded pass comes on fourth down.

2. Increase of the sideline zone, within which a downed ball is automatically brought in from the sidelines from 10 to 15 yards.

3. Clearing the complicated rule governing blocked kicks so as to permit either team to recover and advance a blocked kick that does not cross the scrimmage.

4. Return of the goal posts to goal line.

Speaking for the officials, Tom McCabe, of Boston, new director of athletics at Holy Cross, said the officials always had advocated rules that would tend to make football safer, and at the same time increase its attractiveness as a spectacle.

"The officials were not unanimous on any of the suggestions," he said, "but it was the consensus of opinion that changes should be made to strengthen the power of the offense, offset the balance that now lies with the defense.

Would Bolster Attack.

"A change in the forward pass rule would tend to bolster the offense where the going is toughest—in front of the opponents goal line; Teams now refrain from passing there because of fear of losing the ball on a touchback.

"We also feel that the success of the sideline zone established for the first time this year suggests still greater improvement in that direction by increasing the zone from 10 to 15 yards. Even with the ball brought out ten yards, few teams ran from there toward the sidelines, giving the defense a chance to concentrate its strength toward the center of the field.

"Strong sentiment was expressed that it would be wrong to change the kicking rule because of the improvement last season in the handling of punts. But it was the consensus that the rule governing blocked kicks should be changed to permit either side to recover and

7,000 Watch Finn Filly Triumph

March Step Is Second, Integrity Third in Distance Race.

Six Favorites Beaten; $52,903 Wagered by Record Crowd.

By Walter Haight (Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 16.—Martin Finn, of Washington, saw his Gloritone win today's feature race at this mountain race track, and probably was the most surprised person who witnessed the race. Finn, whose racing stable consists of Gloritone and Silverdale, had lost faith in the daughter of Porter—Slow and Easy.

"That little mare can do everything but run," said the Irishman before the race. "She eats as much as ever and works good, but isn't much on the afternoon when my money is riding." And Finn should know whereof he speaks, because he is a great believer of trying to chase his horses home with his own greenbacks.

Second-Place Complex.

Of course, Finn knew that Gloritone held some chance of winning. Recent races showed that the filly was finding herself. However, Finn had no idea that Gloritone would win in such a decisive manner. The little filly, which has had a second-place complex throughout her racing career, not only won, but was home seven lengths in front of March Step. In fact, the diminutive Haines had so much horse under him that he could not make the margin closer.

Gloritone was rated along, while March Step and Phantom Legion worried each other in front of the field but, given her head, the filly bounded past the tiring leaders, and the race was over.

7,000 See Races.

The largest crowd of the meeting, some 7,000, saw the races run over a slow track. The weather was cloudy and threatening, but extremely warm. Favorite players again were routed, only one choice winning. The mutuel handle of $52,903 failed to touch the high of the previous Saturday.

Black Dreams, a son of Flying Ebony, the Derby winner, scored a smashing victory in the first race, contested over the 5-furlong course, getting home a half length in advance of Rock Sun, a 16-1 shot, which beat Most Always, a 33-1 proposition, a head for the place. Knapp, who has taken over the role of leading jockey, gave the winner a rousing ride, shadowing the front runners to the stretch before collaring Rock Sun in the final drive. Eyota, the favorite, was never prominent.

Big Show Winner.

Trainer Preston Burch, of Washington, resumed his winning ways in the second race when he saddled Big Show and the juvenile went out to lead a field of nine from start to finish. At that, the representative of Mrs. T. H. Somerville was the winner only by a head margin from Peedeeque. Hoursend was third. Peedeeque followed Big Show most of the way and barely missed taking the purse in the last jump. Peedeeque was a lukewarm favorite and Big Show was third choice at an $11.20 pay-off.

Something always happens to the favorite at Charles Town, so the wise boys say. In the third race, at a mile and a half, Dark Star, the public choice, was shuffled into last position soon after the break and was cut off every time Jockey Beecroft tried to move up. In the meanwhile Redivivus and Mainsheet fought it out for the purse, with the decision going to the first named by a half length. Pintail was a hard-running third horse. Redivivus rewarded with $9.80 for the usual deuce.

Nyack Is Victor At Jefferson By Head

Makes Good After Losing Four Races; Beats Out Toe Dance.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Dec. 16 (AP).—Frank Semremba's Consistent Nyack, after four ineffectual starts which found him fighting it out at the finish but never the winner at the current meeting, finally got up in time to win a purse in the fourth race today.

The gelded son of Noah got his head in front in the last stride to beat Toe Dance. The latter was a half-length before Camp Boss, one that was largely responsible for a ten-minute delay at the post. The winner was a $3.20 for $2 favorite and he ran the 6 furlongs in 1:13, four-fifths under Lester Balaski. A fair-sized crowd viewed the sport.

Breaks in Front.

Toe Dance had a lot of speed and he very nearly stuck it out in a blanket finish. The mare broke in front and drew into daylight advantage. Camp Boss forced the running but tired in the stretch. Nyack, well out from the rail, staged his customary strong bid in the last furlong and saved the form players with a last mighty lunge on the wire. Hot Shot and the slow starting Black Comet were right there at the finish.

BLACK DREAMS, away in the first flight, was rated within easy reach of leaders. Came to outside when straightened out in the stretch, and under strong handling, wore ROCK SUN down. Latter was sent into short lead immediately after the break, rated in front for the entire trip, could not withstand the challenge of the winner. MOST ALWAYS raced closest to early pace, was wearing ROCK SUN down at finish. FREE ADVICE, outrun in early stages, finished strongly. Holland was timidly handled while racing on the inside. KINLAD bore out entering the back stretch.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:08. Off at 2:10. Winner, Mrs. T. H. Somerville's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG SHOW, $11.20, $6.80, $3.40; PEEDEEQUE, $4.00, $4.40; HOURSEND, $6.00.

BIG SHOW, away forwardly, was sent into command at once, saved ground on the inside for the entire trip, but was hard urged to stall off PEEDEEQUE. Latter closer than usual throughout, raced under restraint and finished with a belated rush when let down. HOURSEND, within easy reach of the leaders while racing under restraint, could not improve his position. BABY JOHN, impeded shortly after start, improved his position quickly, but flattened out when called on. LAURETTA NASH bore over sharply following the break and impeded BABY JOHN, TRIOLET and HUPPY. BLUE FOAM was never prominent.

THIRD RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:33. Off at 2:33½. Winner, G. L. Harris' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REDIVIVUS, $9.80, $4.80, $3.60; MAINSHEET, $3.40, $3.00; PINTAIL, $4.20.

REDIVIVUS raced lapped on the leaders for the first mile, took command when leaving back stretch, shook off MAINSHEET in the drive, but had to be urged to retain his advantage. MAINSHEET broke slowly, entered contention sooner than usual, took a brief lead after a mile, continued well, but could not get to the winners. PINTAIL, reserved far back in the early racing, responded well when asked.

THE DAILY DOUBLE ON FIRST AND THIRD RACES PAID $210.20.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:57. Winner, C. J. Weasley's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHRYSMUTE, $9.60, $4.40, $2.40; LAUREL MISS, $4.00, $2.80; LUCK IN, $2.60.

CHRYSMUTE, slow to find her best speed, worked into close contention on the inside, disposed of SUN DORA, came to the outside of LAUREL MISS in the stretch and easily drew away. LAUREL MISS, alertly away and showing good speed, shook off SUN DORA on the turn, but was no match for the winner. LUCK IN raced evenly and had no excuses. SUN DORA tired from her early efforts. The others were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:22½. Winner, M. Finn's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLORITONE, $8.60, $4.20, $3.00; MARCH STEP, $3.60, $2.60; INTEGRITY, $3.20.

GLORITONE, reserved from the fast early pace of the leaders, easily moved to the front when called upon and drew away without difficulty. MARCH STEP went out to set a fast early pace, shook off PHANTOM LEGION, but his early efforts proved too much. INTEGRITY, slow in early pace, moved up in closing pace.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:49. Winner, B. A. Hall's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MODERN TIMES, $11.20, $5.60, $4.60; SWAGGER STICK, $7.80, $5.00; NO MISTAKE, $4.00.

MODERN TIMES, reserved from the early pace, gradually moved to the leaders on the back stretch, came to the outside to take command and was drawing away at the end. SWAGGER STICK displayed good early speed to take a comfortable lead, gave way to the challenge of the winner, and was hard urged to hold NO MISTAKE safe. The latter raced in the first flight all the way, but could not improve his position.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:12½. Off at 4:12½. Winner, E. C. Gray's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THERMOPYLAE, $4.20, $3.60, $3.20; OLD FIELD, $10.20, $4.20; KAFFA, $6.80.

THERMOPYLAE, far out of contention for the first seven furlongs, saved ground wherever possible until entering into contention, slipped through on the inside of OLD FIELD when approaching the home stretch and, stoutly handled, was up nearing the finish. OLD FIELD, going smartly improved, went into an easy lead after five furlongs and then continued stoutly when vigorously shaken up when the real issue came. KAFFA, prominent from the beginning, held on well and was easily best of the others.

Workman at Home Forgets Horses—Even Omits Pictures

A happy family scene at the Workmans, Sonny Workman, premier Washington jockey, is pictured with Mrs. Workman and daughter, Jean, who is already learning the rudiments of the saddle.

Method of Whipping Is Essential to Success in Saddle, He Says.

By Bill McCormick.

IF you think all jockeys spend their time out of the saddle thinking horses, talking horses, and bunking in stables with horses, come take a peek at Sonny Workman on a day off the track.

Not even a picture of a lowly plow horse adorns the walls of Washington's leading horse-booter's tastefully appointed Connecticut avenue apartment, to which one is admitted by an obsequious colored maid after running the gantlet of flunkies in the spaciously awe-inspiring lobby below.

Sinking gratefully into an almost too comfortable tapestry covered chair in the Workman drawing room, one is flanked by perfectly harmonized pictures, draperies, and furniture. Hu-m-m-m . . . somewhere there must be a discordant note, perhaps in a blaring radio! No, even that is playing so discreetly as not to be noticed unless one searches it out.

A Different Workman.

A sturdy, well-fed looking individual bounces jauntily into the room with all the poise and assurance of one to the manor born. Perhaps Workman's secretary, maybe his press agent.

"I'm Workman," says the jaunty one during the pefunctory, introductory handshake. "Sorry to have kept you waiting."

This can't be Workman. Workman is only a boy—a slight, paperweight sort of boy, clad in gayly colored silks, who is ordered about by owners and sometimes scolded, or even spanked by stern, paternal stewards. This can't be Workman, but it is. What a whale of a difference a few yards of gayly-colored silk make!

Sonny is soon joined by Mrs. Workman, a comely brunette. An insistent tugging at the coat tails of Papa Workman proclaims the presence of Jean Workman, aged 3, who is loudly demanding to know if the accompanying photographer is the Big Bad Wolf.

"No Darlin', he is not the Big Bad Wolf, but he has come to take your picture," vouchsafes Mamma Workman. Then follow fruitless efforts to induce Jean Workman to pose for pictures.

"A high-spirited filly," grins Papa Workman, "I think I know how to get her interested." With that Sonny produces a pair of riding boots. Jean quickly removes tiny white pumps, and is soon struggling to place minute feet into Daddy's not-so-much-too-large boots.

One remembers having several questions to ask the premier jockey. One asks them.

Strength Not All.

"Strength doesn't play such an important part in being a good jock," says Workman. "A strong wrist helps, of course, but it isn't everything. I've heard people say that the reason Filipinos don't make good jockeys is because their wrists and hands are so small and weak. I don't believe that. I think they don't make good riders because they don't get the chance. I never heard of one trying to be a jockey and I don't think they have many horses in their country.

"I always whip a horse from behind, and not on the flanks. The idea in whipping a horse is to make him run away from the sting. If you whip on the flanks, the horse is more inclined to run side-ways than ahead. If you whip from behind," says the informant, demonstrating with a typically Workmanish gesture, "the horse will naturally run ahead, to escape the pain. Of course, you've got to know when to whip, which means you've got to know your horse. I guess that's all there is to being a jockey."

Horse and Rider . . .

By Marian May.

WITH the coming of winter, new activity makes its appearance in Washington riding circles. With all due consideration of the faithful riders who brave freezing weather rather than miss their regular canters in the parks, and the many who forget wintry blasts when there is a prospect of a good fox chase, particular attention is called to the Riding and Hunt Club's series of monthly horse shows and Fort Myer's weekly riding exhibitions.

The biggest feature of the Riding and Hunt Club's series which got under way Friday night will be the choosing of a grand champion hunter from winners of individual shows. Thus, Firenze Fairfax, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim's famous sorrel gelding, will be a contender for the grand championship of the series. The Fort Myer exhibitions will be held each Friday afternoon, commencing shortly. It has appeared in former years that the ultimate aim of these exhibitions must be to prove to the public that no one can ride a horse better than a soldier can. If that is the aim, it is certainly well accomplished. Spectacular drills and stunts requiring the utmost ability and skill from both horse and rider furnish thrills galore

Different Horses.

For the benefit of those who may be in doubt, Mrs. William G. Hill's Questionnaire and Frank Burrows' Happy Time, well-known local show ring performers, who scored at the Riding and Hunt Club Friday night, are not the same as the two race horses by those names that may be remembered for outstanding performances on the track two or three years ago. Happy Time, the race horse, is now a stablemate of Sir Greysteel, Tred Avon, and 100 other thoroughbreds at the 2,500-acre breeding and training establishment of Sylvester W. Labrot on the Chesapeake Bay near Annapolis. There are few if any that have been race horses, as the latter are too excitable for the show ring where manageability and conduct are as important as performing ability and conformation.

Superb taste in riding togs was evidenced recently in an attractive habit seen in Rock Creek Park. It consisted of a light brown tweed coat, pale yellow turtleneck sweater, dark green breeches and brown hat and boots. Pale yellow string gloves and a small brown crop completed the outfit. A smart, practical combination—excellent for hacking and informal riding events.

Questions and Answers.

Q. Please name and describe the gaits.—Mrs. L. B.

A. The common "three-gaited" horse has a walk, trot, and canter. The walk, of course, needs no description. The trot is the next faster gait, and may be a slow "jog trot" or a very fast trot. In the trot, the alternate legs move together, i. e., the left front leg and right hind leg go forward, strike the ground, and are picked up at almost the same time. Likewise, the right front and left hind legs move together. The canter is a slow gallop. (A very fast gallop is termed "run," and has virtually the same leg motion as the canter.) In the canter, the two front legs move almost together as do the two hind legs. Whichever front leg the horse happens to be "leading" with, however, strikes the ground an instant before the other does.

The "five-gaited" horse has a singlefoot and pace in addition to the gaits described above. The singlefoot gait is self-explanatory. The legs all move separately, one hoof striking the ground at a time. In other words, the singlefoot is intermediate between the trot and pace. The "running walk," "fox trot" and "rack" are variations of the singlefoot, the former two being a slow, and the latter a fast singlefoot. In the pace the left front legs move together and the right front and hind move together, in the manner of the left front—right hind and right front—left hind motion of the trot.

Rassling Show On Thursday Aids Poor

Clinstock Faces Garibaldi and Masked Marvel Meets McDougall.

FOR the second consecutive show, Monsieur Joe Turner's pachyderms of the mat will do their ear-massaging and bone-bending in the interests of Washington's needy children, for the District Playground's Santa Claus Fund will receive a percentage of the financial spoils.

With the date shifted back to the regular Thursday night assignment, another large crowd is expected to turn out at the Auditorium to witness what is promised to be an all-star card.

Although only two bouts have been listed so far, indications are that these alone will net four, judging from what happened at last week's show, for Jim Clinstock, the giant Indian who takes on Gino Garibaldi in the feature, and the Masked Marvel, who clashes with Scotty McDougall in the semifinal, each carries a fighting manager along with him.

One More Chance

REDS BARRY, local heavyweight, who has staged more comebacks than the starlings, stages another on Tuesday night when he meets Salvatore Rugirello, giant Italian heavyweight, at Portner's Arena.

Around the Ring . . .

By Bill McCormick.

Barry, Barry, quite contrary,
How does your fighting go?
You knock 'em dead out on the road,
But here in town—just so.

CRISTOFO COLOMBO DUNDEE, the Norfolk Italian-Scotchman, is running about these days buttonholing at random anyone who will listen to him extol the fistic prowess of his new champion—Ken Overlin.

This is Signor Dundee's first champion and he's making the most of it. He has almost had many champions, but that's another story —a second story. A second story that Signor Cristofo relates so often that he is sometimes referred to by brother members of the boxing fraternity as a second-story man.

Signor Dundee's heartrending pursuit of a champion began in the early Philadelphia days just after he adopted the name of Dundee, and the Norfolk Dundee plaid. To avoid confusion with the famous Baltimore overweight Dundee clan, Signor Cristofo adopted a plaid of black and blue as contrasted to the old gold and platinum plaid of the Baltimore Dundees.

Armed with his new Scotch name and plaids, which he figured would have a very good effect when it came time to do a little close bargaining with promoters, Signor Dundee fared forth to conquer the ring racket, with a well-devised plan in the back of his head.

His plan was of great simplicity. An illustrious antecedent of his, the original Crostofo Colombo, had astounded the court of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella by making an egg stand on end by cracking it. He, a descendant of the great man, would make money by teaching eggs to stand other eggs on end by cracking them.

One of Best at Present.

One of his first pupils was a certain Tony Falco. After a brief course of instruction, Cristofo decided that Tony would never be a champ and so they parted company. Chris was right. Tony has never been a champ, but he is now one of the best fighters of his weight among the current crop.

Soon another fighter placed himself under the protection of the Norfolk Dundee black and blue tartan—this time a pint-sized individual dubbed "Midget." Dundee had some difficulty teaching the midget to crack an egg, but he moved about so rapidly that he didn't get cracked himself, so the Old Maestro was satisfied. However, when Dundee removed from Philadelphia to Norfolk he left his diminutive charge in other hands, and since then Midget Wolgast has captured and clung tenaciously to the flyweight crown.

Since then Dundee has been unsuccessfully searching for another championship prospect, which he never located until Ken Overlin won the welterweight championship of the New York National Guard a few weeks back. After all the trials he has undergone it is small wonder that Dundee is elated over managing a champion and that he brooks no insinuation that Overlin's new title isn't so very important.

"Huh!" snorts Signor Dundee when light is made of his champion's title, "Huh! There's 21,432 men in the New York National Guard—and my Ken Overlin is the champion middleweight of them all. Huh! That's a swell title. Well, anyway, it's a swell title."

Ye Olde Ringworme just phoned to ask why we don't print the Portner fight results in Braille. So the judges can find out who won.

Barry Battles Rugirello at Portner's

Rugged Foe Has Brilliant Record; Capital Fighter to Train in N. Y.

DONALD "REDS" BARRY, who is gradually usurping the position once held by Marty Gallagher as champion "comebacker" of local rings, is making another comeback appearance at Porter's Tuesday. In this, his umpteenth local comeback, Barry is not being tossed as an opponent an animated punching bag, but a fast moving, stiff punching 225-pound mountain of coordinated flesh in the person of Salvatore Rugirello.

Unlike most ring giants, the six-feet-four Rugirello punches instead of pushing. His ponderous punches, while often wild, are well-timed and delivered with an elastic snap rather than maulingly. His record bears striking testimony to his punching power.

Irving Fights Edell.

An interesting six-rounder will find Henry Irving, the erratic Northeast noggin-knocker, attempting to subdue one Benny Edell of New York. Although still a youngster, Edell has fought many of the better ringmen with better than indifferent results.

Another six offers Big Boy Smith against Walter Kirkwood. Smith is best remembered for having thumped his way to a draw with Henry Irving at Twin City last summer. He will be facing a much improved Kirkwood, a Kirkwood who at his best, is generally rated just about the best middleweight extant in these parts.

Two fours between Baby Charles and Joe Raspi and Roma La Bona and Wild Bill Howell will round out the bill.

Maryland Five Opens Against Michigan Tomorrow as Boxers Face Richmond

Sparse Week In College Sports

American U. in Debut Tomorrow Against State Normal.

G. W. Quintet Host to Geneva in Battle Here Friday.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND'S twin bill tomorrow night at Ritchie Coliseum features a slim week of collegiate athletic activities in the District this week. Michigan stacks up against the Old Liners in basket ball, and the University of Richmond's squad will have it out with the mitt men.

Tomorrow also marks the opening of American University's court season. The Eagles meet Maryland State Normal, which is batting .500 against Washington opposition.

No more games are scheduled until Friday, when Geneva plays George Washington in the Colonial's gym. Gallaudet's game with Wilson Teachers College winds up sparse card. Catholic U. and Georgetown are not scheduled to play again until after the holidays.

Buscher "Brother Act."

Maryland will present a brother act against Michigan. Bernie Buscher, sophomore guard, succeeded in ousting George Weber from a starting role, and will team with his brother, Bucky, a veteran. Rufus Vincent, center, and "Spider" Chase and Bob Snyder, forwards, all seasoned campaigners, round out the quintet.

With Roy Yowell, Al Rabbitt and Weber in reserve, Coach Burt Shipley is well prepared for any emergencies. But one man Shipley could use very nicely, Vic Willis, a 6-foot 4-inch center, will not be available until the latter part of January.

Michigan and Iowa tied for third place in the Big Ten Conference last year, and reports from the Midwest say that the Wolverines are just as strong this season. Capt. Fred Petoskey, guard, who was named on a majority of all-America football teams, is regarded as one of the cleverest defensive players Michigan has ever had. He and Fred Allen, center, are the only seniors on the first team. Al Plummer, a junior, George Ford, a soph, forwards, and Russell Oliver, a junior and guard, complete the quintet which will take the floor.

Ring Strength Unknown.

Maryland's boxing team is an unknown quantity. With only three experienced men back from last year, prospects are not rosy for a winning season. Harry Carroll, 135-pounder; Lyman McAboy, 165 pounds, and Stewart McCaw, heavyweight, represent all of the experienced talent on the team. The other positions will be filled by green but rugged men. Harmoney has announced a line-up of Joe Harris, 115 pounds; Dick Babcock, 125 pounds; Johnny Evans, 145 pounds, and Frank Hawkins, 175 pounds, to assist the trio named above in opening the season.

Maryland's basket ball team will not play again until December 30, when Indiana visits Ritchie Coliseum. The boxers do not go into action again until January 13, at Lexington, where they encounter V. M. I.

High School Golf Classes Proposed

Golf will become a part of the daily curriculum at Washington high schools, if a plan recently worked out by Al Houghton, Kenwood professional, is approved by the District Board of Education.

Houghton has suggested to school officials that courses in golf under the supervision of capable professionals be taught in the classrooms, with credits for these classes to be given students just as they are in physical education and music.

Nothing like this has ever been attempted before in the United States, and Houghton confidently believes the idea will "go over big," in view of the increasing popularity of golf. Houghton said he had already approached high school authorities relative to the installation of the golf classes, admitting that they liked the plans. The matter of finances, he stated, seemed to be the big drawback at present.

Santa Claus Jump, 1933

By Paul Gallico.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, Long Island, Dec. 16 (Spl.).—Santa Claus came out of the school hangar woggling a little because when you walk with a seat parachute strapped to you it kind of kicks you in the pants every step you take. Santa wore a chute on his back and one under him. Santa was taking no chances; neither was Pilot No. 27820. He was sitting on a chute himself eying the ripcord nervously.

Santa woggled up to the Orange and Black Travelair biplane. He was a lean and cadaverous Santa by the name of Joe Crane. He had long white whiskers and white hair and a red cap and red suit and he had red cheeks and a red nose. He said: "We'll take 1,500 feet and come down the road and then over the field. Cut her down when I give you the signal. Keep your nose down to keep up speed. I'll climb out on the wing and give you the nod when I'm going." He climbed into the front seat and I poured the soup to her, rammed the ship joyously through a terrific puddle that just missed soaking Santa. We took to the air.

We flew into the wind and over the field and Santa signaled for me to cut the gun. Then he stood up and climbed out onto the wings. I never saw a man look so relieved in my life. It must have been like a reprieve to him. He looked pleased and delighted to be leaving. His whiskers blew out nobly. His red hat waved behind him. He suddenly said: "O. K., Paul," and dove off head first.

I got the ship upon a wing in time to see the pilot chute leap out of the bag and the rest of it follow like a shirt tail. Then Santa was swinging free on the end of his parachute. He held something in his right hand. I got her up on a wing again and slid closer to see what it was. It was his whiskers.. Santa must have been afraid that I would come after him and ride him some more. He had pulled whiskers, ripcord, and all.

Circled Santa and watched him settle. Came around to land, decided to run her over the wires. Missed the runway and made magnificent landing square in a small lake made by the rain and melted snow.

Taxied ship up to the line at Administration, found Santa and photographers there but no kiddies. Photographers were milling and running about shouting: "For God's sake where are the kiddies? Why didn't they have any kiddies? How the hell are you going to make a picture without any happy kiddies? Somebody high-tail around the field and see if they can dig up some kiddies. Look in the restaurant. Look in the rest room. Get some kiddies or we can't make a picture."

The field special police were sent out to find some happy kiddies to greet Santa Claus and finally succeeded in rounding up some frightened and unwilling urchins who perked up, though, when they saw the cameras.

The photographers said, "Come on now, kiddies, and go over there to Santa Claus." A tot aged about 4 took one look at Santa with his red nose, his whiskers askew and his eyes gleaming balefully and began to scream. "I doan wanna see Santy Claus. I doan wanna see Santy Claus. Go 'way!"

A photographer said, "Yes, you do, now dearies, you want to see Santa Claus.

"Dammit get over here you and stop squalling. See the pretty Santa Claus who will bring you all the nice presents." Santa Claus said, "Yeah, like hell," under his breath.

Another photographer shouted: "Hey, wait a minute; there's one with its finger in its mouth. That'll make a swell picture. Get the one with its finger in its mouth. Come on, Paul, you climb out and kneel down with Santa alongside the one with the finger in its mouth."

The one with the finger in its mouth was about 3 and a female. We got it to stand between us and the half dozen cameramen leveled their boxes. The child's mother hollerd, "Mami, take your finger out of your mouth!"

The photographers began to scream and dance around. "No, no, dammit, don't take your finger out of your mouth. Hey, Paul, hey, Santa, stuff her finger back in her face, will ya?"

"Come on, dear," Santa snarled, "you can put your finger in your mouth. Baby wanna suck the nice finger? You can suck the nice finger. Blankety-blank-blank, get that finger back in your puss, do you hear?"

The tot began to scream bloody murder. All of the photographers again began to scream, "Ah, ah, ah, there now, dearie. You want to see the nice Santa Claus. Put the finger in your mouth. Santa Claus, pretty Santa. Grab her, Paul!"

The child's father rescued it and took it away. Santa said, "Wait a minute; my kid is here." He hoisted a small bundle in pink wool out of its mother's arms. The bundle took one look at his face and went into panic and hysteria. Santa returned her quickly and drew a baleful look from his wife. "She don't know me," he said.

We finally slugged a youngster around 6 behind the ear and while he was still groggy, propped him up between us until the photographers were through. Santa went away somewhere, sweating. I taxied the ship through another mud puddle back to the hangar.

Center League Lists Close Tomorrow

Community Fives to Split Into 2 Groups; Play Opens January 2.

WITH tomorrow set as the deadline for turning in franchises, interest in the Community Center basket ball leagues will gain momentum this week when efforts will be made to select the teams that will comprise the two loops.

Winfree Johnson, supervisor of the men's and boys' division of the Community Center, stated yesterday that the basket ball committee is aiming to build up first-class competition this winter through the medium of "major" and "minor" leagues.

A new system will be employed in choosing the quintets for the major loop. As soon as all the franchises are in, and players duly registered, the committee will make a study of the teams and players to determine the ten strongest teams for the major league. Those not selected, will be assigned to the minor division.

Fighter Races Expected.

By determining the strength of the teams, and selecting the best suited for each league, the committee believes it will be tightening up the races and eliminating the marked superiority of any one entry.

Already 26 teams have indicated their intentions of entering the leagues, and virtually all of these franchises are expected to be in the hands of the committee by tomorrow night. Applications should be sent to the Community Center office, Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

Sholl's, last season's winner, is assured a place in the major league, as are Bureau of Investigation, United Typewriter Grays, Griffith-Consumers, and Olmsted Grill. Other potent major teams are Mount Vernon A. C., Rhode Island Avenue, Mercury A. C., Crescent A. C., and Tremonts.

Supervisor Johnson also calls attention to the new transfer rule that affects all A. A. U. teams in the country. All players, according to the rule adopted at the last National A. A. U. convention, must be registered or transferred by January 1, and not more than one transfer from one club to another will be permitted any player in any one season.

The wheels of the league are expected to be set in motion on January 2.

Gordon Gym Ready.

Of good news to basket ball players in the western section of the District is the announcement that the Gordon Junior High School's new gymnasium will be available for Community Center teams. Quintets in Georgetown are expected to take advantage of the opportunity of using the new court.

At present a total of 68 teams have signed up to use the Community Center gyms. Gyms are in use constantly at Central High, Roosevelt, Eastern, McKinley Tech, Hine Junior High, Macfarland and Langley.

Busy Program For School Quintets

Central Plays G. U. Prep in Feature; Eastern Now Highly Rated.

THE week before the Christmas holidays is a fairly busy one, especially for the local high school basket ball teams and particularly, Eastern High.

Eastern, by virtue of its startling triumph over Emerson Institute five, is now recognized by the future foes as dangerous opposition. The Lincoln Parkers are slated for a big day Thursday; in fact, they will have the entire day to themselves. The varsity is hooked up to meet Gonzaga in the afternoon and then return to the hardwoods to take on a hurriedly put together Alumni five in the evening. It is Alumni Reunion Day at Eastern, and the committee in charge is making every effort to put across the festivities in a big basket ball way.

Central, the last of the local fives to start competitive play, will take on Georgetown Prep in the Central cage. The Hoyette five is considered the top ranking team of the prep school division, while Central is picked by the dopesters as having the class of the interhigh teams.

Star Players to Clash.

The game should prove a hummer with Nee, Allan and Keating up against Nau, Bryant and Gregorio, with baskets galore. Georgetown was thoroughly trounced by Emerson last week, while Central dropped its opener to the G. W. frosh yesterday in a thrilling battle. Both clubs, however, were playing out of their class.

Cavanaugh has been proving the spark plug of the Roosevelt team. The Ruf Riders started an early season campaign and reached a high point when they took a pair of battles from Jefferson, of Roanoke, and Washington-Lee High School, of Ballston, last Wednesday. The team bids fair to give the heavy favorites a run for their lives in the interhigh championships that start early next month. Ahearn, Black and Donovan are all high-caliber performers and with these three "feeding" the titian-haired Cavanaugh, many games are going to be recorded on the right side of the Roosevelt record book.

Western, considered as the weak sister of the public high group, appears seeded to the doldrums if showings over the past week are to be considered. The team has been robbed of what few capable players it has through graduation, and, unless a flock of black magic or, rather, black basket ball magic, is used, the Georgetowners are destined for an extremely dull season.

Nolan Outstanding Star.

Referring, one again, to the Eastern team, it appears that Tommy Nolan, who was a sterling performer last season, will surpass his brilliancy in this campaign. It was Tommy who tossed the Frank Merriwell basket in the final minute of play, to give his team a spectacular win over Emerson Institute, 31-30. Nolan was checked until that point.

As for Emerson, Coach Harley Sanborn has the classiest array of material probably ever to grace the Institute line-up. Knocky Thomas, Ollie Tipton, and Waverly Wheeler, all former public high stars, could make any college court squad in the country at this writing. It is with respect to this club, that the Eastern five is placed on such a high plane so early in the campaign.

"Y" Swimmers Win, Volleyball Team Loses

Washington Y. M. C. A. swimmers defeated the Fort Monroe team, 31 to 24, last night in a return dual meet.

A new pool record was established when the 160-yard medley relay team of Marmion, Moncure and Mullady raced to victory in 1:41 3-5 seconds. Marmion, District backstroke champion, equalled the record held by Hogan of Penn A. C. in 1:08 2-5.

Baltimore Y. M. C. A. volley ball team trounced the local "Y" outfit, 12-15, 15-10, 2-15, 15-13 and 17-15 in their annual game here.

In the intraclub boxing meet, several hot bouts were fought. In the feature Earl Cowan, 120-pounder, won from Frank McCaleb. D. Treg, Wesley Jackson, Ted Mason, J. Waldernbach, Don Tyson, Frank Taylor and Bill Stanley were other winners.

Virginians Want Games.

The Pops Club, of Richmond, Va., would like to book basket ball games with senior teams in Washington. Managers interested are requested to write Manager Harold Ronick, 3401 West Grace street, Richmond, Va. Sunday games away from the Pops' home court are preferred.

G. W. Cubs Rally to Defeat Central, 28-25; Russell Stars

THE George Washington Freshman five galloped down the stretch in a Garrison finish to take a nose decision from Central by the margin of 28 to 25 in a turbulent game at the G. W. gym yesterday. Everett Russell, former Tech star, provided most of the impetus for the Freshmen's flourishing finale in which they came from behind in the last four minutes of play.

After 20 minutes of hard fighting the first half ended with the score 12 to 11, in favor of the George Washington Freshman, but the Centralites snapped back to pile up a lead of 24 to 19 going the last four minutes. Then the yearlings broke loose and headed by Russell, who flipped in two field goals in rapid succession, romped to their ultimate triumph.

The eleventh-hour rally found McGibbony and Cannesax backing up Russell's efforts with one field goal apiece and Berg tossing in a foul goal.

Wolfe, Simon, Phillips, Mandley, Litchfield Win 15 of 27.

Top 1,900 Mark in 3 Sets; 10 Games Are Over 600 Total.

JUST a gang of poisoned bowlers. That sums up the Book of Washington team. This thing of shooting huge scores and taking it on the chin is acute with them. It's a weekly occurrence for them to get big gobs of pins only to finish on the short end of a match.

The Wolfe - Simon - Litchfield - Mandley - Phillips lineup has chalked up three 1,900 sets in the last month and only twice in 14 sets has it been under 1,800. Their last ten games were over the 600 mark. Yet this gigantic and super rolling has repeatedly failed to put games in the win column.

Holds Third Place.

Today Book of Washington holds third place in the National Capital League with a team average of 613, having lost 15 games while winning 27. Against this, the leading Silver Spring club with an equally as powerful combination is making a runaway of the pennant race. The Caddington crew has lost but five tilts.

King Pin has taken delight in trimming Book of Washington. The first match resulted in the Hokie Smith crew sweeping the set with a 1,938 count. Last week King Pin came close to re-enacting its triumph by winning two games, with 1,895, while Book of Washington bettered their pinfall with 1,915.

Even some of the weaker clubs have risen with a sudden mightiness to check the advance of this tough luck team. Judd & Detweiler hits the high spots against the McDecitt quint.

Joe Harrison pulled away from Sam Simon for the individual leadership with a 393 while the latter hit 370.

Department Store League.

Kann's, after winning ten consecutive matches to lead the Department Store League, was finally halted by Raleigh Haberdashery, who annexed two close games.

Hecht Co. took advantage of the leaders, set-back by sweeping its match with the last-place Credit Bureau team, to put them within two games of first place, just behind the runner-up Lansburgh aggregation, who maintained their position although dropping the odd game to Young's Shoes. The Mode took all three from Jelleff's.

Lloyd Tubbs (Kann's) with a 142 game and Mike Shugrue (Hecht), rolling a 360 set, shared individual honors for the week.

Matman May Face Test by Alienists

be examined by three alienists, chosen by the commission at the expense of Marshall, to determine whether his mentality is such as to justify his reinstatement."

Slugs with Referee.

Marshall had just tossed Londos out of the ring when the fracas occurred. The Westerner started to climb from the ring after his opponent and Referee Paul pushed him back. He turned on Paul, and the two—Marshall, at 214 pounds and the arbiter, who is a shade below the average height—stood toe-to-toe throwing punches at each other.

The crowd jumped to its feet with a roar. Pat McKewen, commission secretary, and a group of deputies climbed inside the ropes. A squad of policemen followed.

But Marshall kept on swinging his long arms. He punched his manager in the face when Sandow tried to pacify him, and pushed a police inspector into the press box. But, outnumbered, he was subdued finally.

Realizing what he had done, he apologized later to all concerned, but the referee disqualified him immediately, and the commission ordered his purse held up until today. Half of the purse, forfeited to the State, amounts to $456.

The Marions have injected new life in their team with the addition of Timmons, Swift and Melton and the fast-passing and accurate shooting of the Mercury's, last year's 135-pound A. A. U. champions, is a continual threat. Sigma Phi Lambda will be put to the acid test against Certified Bakers and Christ Church.

D. C. Women Bowlers Bow to Baltimoreans

The Tivoli Girls, of Baltimore, two-time victors over the National champion Recreation team, of the Monumental City, invaded the District last night for a return bowling match with "Pop" Halley's Recreation team, and again emerged victorious, rolling a 2,581 set to the locals' 2,472.

Naomi Zimmerman led the onslaught of the out-of-towners with a 128 game and 549 set. Evelyn Ellis, with a 130 game, and Merceda Isemann's 499 set, was high for Recreation.

In the Baltimore end of the contest, the Tivoli Girls rolled a near-record set to win by 137 sticks, making the total margin of their victory 246 pins. Baltimore slipped up on its chance to establish a new ten-game total for women.

Rosslyn Bowlers Win.

The Rosslyn team strengthened its grip at the top of the Interurban League on the Rosslyn drives, winning the odd game from Boulevard. George Stephens and Oscar were instrumental in the victory, turning in a 144 game and 387 set, respectively. A 624 game and 1,762 set by Rosslyn featured the match.

Greenleaf Beaten Again in Cue Event

Rudolph Wins to Take Second Place in Title Play.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Erwin Rudolph, Cleveland star, who won the title in 1930, trounced the defending champion, Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, 125 to 44, today to take possession of second place in the world pocket billiards championship tournament.

Rudolph played steadily, pocketing almost every shot offered, while Greenleaf, still miles from his best form, could make the balls behave on few occasions. The match went 21 innings, as Rudolph won his fifth victory in six matches.

Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, improved his standing by outpointing Charles Seaback, of Astoria, N. Y., 125 to 60, in 32 innings. The victory was Natalie's third in seven games, while Seaback remained in last place with one victory in eight starts.

George Kelly, of Philadelphia, National title holder, went into third place in the standings tonight by a 22-inning victory, 125 to 60, over James Caras, of Wilmington, Del.

Perce Wolfe Second In Md. Bowling Event

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 16 (Spl.).—John Miller, of the Recreation Happy Five, former National champions, is the new 1933-34 Maryland State Sweepstakes champion. Miller snared this important title, and the $50 first prize by scattering the impressive total of 1,944 pins in the series of 15 games rolled in blocks of five, over the runways of three alleys.

Miller took the lead in the opening block with a fine 690 effort, the best single block of the tournament. This score was chalked up on the Mount Rainier alleys last week-end. This afternoon Miller added a 612 score at the Lexington plant, while tonight he blasted the atomic pins for an additional 642 score down Patterson way.

P. Wolfe, of Hyattsville, chased Miller over the 15 games route to finish in the runner-up position with 1,858.

Pacini and Rinaldi Italian Pin Victors

Nick Rinaldi finished in front of 25 entrants in the fifth annual rolling of the Italian Sweepstakes at the Temple Bowling alleys. Nick scattered the pins for a 653 set, which aided by a 60-pin handicap, gave him a total of 713 to lead Ollie Pacini, who was rolling from scratch, by 29 pins. Ollie's set of 684, the highest rolled from scratch, netted him a gold medal, emblematic of the Italian championship of the city.

Constantine Forcione, aided by a 70-pin handicap, finished third with 669; Bob Miciotto finished fourth with 668 and Pete Boccuzzi ran fifth with 664.

Joe Freschi, the defending champion, toppled 162 pins, for the highest individual game, but was entirely out of the money. The winner took down a cash prize of $24.

English Booters Win.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—England today defeated Australia, 19-16, in the third test soccer football match of the season for its third straight victory over the invaders.

Parks Pin Star After 7-Year Lay-Off

Kenwood Team's Captain Holds League Record for Individual Set.

A SEVEN-YEAR lay-off has not rusted the bowling arm or dimmed the eye of "Doc" Parks, captain of the Kenwood team in the Country Club League. Starting his second season, after having quit the bowling game in 1925, Parks is pounding the maples high, wide and handsomely in three of the city's most hotly contested leagues.

With the Kenwood team, he is sporting an average of 124, as well as holding the league's high individual set record, with 421.

In the Columbia Heights League, rolling with McGuire & Rolfe, he is carrying an average of 117 and has the second high set of the season, a 421, being topped by "Ouncie" Harrison's 437 set. Last week "Doc" just fell short of a 400 set, but aided materially in his team's gaining the top position, after a four-week tie with Highway Engineers.

First Foul Called.

Rolling with the Pards in the Mount Rainier League, "Doc" just missed annexing the high individual set mark of the season when he rolled a strike in the last frame, only to have his first foul called, to finish with a 393 set. "Doc" is a strict observer of the foul line and still feels sure he did not slide over the boundary.

"Doc" started rolling last year in the Lutheran League, which he led with strikes and spares and ended his first season, after his lay-off of seven years, with an average of 116 pins.

When he first started mauling the ducks, "Doc" competed in friendly games in Baltimore against such outstanding stars as Ed Rommel, Ed Blakeney and Ray Barnes. Paired with the latter in a small stake game, he shot a 186 game, the highest of his career.

Besides being a bowler, "Doc" takes great pride in the fact that he has turned in cards of 76 and 78 at the Kenwood golf course.

Wolfe Has 124 Pin League Average

Keeps Hot Pace Despite His Hyattsville Team Being in Last Place.

OUTSTRIPPING even the records he made last season which won for him a place among the ten ranking bowlers of the Capital, Perce Wolfe, the smiling blond shooter, of Hyattsville, is pounding the maples for an average of 124 in the District League, a mark only three other howitzers can point to.

Not even the repeated losses of his team, which dropped to the cellar last week, seem to affect his brilliant work, which he hopes will again put him in the select circle.

The apparent failure of Hyattsville this season to battle its way among the leaders might be laid to the inactivity of Henry Hiser, the man who put Hyattsville on the duckpin map. Then again Hiser has probably overlooked the fact that every club has been bolstered while he has failed to inject new blood.

Hiser a Fighter.

Anyway, it's hardly possible he's going to stand by and not make an effort to pull his club up in the race. Always a fighter, his teams are generally so.

One of his standout achievements came three years ago when he led the league with a then remarkable average of 121 over a circuit of alleys. All that year he suffered excruciating pain in his bowling arm, the result of an automobile accident.

Paul Harrison continued his phenomenal rolling with Arcadia, getting 416 which skied his average to exactly 130 for 33 games.

The big team set of the week went to Convention Hall with 1,850. Capt. Joe Harrison shook up his Occidental team, moving Astor Clarke from anchor to lead-off and McPhilomy to the bottom. Red Morgan rolled an accredible 153, subbing on the champs. It being, incidentally, his first game in two years.

Mercurys Add Strength for Mohawks

McCarver, Pearce, Baker, Stewart, Former G. W. Stars Play Today.

TODAY'S clash for the city football championship will bring into action a seasoned team of veteran Mohawk players against a reorganized aggregation of Mercurys which has been greatly strengthened by the acquisition of five college stars of last year and two outstanding sandlot players.

The presence of Nig McCarver, Hardy Pearce, Johnny Baker and Zuzu Stewart, George Washington scintillants, and Ike Iicarione and Eddie Hooff, Marion stars, is expected to do much to overcome the supremacy which the Hawks displayed in their contest with the Marions, whom they defeated 25-7, as compared to the 6-0 victory which the old Mercurys laboriously ground out over the same team.

No Changes in Hawk Team.

The Mohawk lineup will be virtually the same as for all their important games this year. The Hawk eleven is a smooth-functioning aggregation of seasoned players who are backed by long experience on the gridiron. Listed among the veteran players on the Mohawks lineup are Scully, former Fordham center; Leventhal, erstwhile Brooklyn Dodgers player; Byrne, who once starred for Gonzaga and Reynolds, former Holy Cross star.

The game is scheduled for 2:30 at Gonzaga Field, Thirty-first and Benning road, and an admission charge of 50 cents will be levied for all seats.

Four Rule Changes Urged by Officials

advance the ball if it does not cross the scrimmage.

"That would be a fair change and would clear up a situation now unclear and one that caused considerable trouble this fall. Under the present rules a blocked kick can be recovered behind the scrimmage line by either team, but advanced only by the defense. Once it crosses the scrimmage line it becomes an ordinary punted ball.

"Sentiment in favor of return of the goal posts to the goal line, instead of ten yards back, their present position, was strong. The possibility of injury is remote, we believe and by return of the goal posts drop kicking and placement kicking would regain their natural place in the game.

"It was the general opinion that the dead ball rule is excellent as written now. While it appears to work a hardship where the runner falls in the open, on the whole the absence of serious injuries in college games has been marked and can be traced in no small measure to this rule."

William Bingham graduate of athletics at Harvard; Walter Okeson, Eastern commissioner of football officials, and Lou Little, Columbia head coach, were speakers at the annual banquet tonight.

Ruth Declares Nats' Speed Afoot Was Responsible for 1933 Pennant Victory

Double Plays Costly to Yankees

Nats Hit Into 51 Less Twin - Killings Than Did New Yorkers.

Mackmen Third, White Sox Last in League in This Respect.

WHILE most of the other experts agree that the Nats won the 1933 American League pennant because they received good pitching, better hitting and best fielding, leading the Harridge circuit in this latter respect, up steps Babe Ruth with the statement that it was the Washington Club's speed that beat out the Yankees in the flag chase.

It seems that while the National game's leading exponent of the four-base clout was in Hawaii recently, he took time off from golfing and studying hula hula dancing to do a little serious thinking. And the result was a quite accurate verbal picture of the whys and wherefores of the Nats' victorious march to Pennantville.

"Sure, Cronin and his gang got good pitching, batting and fielding, but us Yankees got that, too. The difference in the two teams was that the Nats had the speed edge to escape a flock of costly double plays. Washington won almost half its games by a one-run margin, and it was because of this extra speed that it grabbed a lot of those close ones.

Mates Make Babe Look Fast.

"I don't claim to be any speed artist myself, but take a look at the double-play records and you'll get the idea that I'm about as fast afoot as the rest of the Yankees except, of course, Ben Chapman. Why, I can remember us losing enough games because of double plays to have given us the flag."

And a glance at the 1933 box scores shows that the Babe just about hit the nail on the head. Whereas the Washington champions hit into an even 100 double plays. 85 of them infield duplex killings, the Yanks hit into no less than 151, with opposing fly-hawks starting 14 of them.

The Chicago White Sox, however, were the worst offenders when it came to hitting into double plays, their record being 169 disasters and 6 which were started by the outfielders. Philadelphia came third by hitting into 136 double plays, all but two of which were consummated by the contending infields. Boston and Cleveland were tied, each with 129.

Detroit and St. Louis, each of whom boasted of several speed merchants, came close to tying Washington in seldom hitting into the double affairs. Detroit hit into 106 and St. Louis into only 104. Outfielders started the trouble for the Browns 9 times and for the Tigers 8 times.

Old Dominions Beat Potomac Five, 35-23

Alexandria, Va., Dec. 16 (Spl.). The Old Dominion Boat Club defeated the Potomac Boat Club, of Washington, on the Alexandria Armory floor tonight, 35-23. Fine teamwork, with dashes of individual brilliancy by Joe Williams and Gensmer of the Virginians, carried them to a 14-7 margin at the half, and they were never headed.

Takoma-Silver Spring High School was unable to stem the second-half attack of the Mount St. Joseph team of Baltimore last night, losing on its home floor, 22-10.

Leading 7-3 at half-time the Mounties, with Hagen in the starring role with five baskets, gradually pulled away from Springers.

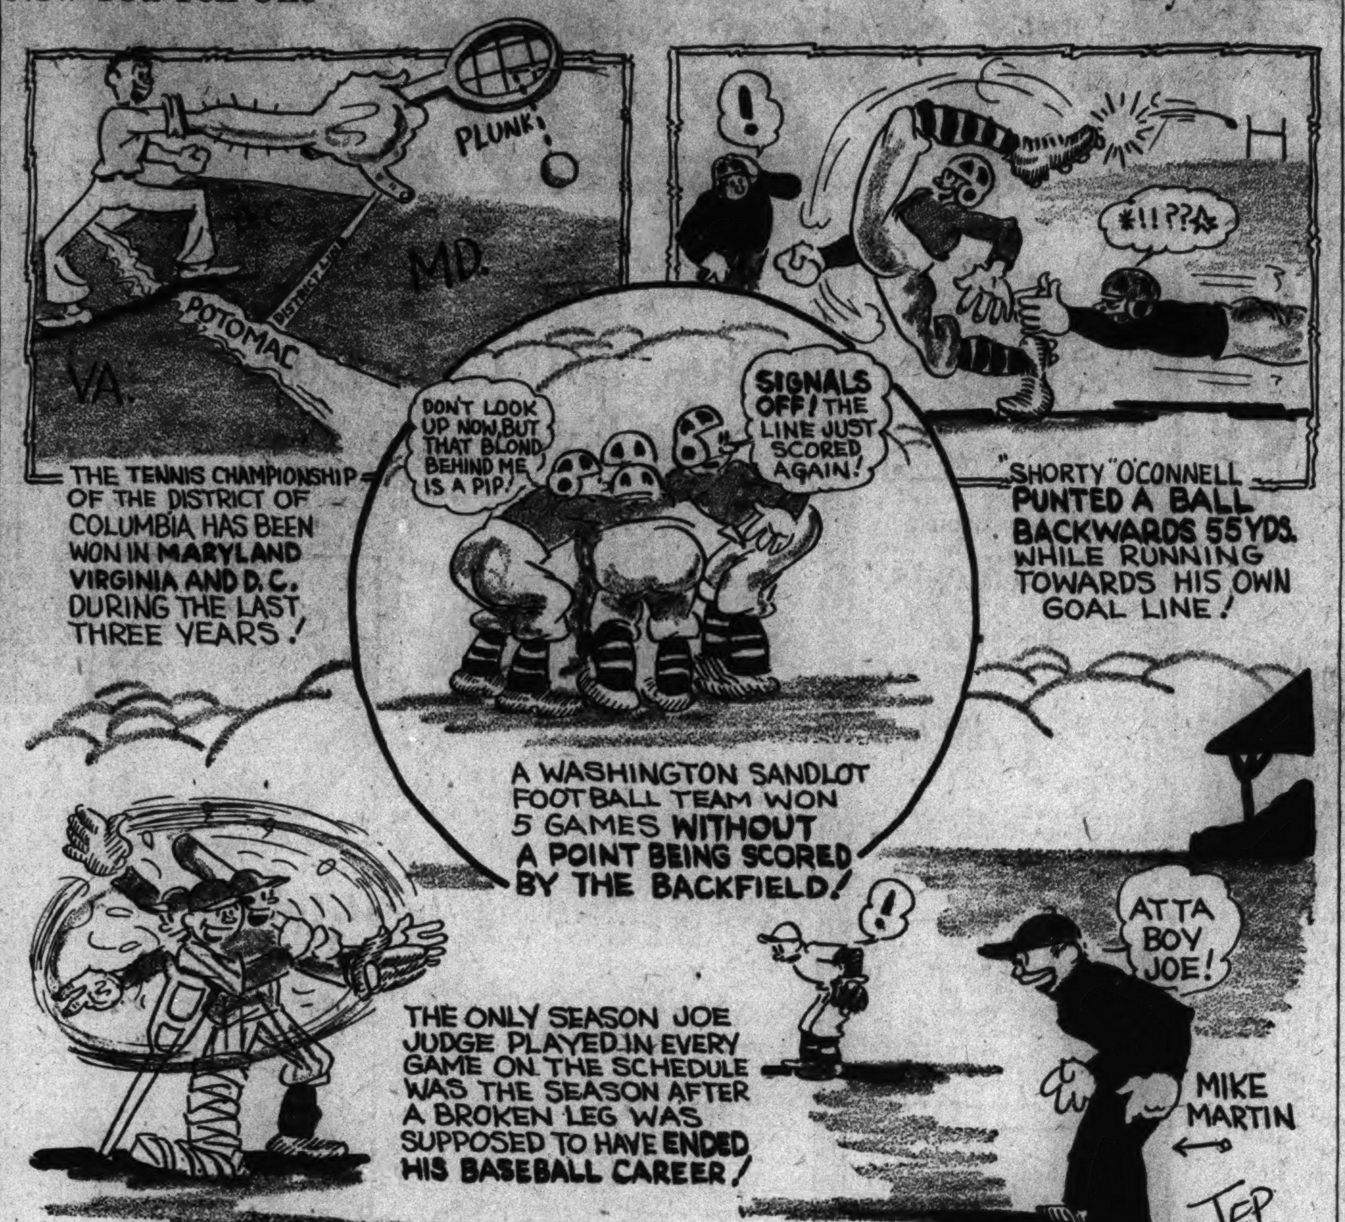
Now You Tell One

—By Pierotti



IN 1932, the Marion A. C. football team won five games—without a single point being scored by the back field. In the five games the Marions were not scored upon and scored a total of only 24 points, and all except one score were the result of blocked kicks. The one marker not scored on a blocked kick came in a game with the Maryland A. C., when Licarione, end, snared a pass to give his team a 6-0 victory. In the five games, the Marions defeated the Seaman Gunners, 6-0; the Mercurys, 6-0; the Fredericksburg Rebels, 2-0, and the Mercurys again, 4-0.

IN 1931, 1932 and 1933, the District of Columbia tennis championship was held in two States and the District. In 1931, the early rounds were played in the District, but the matches wound up on the courts of the Columbia Country Club, in Maryland. In 1932, all play was held at Wardman Park, in the District. In 1933, all play was held at the Army and Navy Country Club, in Arlington County, Virginia. Eddie Yoemans was the District champion who won his title in Maryland, Dolph Muehleison the winner of the match at Wardman Park and Dooly Mitchell the champion who won his diadem in Virginia.

IN a football game between the Mohawks and the Maryland Collegiates played at Griffith Stadium in 1924, Shorty O'Connell, of the Mohawks, who was also a good soccer player, received the ball on the 30-yard line to punt. The opposition broke through so fast he could not kick, and he gathered up the ball and started to run back toward his own goal posts. While headed towards his own goal, traveling at full speed, he gave the ball a backward kick, which carried it 55 yards into the enemy's territory, where it imbedded itself in the soaked field.

IN August, 1917, Joe Judge broke his leg sliding into home plate at Detroit. He was operated on in October and his leg kept in a cast until January. Several physicians declared that Judge was through with baseball, but Trainer Mike Martin of the Nats insisted that this was not the case and forced Judge to come live with him at his home in Cherrydale, Va. For three weeks Martin worked on Judge's leg before the team went South. That season he played every game for the first and only time in his big-league career.

Red Sox Look For Added Strength

Collins States Alexander Will Be With Team Again Next Year.

BOSTON, Dec. 16 (AP).—Eddie Collins, his face beaming with the happiest expression it has worn since he and Tom Yawkey purchased the Boston Red Sox almost a year ago, returned to Fenway Park today from his highly successful shopping at the major league meetings in Chicago.

Eddie was describing his deals to his admiring office staff when one of them sought verification of reports that Dale Alexander, 1932 American League batting champion, was slated to go to Kansas City, along with several other castoffs.

Report Is Denied.

"Alexander going to Kansas City? Nothing to it," Collins replied. "I don't know where that report originated, the one regarding the players we are going to send to Kansas City, for we haven't definitely decided who is going to the Blues. One thing I do know is that Alexander was not discussed as one of those likely to go.

"I heard only today that we have already agreed to send Alexander, Stumpf, Almada and Fullerton to Kansas City as our part of the working agreement with that American Association Club. The truth is we have signed no contracts as to who will go but Alex will not be one of them."

Would Spend More.

Although Collins and Yawkey have set new basball trading records during the past year, the climax coming with the purchase of Bob "Lefty" Grove, George Walberg and Max Bishop from the Athletics, and Outfielder Carl Reynolds from the Browns, Eddie indicated that his millionaire associate was still keeping his pocketbook within easy reach.

While thrilling his assistants with his rosy picture of the 1934 Red Sox, Eddie awaited news about a promising catching recruit, now the center of some National League Dickering. But he appeared doubtful about his chances of getting the receiver, said to be Gordon Hinkle, who has been taken up by the St. Louis Cardinals from their International League farm at Rochester.

Further Strengthening.

"When we get another catcher," Collins continued, "we will know just where we stand for the 1934 season. But we are not going to rest there. Any time we learn of a chance to strengthen our ball club, we are going to take it.

"I feel that the deals we effected in Chicago will give us a much better club than we had last season. Now about Reynolds. Before we got him from the Browns, we tried to get a right-handed outfielder from the Yankees. But I am satisfied that Carl will help us much more than our original choice. We were on the point of doing something with Washington a few days ago, but the Nats wanted some of our pitching strength and had nothing to offer that we wanted."

Buy Rochester Catcher.

St. Louis, Dec. 16 (AP).—Sale of Catcher Gordon Hinkle, last year with the Rochester International League club, to the Boston Red Sox, was announced today by the St. Louis Cardinals. The price was not announced.

Fred McLeod Favors Strictly Match Play for Future National Amateur Championships; Plan Would Boost Chances of Veteran Golfers.

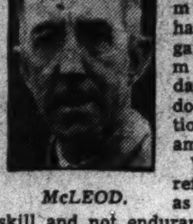
By Dave Herman.

"GOLF is a game of skill and not endurance," Fred McLeod, Columbia Country Club's famous little professional, declares.

And for that reason McLeod, who was the Paul Runyan of golf some 25 years ago, advocates the use of the British system of match play in National amateur tournaments. McLeod will tell you that it is the best system in the long run, and knows whereof he speaks.

The Columbia professor of the fairways has long been espousing the cause of the "strictly match play plan." If the United States Golf Association decides to abandon the medal rounds, turn the six-day tournament into a man-to-man struggle, Fred will be one of the first to congratulate the golfing fathers.

In this respect McLeod will find a host of other pros in the country who are in sympathy with the plan to relieve the simon-pure stars of the medal play pressure, eliminate the "sudden-death" matches and have them engage in 18-hole matches each day, just as they do in the traditional British amateur.



McLEOD.

When McLeod referred to golf as a game of skill and not endurance he had in mind a number of cases where some of the outstanding veterans were penalized because of the two-match-a-day and 36-hole program that has been the order at past national amateur events.

"Take Chandler Egan, for example," the Columbia pro remarked. "He is a splendid player, very steady, and can hold his own with perhaps the best of the youthful stars for 18 holes. But it's a different story when a man of Egan's type has to play 36 holes.

"I need only to remind you of his opening round match with Goodman in the amateur near Cincinnati last September Here at this stage of the tournament Egan was playing consistently brilliant golf. He threw a 70 at Goodman, with a 33 on the last nine, and beat him, 2 up. The strain on Egan was terrific. He had already played 18 holes. But he faced another 18-hole test in the afternoon, and, you will recall, the kid, Munger, put him out."

Lesser Tension.

The fact remains that the tension would be lessened on both the youngster and veteran if they knew that the ordeal consisted of only 18 holes

Although the gallery was very hostile toward him in this season's amateur finals, Max Marston, 1923 champion, plainly showed the strain of three straight 36-hole matches when he faced George Dunlap.

We might cite the case of Francis Ouimet, twice former amateur title holder, who had to sink a 15-foot putt on the thirty-sixth green before eliminating Johnny Fischer in the quarter finals of the 1932 National Amateur, but who later fell before Johnny Goodman's deadly fire in the semifinals, 4 and 2.

At the end of the morning round the 40-year-old Boston broker was holding his own with Fischer, but he had to battle for dear life during the second 18 holes before closing out the intercollegiate star on the very last hole. Against Goodman, Ouimet led, 2 up, in the morning, but the additional 18 holes proved quite a task for the Boston Fusileer, and Ouimet folded up on the stretch.

Skill in 18 Holes.

Hundreds of cases could be recalled to illustrate the glaring evils of what the boys call "marathon tussles."

Just think, if the 1932 amateur had been strictly 18-hole matches, Francis Ouimet might have made a successful defense of his title. And Chandler Egan might have regained his crown in this season's classic on the match play basis.

I'll string along with Fred McLeod. Golf was never meant for endurance. The skill is what counts, and 18-hole matches are enough to bring out the real ability of any golfer.

Columbia has reason to be proud of Fred McLeod. He is celebrating his twentieth year with the club —and 20 years of great service. This is a long time for a golf pro to remain with one club, surely a tribute to McLeod's untiring efforts.

Turn back the clock to August, 1908, Myopia Hunt Club the scene, and there you find McLeod, open champion of America. Although this is the only time in his career he has ever worn the crown, McLeod down through the years roared his challenge in virtually every open championship.

In those days the purses were not as tempting and as large as those of today. For instance, McLeod received only $300 for winning the open 24 years ago, where today the open champion receives $1,000. And don't forget they never charged admission back in the good old halcyon days. For three days of play recently in the Miami Biltmore championship, Willie MacFarlane won $2,500, first prize money.

What a difference!

McLeod missed a tie with Mac Smith, his brother, Alex, and J. J. McDermott, by one shot in the 1910 open. Again the following year he was one shot from the triple sharers of first place. That season Mcleod had the tournament in his hip pocket until he skidded on the fourth round and took a ghastly 83. He tied Francis Ouimet for second place in 1914 when Walter Hagen, then a kid, nosed out Chick Evans by a stroke for the championship. Over his home course in 1921 Fred tied Walter Hagen for second money—his last greatest bid to regain the open crown.

At the age of 52, Fred McLeod, who has had many thrilling adventures over the bunkered fronts during the past three decades, can show the big shots a thing or two about hitting the ball. It is doubtful if there ever has been any greater trap shot player than the Columbia pro, famous for his ability to wield with deadly accuracy his niblick in angry bunkers, no matter how difficult the shot may be.

Tom McNamara, the old Boston siege gun, now retired from competitive golf, paid Fred a tribute in Cincinnati a few months ago while there for the National Amateur. A noted rival of McLeod's on the links years ago, McNamara said:

"Fred was one of our great pro golfers. His big handicap was his lack of height and weight. Had he been able to hit the ball longer off the tee when he was a prominent contender for Open Tournaments years ago, he would have won a dozen championships instead of one."

Snow-capped courses proved a pain-in-the-neck to Washington's winter golfers last week, especially to such players as Dr. F. J. Broshard, Ralph Koontz, Tom Beavers and A. L. Alderman, all of Manor. These men like their winter golf straight and are opposed to playing with a dash of snow or ice. Bring on your rain, your blustery, frigid northwest winds—and Broshard, Koontz, Beavers and Alderman will continue to play. But they don't relish slithering around 18 holes in snow, or skating over the icy greens.

These gentlemen, my informant, Aloysius Treder, says, play better golf in the winter than in the summer. Beavers, for example, encounters trouble with his wood shots in the summer. In the winter he sends out booming shots straight and far.

Among the Manor women who brave the icy blasts daily are Mrs. J. T. Powell, Mrs. H. B. Hird, Mrs. Howard Simons and Mrs. T. N. Beavers.

Do you want to know whether Harry (the Moose) Pitt is a winter golfer? No!

Walter (Reds) Cunningham, known among the professional fraternity as "Daddy," let it be known the other day that he burned up his home course, Burning Tree, in 67 strokes about a week ago in frigid weather. Out in 33, Cunningham stood on the eighteenth tee needing a par 4 for 33, but he three-putted for a 5.

Arrangements have been virtually completed for the match tomorrow between the combination of Al Houghton and Walter McCallum and George Diffenbaugh and Al Price. Rock Creek will be the scene.

With respect to this match, Walter Cunningham became seriously involved when he was quoted recently as saying he thought Al and Mac "were going over their heads" in playing Price and Diffenbaugh.

Hot in the neck, the Burning Tree pro vigorously denied he ever made such a remark. He is gunning for someone.

Ever heard of the Chevy Chase Course Stormers?

They're a roving band of golfers who play tennis in the summer and concentrate on golf in the winter.

The Course Stormers, Prof. Bill Hardy informs us, had their second session last Sunday, and will resume their divot digging today. Men prominent in all walks of life are members of the course storming organization.

Among the most active stormers are Franklin L. Fischer, C. Ashmead Fuller, Col. Morris Day, of the British Embassy; Walter Chappell and Corcoran Thom, jr.

They will mobilize at 10 a. m.

Admiral C. B. McVay didn't forget to take his golf clubs with him when he left recently for California. Admiral McVay, one of the outstanding senior players at Chevy Chase, will not return to his home course until June, it is understood. He expects to do plenty of golfing on the Pacific Coast courses, perhaps to break his own putting record.

Well, Gen. H. P. McCain and C. V. Wheeler will miss Admiral McVay during their daily tours of Chevy Chase. McCain and Wheeler are ardent winter golfers.

Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam Club champion, and Jess Baggett will oppose Cliff and Carroll Spencer at 1 p. m. today, provided it isn't too cold. Jack Frost halted last week's scheduled match.

Dutra's 70, 68 Leads Coast Golf Play

Tops Coltrin by 2 Shots; 90-Foot Approach Putt Among His Feats.

LONG BEACH, Calif., Dec. 16 (AP). Displaying a return to the form which took him to the National P. G. A. title two seasons ago, Olin Dutra, of Santa Monica stepped into a lead in the California Open golf championship here today.

The tall, swarthy Spaniard toured the rugged Lakewood Country Club course in 68, four under par, for a 138 score at the half-way mark, two strokes in front.

In second place was Ben Coltrin, young San Francisco professional, who shot a par 72 today to couple with his 68 yesterday for a 140. Leo Diegel, of the Philmont Country Club, Philadelphia, was third, with two subpar rounds of 70-71 for a 141.

Four strokes behind the leader, with 36 holes to play, was Ky Laffoon, of Denver, Nebraska and Utah Open champion, who shot a 70 today for 142.

Dutra was putting with the famous touch which made him a sensation in 1932. He dropped a 90-foot approach putt on the second hole, a 12-footer on the third, and a trio of 8-foot shots thereafter.

Speaking of Tennis . . .

By Bill Shreve.

THE ranking committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association has made public the result of its survey of tournament play for 1933 in men's singles, men's doubles and women's singles.

Its listing of positions finds Francis Xavier Shields heading the men's singles, George M. Lott and Lester R. Stoefen, the national doubles champions, first in the ranking of pairs, and Miss Helen Hull Jacobs, appearing at the number one post in women's singles for the second year in succession.

The report of the ranking committee which is usually accepted without a change or correction will not, however, become official and final until adopted by the U. S. L. T. A. at its annual meeting at Pittsburgh on February 10.

Seven Players Repeat.

Glancing down the list of names that make up the famous first ten one finds nothing neither startling nor particularly outstanding. Seven of those in this year's first ten were also among that group in 1932. The other three additional players making up the ten ranked eleven, twelve, and thirteen last year. So, except for a slight shifting about of positions within the group, it does not appear greatly different from the rankings of 1932.

The name of Ellsworth Vines which headed the ranking in both 1931 and 1932 is not found in the first ten of this year nor at any position in the listings. The tall Pasadena boy saved the committee considerable embarrassment by terminating his amateur standing on October 9. If the two-time National champion had waited another week before turning professional he would have been eligible for ranking among the amateurs. The rule reads that a player must be an amateur in good standing as of October 15 to be considered for ranking.

What position the committee would have awarded Vines had be been eligible is problematical. His play at Wimbledon, where he was within one point and one game of winning his second championship on those courts, was his only noteworthy defeat of the year. Subsequent play in this country and his record in the National singles did not entitle him to a high perch. The committee should have given Ellsworth a vote of thanks for relieving them of this problem.

Wood Placed Sixth.

The friends of Sidney Wood may raise a bit of furore at the placing of their favorite as far down as sixth. The blond New Yorker had a fair year, and was frequently awarded the second position in mythical rankings that appeared at the end of the playing season. On none of these player and press selections did he appear as far back as on that of the committee.

On the other hand, the "We're for Wilmer Allison Club" will feel Allison was treated justly in receiving the second position. The Davis Cupper had an in and out year, and was upset in the Nationals by the young Australian, Adrian Quist. Several of the mythicals left the Texan completely out of their first 10.

But it is impossible to satisfy everyone with the rankings. Had the positions of these two been reversed the Wood cohorts could have been seen smiling today while the Allison supporters would have risen up in righteous wrath to slay the committeemen for the injustice done their favorite.

Parker Promising.

Frankie Parker, the promising junior, advances into the select 10 for the first time, and together with Gene Mako, who also is a junior, appears to be our hope for the future. Mako was awarded the thirteenth position, this being the first year that his name was listed in the men's rankings.

Lester Stoefen continued his climb to the top of the list. The 6 foot 4 Californian was ranked 15 in '31, 6 in '32 and 3 this year. If "Rollo" continues at the same rate he will head the list in 1934.

Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, who is about half as tall as Stoefen, reached his high-water mark in this year's listings, being ranked seventh. The human practice board from Atlanta has been hovering around the first 10 for the last four years.

Mrs. Moody Drops.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody appears at the number two in rank in Women's Singles for the first time in her career. We have become so accustomed to seeing Queen Helen's name at the top that it looks out of place in any other position.

For ten years from 1923, through 1932, Helen Wills was ranked seven times number one and three times unranked because of insufficient data. Illness during the playing seasons of 1926 and 1930 deprived her of a chance in those years, while she was abroad during the 1932 season and did not compete in American tournaments.

Miss Alice Marble, of San Francisco, young and very promising, is ranked third, just behind the two Helens. She was awarded the seventh position in '32. Miss Marble will win the women's championship within the next few years and keep the title within California following the lead of Helen Wills and Helen Jacobs. Its too bad that Mr. and Mrs. Marble didn't name their little girl Helen.

Dropshots.

The United States was the first country to rank its tennis players. . . . The practice began in 1885 and has continued every year since then with the exception of 1917, the war year. . . . In years past there has been as many as 200 players ranked. France ranks the greatest number of players, nearly 500 receiving that honor last year. . . . France also frequently ranks two or more at the same position. . . . Henri Cochet was not ranked by France for 1933. . . . Jean Borotra gaining the first place. . . . Indoor play is not considered by the committee in making up our rankings.

The Great Outdoors

By Robert Schroeder.

SOME women take their hunting as a spicy relish, like absinthe after cocktails, others as a novelty or social duty to be indulged in once or twice during the season.

But to Mrs. John A. Hull, wife of Maj. Gen. Hull, hunting means getting out in the blinds on a biting cold morning behind a hard-kicking 12-bore gun.

Whenever possible, and when ducks are flying, Mrs. Hull and her young son, John, 12, slip off to their lodge at Sycamore Landing, just below Mount Vernon, for a day's sport. Usually a party of hunting companions joins them and roast duck is in order.

Mrs. Hull was down last week, but John, since school is still in session, was left behind. She went down Thursday morning and stayed until yesterday. Her party got the bag limit on canvasbacks and mallards.

Mitchell's Recent Guests.

Recently Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Mitchell, both enthusiastic duck hunters, were her guests. Gen. Mitchell tells that hunting and shooting are his sole occupation these days He divides his interests between field sports and skeets.

He is enthusiastic over the results of conservation in Virginia, and said:

"It is the greatest game State in the Union. We have everything, even elk!"

Everything, he might have added, but rabbits. Reports are that the cotton-tails have been scarce in the Old Dominion this season.

Saw Plenty of Deer.

Deer are abundant in the State at any rate, according to Judge William Snow, a member of the Virginia Game Commission. Judge Snow and a party of hunters went down to Chesterfield County early in the week on an expedition after them. Judge Snow says:

"I saw plenty of deer and heard the rest of the party popping away back in the hills. But somehow I just can't shoot the pretty things. I built a little fire and sat down and smoked."

The question is when is a hunter not a hunter? Judge Snow isn't one after deer, but he likes birds. More sport, he thinks.

It so happens I have heard other hunters express the same opinion. Col. "Bill" Starling, White House detective and nationally known sportsman, the man who taught two Presidents of the United States how to shoot, tells me he feels the same way about deer. The colonel opines it is because he raises Jersey cattle. There is something about their eyes and a deer's, he says, that prevents him from shooting the latter.

Entertained at Club.

After their hunt Snow and his companions were entertained at the Lake Margaret Club. Their host served them quail and wild turkey, all shot in nearby coverts

H. Rozier Dulany, jr., was the guest of Senator Harry Byrd at the latter's place near Winchester, Va., the latter part of the week. He went down with Dr. John W. Burke after quail, but I haven't heard how they fared. From other reports upland hunting fell off badly during the week. The snow and ice put an end to the sport.

On Thursday Dulany, Burke and Dr. Thomas Neill were at the Hallowing Point Club. They got the bag limit on mallards, shooting from off shore. Neither went out to the blinds.

Good Luck All Week.

Sportsmen at Hallowing Point reported good shooting all week. Other clubs, however, were not so lucky. With a few exceptions Belmont Bay reports were bad, Gunston Cove fair and High Point so-so.

Rear Admiral William C. Standley, chief of naval operations, who has had a couple of bad days at the Broad Creek blinds this season, changed his luck the end of the week by going down to South River. He was the guest of Capt. Paul de Shields and Capt. Douglas Howard, of the Naval Academy. All three got the bag limit on canvasbacks and blackheads.

Second Trip After Geese.

Lieut. Comdr. Robert Carney left Wednesday for the Eastern Shore after geese, where, I hear, the gray honkers have been seen in goodly numbers this season.

Post Mortems . . .

Archie Kahn, head trainer at the University of Virginia, was once a great track star . . . with the University of Michigan . . . and he also was on the 1912 Olympic team . . . Max Hannum, basket ball coach at Carnegie Tech, is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh . . . one of Carnegie Tech's dearest enemies . . . and Hannum never played basket ball . . . Nick Altrock was the announcer for the Y. M. C. A. boxing bouts last night . . . and in several of the bouts he announced his decisions . . . and then those of the judges . . . who didn't agree with him . . . the Masked Marvel and the Masked Marvel Manager paraded about the Washington Auditorium the other night . . . prior to their bout with Rudy Dusek . . . each was garbed in a black suit, flowing black cape . . . and a white stocking cap.

Jim McNamara has recovered from the eye trouble which forced his retirement from the wrestling game . . . and will return to the mat soon . . . probably on one of Joe Turner's cards . . . there were two mile-and-a-half races at Charles Town yesterday . . . and the horses passed the judges' stand three times in each . . . bargain day for the customers . . . a Baltimore man named duckpins . . . they were originally called small pins . . . until this man saw a strike made . . . and said the flying wood looked like a bunch of flying ducks . . . and the name stuck.

The exterior finish will be of whitewashed brick and the home will be a distinguished addition to the attractive, restricted Westmoreland Hills.

Chevy Chase Loan Company Has New Home

Open House Will Be Held This Week for Visits by Public.

Chevy Chase Building & Loan Association has just completed erection of its own office building at 6660 Wisconsin avenue, just north of Bradley lane, and will move into their new quarters tomorrow. A special meeting of the board of directors will be held tomorrow evening at 8:15 to officially receive the keys to the building from Allen C. Minnix, builder, and E. Burton Corning, architect.

Representatives of the Maryland League of Building Associations and of the United States Building & Loan League will be present, as will representatives of the Federal Home Loan Bank. Other prominent local and Montgomery County building and loan men have also been invited for the occasion.

The building, which has attracted wide attention and favorable comment locally, is an unusually fine representation of early American architecture, combining a quaint, appealing beauty with utility.

The exterior is of brick, painted white, with a rough-textured slate roof, broken by three dormers. The same colonial spirit is maintained in the interior by the use of knotty, white pine vertical boarding on all walls. The lobby has a wood-burning fireplace, with a simple wood mantle.

In general, the building has been planned to reflect the nature of the business which it houses—that of home loan financing and saving for home ownership—and the emphasis is therefore domestic, rather than commercial.

A distinct residential atmosphere is created by locating the building in the center of a 50-foot lot—detached from its surroundings and back by 15 feet from the established building line, thereby providing for an informal garden in the front, surrounded by a white picket fence.

The association has designated this week as "House-Warming Week," and the office will be kept open daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. for inspection by the public.

Griffith Fuel Firm to Take New Quarters

Site on New York Avenue to Allow Expansion of Offices.

The Griffith-Consumers Co., fuel distributors now at 1319 G street northwest, will occupy the building at 1413 New York avenue December 30. The new quarters were leased through Carl G. Rosinski, realtor, Removal to the new premises, a four-story structure, will provide Griffith-Consumers with greater accommodative facilities to enlarge its growing organization and to install additional equipment which increased business has necessitated.

Established in 1898 on H street northeast, the present company is represented as the largest fuel distributing organization South of the Mason-Dixon line. It was the first coal company in the United States to add fuel oil to its service to customers. Officials recall that at a time when the distribution of fuel oil was violently opposed by the coal dealer, Griffith-Consumers alone supplied customers with this new type of fuel.

W. W. Griffith, who started serving Washington families 35 years ago, began with a single horse-drawn coal wagon. Mr. Griffith early adopted a policy of service to the small user—placing the same value upon orders of this type as the larger orders. He did this by taking personal responsibility for each order.

Company officials remind that this consideration for the small and large customer alike is the keynote of Griffith-Consumers' service today. A large percentage of the big business done by this company is in the nature of small orders.

Today, Griffith-Consumers has enlarged its business to include 12 branches where orders may be placed, in convenient parts of the city, to speed up delivery service. Four yards on two different railroads are used to house the fuel products brought into Washington daily. A fleet of coal trucks and oil tanks stands always ready to steam away on instant notice

The first floor at 1413 New York avenue will be used for sales purposes; the second, for the credit and bookkeeping department; the third for building materials and displays and the fourth for offices and employes' assembly hall.

Bank Acquires Former British Embassy Site

Realty, Bought From New Yorker, to Be Leased by Tire Firm.

Important among the week's transactions was the acquisition at private sale by the National Savings & Trust Co. of the site of the former British Embassy at Connecticut avenue and N streets, from Dr. E. E. Cady, of New York and Florida. The consideration was not made public.

This property, containing approximately 29,000 square feet, will be leased to the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., as the site of a two and three-story brick and concrete office building and service station.

In 1925, title to this property passed from the British government to Harry Wardman, Thomas P. Bones and James D. Hobbs, and in 1931 from these Wardman officials to a group headed by Dr. Cady, which contemplated erection of an office building for physicians and dentists.

This project failed to materialize, however, and in 1932 the ground was leased for automobile parking space, which purpose it has since served.

B. and L. Associations' Holdings Decrease

A slight decrease in the real estate holdings of the building and loan associations of the country is shown in financial reports for November made to the United States Building & Loan League. The decrease and Loan League. The decrease ranged from 1 to 3 per cent, according to localities.

"This indicates," said Philip Lieber, president of the league, "that buyers are being found for homes in good condition. Managers of building and loan associations are also subscribing to the idea of putting properties in condition by modernization and repairs before putting them on the market. A beginning is thus being made in the direction of reemploying men who formerly made their living in the building trades."

Winter Speeds Selling of Gas Refrigerators

Electrolux Campaign Now Ending Set Record Over Other Years.

The successful winter refrigeration campaign of the Washington Gas Light Co., now drawing to a close, has established a new record in sales of Electrolux gas refrigerators, the company announces.

With a large increase each month over corresponding months in previous years, the company has achieved its objective for the campaign of selling more Electrolux gas refrigerators in September, October, November and December than have ever been sold in a like period of its history.

An added impetus has been given to the final stage of this campaign with the approach of the Christmas season, for many practical housewives will receive as gifts Electrolux gas refrigerators. The company declares they guard the health and well-being of the family, allow better menus of great variety, and effect economies in food costs.

In speaking of the Electrolux gas refrigerator as a Christmas gift, J. D. Dingwell, jr., assistant general sales manager in charge of the retail department of the company, who helped plan and direct the campaign, said:

"Present sales of Elextrolux gas refrigerators as Christmas gifts indicate that this season our Christmas deliveries will be larger than any previous holiday season of the company. November sales this year were more than 400 per cent greater than those of last year and the same trend is continuing in December.

Operates Silently.

"The Electrolux refrigerator appeals to modern housewives due to its lack of machinery, silence and lowest operation cost. It prevents food spoilage by maintaining proper temperature at all times and makes possible the economical use of leftovers. It provides plenty of ice cubes for chilled beverages and permits the making of delicious desserts. The Electrolux refrigerator actually pays for itself when one counts the cost of ice and the waste through food spoilage. It can be purchased on the convenient company plan for about 15 cents a day.

The Electrolux is especially appropriate as a Christmas gift for the entire fatmily, for in winter as well as in summer proper refrigeration of the household food supply is equally important. In the past women have not associated winter with the need of food protection. This is a fallacy, however, because the kitchen, in which food is stored, is a part of the living quarters of the home and as such is kept at a temperature of about 70 degrees.

It is always summer in the kitchen and food will spoil if kept unprotected very long at this temperature. Even food kept in cellars is not properly protected, for although the cellar is usually cooler than the kitchen, its temperature is rarely as low as 50 degrees. Often dust, ashes or other conditions make food storage in such places unsanitary.

Flame Does All Work.

"In the new air-cooled Electrolux gas refrigerator a tiny gas flame does all the work. This refrigerator is absolutely silent with lack of vibration and longer life, for it has no moving parts and there is nothing to wear out. It provides carefree operation with a minimum of inconvenience for there is little need of service and its low cost of operation finds favor in the balancing of household budgets.

In the gas refrigerator no water is needed and a harmless refrigerant is used, hermetically sealed in steel. Its operation is constant and cold remains steady and crisp, protecting food. Defrosting is accomplished without stopping and a plentiful supply of sparkling ice cubes is available at all times.

"Trigger tray release allows the pulling out of trays without effort and the temperature regulator permits the speeding up for freezing of ice cubes and frozen desserts. Soundly constructed of the best materials, the Electrolux gas refrigerator has a porcelain interior which is sanitary and is easy to clean, with no seams or corners where dirt can collect. Its two-temperature chilling unit maintains uniform temperature inside, no matter how suddenly room temperatures may vary.

"The gift of an Electrolux gas refrigerator means much to the housewife and provides proper refrigeration to protect the family's health throughout the year."

Stain Needs Foundation Of Turpentine and Oil

In staining new interior wood, a coat of liquid composed of equal parts of raw linseed oil and turpentine should first be applied as a foundation. When this coat is dry the stain should be applied over it. When the stain has been on the surface for five or ten minutes wipe off the surplus with a dry rag.

Licensing of Mechanics Wins Support of Auto Repairmen

Strong Faction Favoring Efficiency Regulation Forms in Trade.

By William Ullman.

Motor car owners who have dreamed of that Utopia in which they will take their cars into a service station or repair shop for attention and receive it back always in perfect condition may yet find the dream come true. The trend, hopefully, is in that direction.

It manifests itself in the growing sentiment that the automotive maintenance trade would benefit itself and its patrons by lending its support to a degree of regulation that would require the licensing of mechanics and the shops in which they work. Heretofore, whatever of this opinion was to be found in the community existed apart from the trade itself. Now, however, those engaged in the repair shop and service station field are coming around, to some extent, to the feeling that the whole enterprise suffers because of the unsatisfactory performance of the minority.

It never has been true, as car owners have said, that good workmanship at reasonable prices is an impossibility in the maintenance field. The story has been grossly exaggerated, in fact. However, it has not been entirely without a basis, as evidenced in the continuing fight on the part of reputable dealers to eliminate the unqualified and unscrupulous.

Retail Code May Give Key.

This fight now is taking the form, here and there, of organized dealer support for proposed licensing legislation which would call for the regulation of such shops, from the standpoint of adequate equipment and qualified skilled mechanics. It would be inaccurate to say that the fight has reached the climactic stage. Yet in two States the most enthusiastic proponents of such legislation have been organized automotive trade groups.

It may eventuate that the automotive retail trade code will be a factor giving impulse to definite action in this direction. It has brought the retail trade into closer harmony than ever before. The group most active in the agitation for mechanic and shop licensing has a larger arena in which to voice its opinion that its proposal offers benefits to the trade as well as its patrons.

Inspection System Defects.

Many of those who have watched the operation of compulsory mechanical inspection laws for motor vehicles in the ten States which have such regulations have come to the conclusion that two things are wrong with them. One is that inspections should be twice yearly instead of once; the second that such a requirement should apply nationally instead of to less than one-fourth of the States.

That, of course, is not the total viewpoint on the subject. Others maintain that the mechanical condition factor in accidents is woefully small and that inspections are altogether unnecessary. The relatively higher average age of cars in service today, however, is modifying this particular slant on the subject.

Police Accept Robot Signals.

That antipathy of the policeman to the traffic light which manifested itself several years ago in the officer's loud protest that nothing could equal his merit in handling traffic gradually has disappeared. The real reason is that the policeman has learned that the robot traffic director is not going to cost him his job.

As a matter of fact, it has not even displaced him in the field of traffic direction. It is the policy of most metropolitan areas to assign officers to traffic control jobs during rush hours at intersections which, before light installations on main thoroughfares, went unpoliced because of inadequate personnel.

Had you noticed how many times you find a new corner being controlled as a result of this system?

Faster Speed in Second.

Does your car have a particularly fast pick-up in second speed? Most of the newer cars do.

There is a tip in that circumstance which all motorists would do well to heed; namely, that where second is a fast gear, it would be well to start from a standstill in low. If second happens to be geared for speed, it is not suited to pulling, therefore overcoming the inertia of the vehicle in the low gear will obviate the need for clutch slipping, which will lead to trouble eventually if the start always is made in second.

Our Traffic Rules.

Traffic regulations require two headlights at the front of a car even though one light could be used which would give approximately the same volume and distribution of light. Why?

The reason is that automobile headlights not only are supposed to illuminate the road, but to light up the car which carries them. Two lights provide an outline of the vehicle, which enables oncoming traffic accurately to gauge clearance distance. The reason for the regulation is evident in the difficulty faced in passing a "one-eyed" car.

Planes Now Carrying Winter Vacationists to Tropical Playgrounds Over Night

Modern Flying Speed Erases Long Days of Travel by Sea

Week's Cruise Carries Traveler to 33 Countries Along Caribbean and on East Coast of South America, Far from Season's Cold.

Wings over the Spanish Main! What an intriguing thought for winter-weary Americans! Yet more than just a thought—a living actuality for thousands of modern travelers who are choosing their play lands nowadays from an ever-widening panorama. Across the caravels of Columbus and Morgan, of Drake and the immortal Capt. Kidd, winged liners of the air are daily plying the sky paths with men, mail and merchandise to the Southern Americas beyond the horizon.

Cuba and Colombia, Haiti and Honduras, Panama and Peru, Mexico, Jamaica, Brazil, Argentina! What pictures these names conjure—what thrilling historical pageantry they represent—Columbus, Cortez, Pizarro, San Martin—Inca, Maya and Aztec. We have lived with these names since childhood, yet only dreamed of seeing the lands they represent. Today they lie literally at our front door.

Giant liners of the sky can whisk you away to these intriguing foreign shores in a few brief hours—can take you to a new world, teeming with interest, where tropic blossoms paint each wall with living flame . . . endless ranks of royal palms—above glistening coral beaches; new faces, new customs, musical languages, romantic legends, leisurely, courteous races with a warm smile and hearty hospitality for the visitor from the North.

Winter Vacation Lure.

The utter annihilation of time and distance by these big "Clipper ships of the air" has not only pushed the horizons to unbelievable distances; it has opened new travel opportunities to a vast army of winter vacationists with only the usual two weeks to spend away from home. By reducing travel time from weeks to days and from days to hours, these big air liners have brought 104 glamorous cities in 33 foreign countries and colonies to the south within the span of an ordinary fortnight's holiday.

That traveling America has made eager use of its new opportunity is proved by the records of Pan-American Airways, showing nearly a quarter of a million people have traveled 67,000,000 miles in 5 years on its aerial routes to South America. Last year an average of 5,000 passengers monthly flew to the tropics. So far this year the average is well above 6,000.

The airline formula is a simple one—travel in a third the time—on short jumps, even quicker. Thus the winter vacationist may go three times as far or he can spend extra days enjoying the tropic delights of Cuba, Nassau, Jamaica, Haiti, Puerto Rico, Panama or any land he chooses to visit.

Two Days and Far Away.

With the domestic airlines spanning the continent in a single day and night and with the country's fastest trains speeding up their schedules to augment the plane service to the international air terminals at Miami and Tampa, Fla., and Brownsville, Tex., it is actually possible to reach a fascinating foreign country within two days from almost any city in the United States.

Nassau and Havana, the two most popular pleasure capitals on the international airline, are but two hours from the United States by air. South America is but 27 hours away with an overnight stop in Jamaica. Any point in the tropic Caribbean is now within two and one-half days of the United States and the most distant capital of the Southern Hemisphere can be reached in seven days with every night spent "ashore" in a new and fascinating foreign country.

The age-old barriers to surface travel mean nothing to the air tourist. Mountains, jungles, rivers and oceans glide past in an effortless procession, unrolling before the air passenger a life-size map of the fascinating lands beneath. Every mountain and every stream is seen in its true relation to the entire picture.

A Venture Aloft.

But grab your sun helmet and let's board a Clipper ship for an aerial swing through the tropics. It's Thursday morning and the big air liner is already at the dock in Miami, motors warmed up and engines idly turning over. One bell rings and the crew boards the ship—pilot, copilot, a radio operator, flight mechanic and steward. Two bells, and the passengers file aboard. An instant later the powerful motors thrum and the ship gathers rapid headway, foam and spray flying to either side as the pilot pulls the big craft up on the "step." Another brief second and we are off—our only sensation a rapid dropping away of the glistening bay below. We are soon beyond the easternmost key of the Florida coast and sailing serenely over the azure Gulf stream. Those tiny white streaks below are the wakes of plowing steamers. In a few moments the sea takes on a new tint. We are over the Bahama banks and gorgeous coral reefs, fathoms below the surface, seem near enough to touch in the crystal clear water. The tropic sea becomes a symphony of pastels—soft greens, blues and, here and there, a touch of yellow and crimson.

In an incredibly brief time a blue line appears on the horizon ahead and our first foreign landfall races up to meet us. It is the coast of Cuba, and a few moments later we are gliding to a landing in the sheltered bay at Nuevitas where four centuries ago Christopher Columbus sought refuge from a savage tropical storm.

Here we disembark for luncheon, but in a few moments we are off again eastward down the coast of Cuba, speeding toward the alluring and historic islands ahead. Soon the last mountain peak fades behind us and the welcoming arms of Haiti open ahead. Down the middle of the bay between the two jungle-covered peninsulas reaching out to the westward we soar at 100 miles an hour until the multicolored roofs of Port au Prince, glistening in the afternoon sunlight, loom up.

The Tomb of Columbus.

Tonight we are in a different world. We have turned back the clock a century in a day. French-speaking blacks, lovely palm-fringed beaches, quaint architecture, all contribute to make this dream city, nestling at the foot of gorgeous mountains, one of the most colorful spots in the entire Caribbean chain. We are nearly 1,000 miles from the United States, yet less than eight hours away by air.

Three hours farther is Santo Domingo, where the first chapter in the history of the New World was written. Here lie the bones of Christopher Columbus after four and a half centuries, enshrined in the great cathedral he founded, a treasure house of priceless mementos, ancient altars incrusted in solid gold, built by the Caribs under the lash of the Conquistadores, priceless paintings and hangings, gifts of Ferdinand, and Isabella and contemporary sovereigns. Everywhere are thrilling imprints of the conquerors of a new world still vivid through the centuries.

A picturesque flight of two and a half hours takes us to San Juan—the only land under the Stars and Stripes where Columbus set foot—a fascinating blend of modern American and sixteenth century Spain; home colony of Ponce de Leon, whose remains rest within the walls of the ancient cathedral, whose spirit still lives in the old city after 400 years. San Juan, one of the most popular of the Caribbean islands among American air tourists, offers endless possibilities for the vacationist—splendid hotels, golf, tennis, winter baseball, sailing, deep-sea fishing, beach clubs, lovely drives over the old hand-paved military roads across the island to famous Coamo Springs and Ponce, days filled with exciting sightseeing or luxurious indolence under the benign tropic sun, fanned by the cooling trade winds.

Galaxy of Tropical Cities.

From San Juan southward, the air tourist meets with an unforgettable tableau of tropic allure. An hour to the southeast, the airliners call at St. Thomas, seat of America in the Virgin Islands, and two hours and a half later come to rest for the night in the intriguing British settlement of St. Johns, Antigua.

A half day southward is Trinidad on the South American coast and only a day farther is the equator. Westward from Trinidad, along the rugged mountainous coast of Venezuela and Colombia is Panama, two leisurely flying days away. From the Canal Zone the air tourist may choose three routes home. One by way of Central America and Mexico to Brownsville, Tex., three days to the north. Another through Mexico, over the ageless Mayan ruins of Yucatan and on to Miami, by way of Havana, a delightful three-day aerial cruise.

Another route lies eastward to Barranquilla, Colombia, and thence northward across the longest over-water flight on any airline in the world to Jamaica, perpetual isle of June, 600 miles across the Caribbean from South America. From Jamaica it's only a leisurely nine-hour cruise back to the United States, calling en route at Cienfuegos, "city of a hundred fires," on Cuba's south coast, and Havana, glamorous capital of the "Pearl of the Antilles."

The aerial Clippers link a dozen countries in the incredibly brief span of a week. Down through the West Indies and southward from British Guiana, through Dutch and French Guiana, past Devil's Island, in a thrilling day from Georgetown the air tourist reaches Para, gateway to the Amazon, south of the equator.

West Coast Beckons, Too.

Three more days of aerial voyaging along the jungle-covered coast of Brazil, in and out of 15 cities, brings the traveler to Rio de Janeiro, affording an aerial glimpse before landing of what many discriminating voyagers consider the loveliest city of the world. Then to Montevideo, resort capital of the southern world, and up the River Platte to that wonder capital of the Argentine, Buenos Aires, the "Paris of the West," is but a single day's flight.

No less intriguing is the aerial route above South America's west coast. The broad Caribbean that once took so many days to cross is but a 6-hour flight for the clippers. From Miami or Tampa to Havana, over Cuba to Jamaica, thence straight across the tropic indigo of the sea to Barranquilla, Colombia, between breakfast and lunch time. A few more hours to Panama, two leisurely travel days from the United States where begins the veritable "magic carpet" cruise down the western edge of a mighty continent.

Over the trail of Pizarro's desperate adventurers to Ecuador's equator city, Guyaquil, and the tip of northern Peru—thence aboard sturdy, trimotored air liners across the storied land of the ancient Incas and Lima, "City of Kings," redolent with Spanish colonial charm, heaped with priceless treasures faithfully preserved through the turbulent centuries. Vistas of boundless deserts south, reaching to the rock wall of the Andes; Arequipa, Mount Misti, llama caravans, river valley oases, Tacna, Arica. Coastal Chile, where great nitrate plants trace their curious patterns in the drifting sands to Santiago, the splendid capital of Chile beneath the shadows of the towering Cordilleras. Thence on to an exquisite sensation—to cross the top of the world over the mighty Andes themselves, past Aconcagua, highest peak of the Western Hemisphere—the thrilling panorama of a thousand snow-crested peaks, looking down upon the very roof of the earth—then smoothly, swiftly across the vastness of the pampas to queenly Buenos Aires.

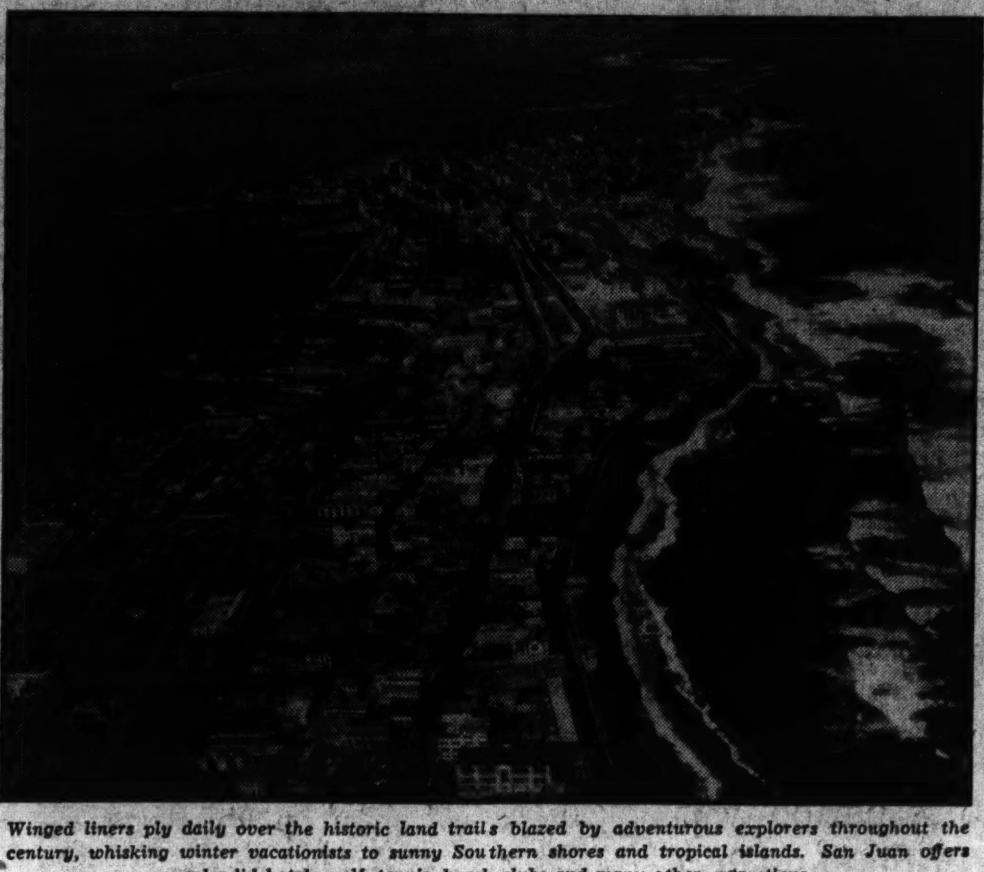
Planes Dwarf Locomotives.

Seven days to span a hemisphere! Two weeks to circle a sea and a continent—to see 30 countries, the world's greatest mountain scenery, greatest river, primitive jungle, titanic cities, around a new world and back home again within the brief limits of an ordinary vacation.

Matching in interest the many alluring lands which they visit are the great flying Clipper ships which make these trips possible. Veritable liners of the sky, powered by four huge motors, developing more horsepower than an ordinary locomotive, these 17-ton aerial giants lead the aircraft of the world in size, in efficiency and in luxury of travel comforts afforded the 44 passengers carried within their five spacious cabins.

Marking a tremendous step forward in air transport development, these famous Clippers are the flagships of the great fleet of 150 airliners of the Pan-American Airways system, which are daily flying America's international network of 27,000 miles of airways, from Alaska southward through 100 degrees of latitude to Argentina.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Viewed From the Air



Winged liners ply daily over the historic land trails blazed by adventurous explorers throughout the century, whisking winter vacationists to sunny Southern shores and tropical islands. San Juan offers splendid hotels, golf, tennis, beach clubs and many other attractions.

Latin America, Air Traveler's Lecture Topic

Van Dusen's Talk Tuesday to Be Accompanied by Fine Films.

Experiences that come to the traveler on an air journey over the West Indies and around the South American continent will be described and illustrated Tuesday night at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth street and New York avenue, in the seventh of a series of travel talks sponsored by The Washington Post.

Rex Martin, assistant director of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce, will introduce the speaker, William I. Van Dusen, who is an experienced air traveler and authority on South American subjects.

Mr. Martin is in direct charge of airways for the Bureau of Aeronautics and is in a large part responsible for the development of aids to aerial navigation. Incidentally, the pioneer air line that extends over 30 countries and colonies of South America is an American project and uses American planes and equipment.

Beautiful motion pictures, with sound and music, will be used by Mr. Van Dusen to supplement his own impressions and descriptions of Latin America and its people. The historical pageantry representing the discovery period of Columbus in the West Indies, the origin of the Maya and the ruins of the Aztec capitals deep in the jungles of Yucatan, together with the land of the ancient Incas, are blended with the colorful life and customs of present-day civilization in the New World.

The purpose of these weekly lectures is to acquaint readers of The Washington Post with portions of the world from which international news comes to The Post through the medium of the Associated Press and other news-gathering facilities. It also demonstrates modern modes of travel, such as the airplane that so conspicuously will figure in the lecture Tuesday.

The entire series of lectures covers 20 subjects, of which "Wings Over the Americas" will be the seventh. Reserved season tickets are available at the cost of $3.50 for the remaining fourteen travelogues, or admission to each individual lecture, at the rate of 25 cents, at the Masonic Auditorium box office on lecture evenings.

Iceland Holds Tourist Lures, Rich in Culture of Vikings

Although Off Beaten Trail, Island Dominion Boasts Modern Comforts and Its People Welcome Newcomers, American Visitors Find.

By Lora Kelly.

Iceland, to most Americans, is merely a dot on the map, where some transatlantic fliers stop to refuel and wait for the fog to lift.

It is popularly pictured as a land of ice and snow, whose people are primitive, garbed like Eskimos and living on whale blubber and gumdrops left by explorers.

But if the sky trail recently blazed by the Lindberghs across the top of the world ever becomes a commonplace route of travel, visitors to the first port on the airway to Europe will have the surprise of their lives.

For Reykajavik is a modern city, rich in the cultural traditions of a thousand years. It has a well equipped university, a museum containing many rare treasures indicative of its centuries of civilized history, newspaper offices, beauty shops, radios, and even traffic problems on its thoroughfares. A stalwart young Viking in official blue uniform is likely to ask you where in Valhalla you think you are going. But if your car carries a California license tag he'll probably be lenient.

Visitors Are Few.

Icelanders are kind to dumb strangers. So far they haven't had many. Last summer three shiploads of Americans put in at this faraway northern port only a few days apart. Unless you travel on one of these special cruises or fly in your own plane, the only way to get there is by boat from Scotland, 500 miles away. A steamer from Leith makes the round trip once a week.

Nominally under the protecting wing of Denmark, Iceland's government enjoys a modified home rule, acquired in 1904. She has no army, navy or fortifications. Althing—the Parliament—celebrated its thousandth anniversary three years ago. Its governmental problems are mainly concerned with the fishing industry, from which the island derives its main support. Icelanders are for the most part law-abiding, and the jail is seldom occupied.

It takes nine days on a fast liner to reach Iceland from New York. As the ship approaches the harbor one sees low, purple hills, barren of any foliage, surrounding Faxa Bay. The big liner lies well out to sea, for the harbor is shallow and we must go ashore in tenders.

Tourist Money No Lure.

Half the populace is down to meet us, for the arrival of a shipload of Americans means a big day in Reykajavik—a big day socially, however, and not commercially. Icelanders are not interested in separating the tourist from his money.

It was on a Saturday afternoon that our party landed. More than 300 American women, amply provided with express checks, some of which had been converted into Iceland currency, wanted to go shopping. There were no Blue Eagles in evidence, but the store doors were locked.

"It iss the law," explained one of the young women guides when besieged by the would-be shoppers.

Only the tourist agency, with a few trinkets on its shelves, was open for business. One observed pairs of rubber boots made in Akron, Ohio, dangling from a shelf, but rubber boots make awkward souvenirs to carry home, so we contented ourselves with post cards and stamp collections.

The people are friendly, especially the children. Well cared for, well clad, these plump, rosy-cheeked youngsters won the hearts of all the visitors, even if there was some slight difficulty in making ourselves understood. Smiles need no interpreters, however, and even those of us who dispensed no largesse were just as popular as the old gentlemen from New York who lavished dime-store whistles on every child he saw.

It had been announced previously on board that a concert would be given in the evening by the Icelanders. Despite our afternoon visit ashore we were hardly prepared for the further surprises in store for us.

Natives Dress Smartly.

Comfortably settled on the boat deck anticipating a novelty, the befurred and bejeweled dowagers gasped as a delegation of tall, handsome young men in full evening attire, with white ties, swallow tails and everything that a well-dressed Gridiron diner wears, assembled on the platform.

Following them came a group of young women as smartly gowned as any of the passengers who had shopped in Fifth avenue. A few of them, however, wore the native costumes, now seen only on such occasions as this. Most of the golden-haired girls wore Hollywood haircuts—for there are movies in Reykjavik—and only a few displayed the long flaxen braids affected by the daughters of the Vikings throughout the ages.

The ship's printer previously had distributed the program of folksongs with both the Icelandic and English text. The first few measures of the choral club showed that here was no ordinary assemblage of singers. Carefully cultivated voices blended beautifully in an air that sounded strangely familiar. Programs fluttered. The first number scheduled was a charming poetic gem which dealt in sentiment about the homeland and the mother tongue. So the program read.

Just then, 500 patriotic Americans made a sudden discovery. The vocalists weren't warbling about mountain-clefts, icebergs and howling winds at all. They were singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" in Icelandic, and the audience arose with more haste than dignity. One could see the twinkles in the eyes of the singers who were obviously amused at the slow-witted Americans.

Daylight at 11 P. M.

This choral club, by the way, was the local K. F. U. M., which, if you must know, means the Y. M. C. A.

After a concert of folksongs—and it was still daylight at 11 o'clock—wrestling matches were staged. This form of sport, known as the "Glima," is an ancient pastime, and is vastly different from the grunts-and-groans affairs in the States.

Lithe young athletes, true descendants of the hardy Vikings, ranged themselves on the platform, and pair by pair, staged a graceful acrobatic performance.

The evening was concluded with a dance in the palm garden deck, where the Icelanders proved they could step to American jazz as well as they could sing and wrestle.

At 2 o'clock in the morning, as darkness was about to descend over Faxa Bay, the last tenders took the entertainers ashore. As we leaned over the rail to watch them depart, we heard another familiar song over the waters—this time it was "Show Me the Way to Go Home."

Admittedly Iceland has but little lure for the traveler in winter time. There are only four hours of daylight at this time of the year. The average temperature in the winter is about 30 degrees and the summer temperature is around 47, somewhat surprising figures to one who had always pictured it as an ice-bound country throughout the year.

City Snug, Well Kept.

Reykjavik has several extremely modernistic examples of architecture. The flat planes and odd color combinations contrast strangely with some of the corrugated-iron houses of the old days. Its streets can not be called picturesque in the sense that many Old World cities display, but everywhere there is evidence of snug comfort and well-being.

"How do you spend your long winter evenings?" Miss Gudrun Danielsson, member of the choral club, who later served us as guide, was asked by members of our party. She smiled.

"In about the same manner as I suppose you Americans do," she replied. "We have dances, we sing, we have parties, we listen to the radio and we go to the movies. We also have lectures at the university and we read, so you see time doesn't hang heavily on our hands."

She told us that she worked in a shoe store from 9 to 5. She was one of a group of young women drafted for guide duty because they could speak English. Another young woman guide learned her English in Canada when a child.

"We are always happy to have American visitors, for it gives us a chance to practice our English," she said.

The Icelander's appreciation of the fine arts is not limited to music and the northland sagas. The studio of Emil Jonsson, the sculptor, who fashioned the beautiful statue of Ingollur Arnarson, one of the old Viking heroes, is a center of interest for all artists. This statue is one of the show pieces of the city, rising to a majestic height. A striking reminder of the island's ancient heritage.

Fishing, Chief Industry.

The capital has a population of about 20,000, being the largest town on the island. There are numerous small villages in the back country and along the shore where the fishermen ply their trade. One sees no horses but there are many sturdy, shaggy little ponies that can pull tremendous loads. Being thoroughly modern, however, the automobile is the favorite form of transportation, the inhabitants generously lending them to visitors who wish to make sightseeing trips to the site of the old Parliament or any of the villages in the interior. The roads are excellent, too, though narrow, as judged by American standards.

Since the island is practically treeless the roadside scenery has the charm of novelty. Low hills alternate with flat plateaus, and when one reaches a shore road, the stranger is impressed by curious, coffin-like boxes covered with canvas, which dot the flat expanse.

Hundreds of these are spaced in rows, and you are relieved to discover that they are merely neatly stacked piles of codfish. When you reach the village you have no doubt as to its principal commercial output. Your nose knows. Long rows of salmon and codfish hung on lines, like Monday's wash, and there were nets piled about. Out in the harbor the fleet of steam trawlers awaited their skippers, for it was Sunday, and the Icelanders are, practically all of them, church-going Lutherans.

The Hotel Borg is the scene of much activity. A gold and white ballroom with chromium and crystal chandeliers and gilt chairs, is where the elite of Reykjavik gathers for its dances. This hotel, built three years ago when the thousandth anniversary of the founding of the Parliament was celebrated, is as modern in all its appurtenances as any up-to-date American hostelry.

If this little island, which nestles on the Arctic Circle ever becomes a regular port on the northern air route to Europe, travelers will leave the friendly city with regret and will long remember the warmth of the welcome.

Far Northern Iceland Capital Is Thriving City

Sixth Marine Reserve To Hold Holiday Party

The second annual Christmas tree and Santa Claus party for children of the officers and men of the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade will be held at the Armory, 458 Indiana avenue northwest, Friday night.

Sergt. "Chief" Guyon, Eastern High School coach, again will be the Santa Claus. There will be tree gifts for all the youngsters attending.

With the furnishings and fixtures of the quarters on Indiana avenue complete, the Sixth Brigade now boasts of one of the finest clubs in the District. Smoking rooms, lounging rooms and libraries and reading rooms have been furnished for both officers and men. There is also a post exchange, operated on the same basis as exchanges at regular Marine Corps posts.

Recruiting for the brigade for the coming year is proceeding. Applicants for enlistment in the various battalions apply for enlistment on the night on which the unit desired holds its regular meeting. Applicants for enlistment in headquarters and medical units apply on Mondays. Those for the first battalion apply on Tuesdays, for the second battalion on Wednesdays, and for the third battalion on Fridays.

Medical examinations are conducted on each Monday night, and, after accepted recruits thoroughly understand that they are applying for enlistment in a Marine Corps expeditionary organization, requiring attendance at drills and classes as well as in camp each year, the oath of allegiance is administered on the last Monday night of each month.

K. C. Lodge Will Give New Year's Eve Dance

Washington Council, Knights of Columbus, met last Tuesday evening at the Knights of Columbus Club, with Deputy Grand Knight Harold F. Jones presiding in the absence of Grand Knight Michael J. Racioppi.

Washington Council will hold its annual New Year's Eve dance at the Mayflower Hotel. Members of other local councils are invited to attend. Lecturer Jack Coyle of Washington Council and his committee are in charge of reservations.

The Alhambra Order held an oyster roast at Auth's Saturday.

The next meeting of Washington Council will be Friday evening, December 22. The annual Christmas party follows the meeting.

Excelsior Club Meets.

The Excelsior Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. C. B. Green, 1669 Columbia road northwest, with the president, Mrs. Harry Newman, in the chair.

The program consisted of a paper on "The Life of Myrtle Reed," by Mrs. Newman, and recitations by Mrs. Mattie Queen-Ewing.

An appeal for old clothing for the needy was made by Mrs. Hunter, of the Federation of Clubs. Those who answered roll call were Mrs. D. J. Donovan, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Emily Jarboe, Mrs. E. V. Carr, Mrs. Alice V. Creque, Mrs. Julia Webb, Mrs. S. L. Dorsey and Mrs. Donovan. The next meeting will be on January 2 at the home of Mrs. Clarence Langley, 5709 Ninth street northwest.

Col. Lawrence Simonds To Go on Retired List

Concluding an active service career of more than 40 years, Col. Lawrence B. Simonds, Infantry, for the last seven years in charge of Army recruiting in the Third Corps Area, will be placed upon the retired list. Retirement is upon his own application, approved by the President.

Col. Simonds was born in New York City in 1871 and enlisted in the Regular Army in 1893. He was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry two years later and promoted through various grades to colonel of Infantry on July 1, 1920.

He saw service in the Santiago campaign in 1898 and against the hostile Moros during the Philippine insurrection in 1902-1903. He also served under Pershing on the Mexican border and in Mexico. During the World War he helped organize the Twentieth Division. In France he was adjutant general of the Ninth Corps, Second American Army.

Elks to Plan Function At Meeting Tomorrow

The entertainment committee of B. P. O. E. No. 15 will meet tomorrow night to plan a "ladies' night," to be held early in January.

Exalted Ruler, Joseph P. Haggerty has appointed Charles L. Rouse, chairman of the dance committee, to succeed William F. Chrisman, who recently resigned because of business activities.

Five new candidates were initiated last Wednesday night.

The building committee appointed several months ago to investigate the advisability of making structural changes and refurnishing the building will report this month. The committee includes James E. Colliflower, chairman; Victor L. Wooldridge, Howard Peters, William Karsunky, Gustave Brahler and William S. Shelby, recording secretary.

Two Named Lieutenants.

Two Washington physicians were named last week by the War Department as first lieutenants in the Medical Corps Reserve of the Army. They are Dr. Stanley J. Gordon, of 3033 Sixteenth street northwest, and Dr. Henry Rabnowitz, of Children's Hospital.

The promotion of First Lieut. Charles H. Beardsley, Ordnance Reserve, to the rank of captain, also was announced.

Radio Waves and Ripples

An imposing line-up of world-famous talent has been signed for a concert series opening on N. B. C. this evening at 6 o'clock. Here are some of them: Violinist Jascha Heifitz, Metropolitan Opera Company Barytone Richard Bonelli, New York Philharmonic Symphony Conducter Bruno Walter (top, left to right) and Metropolitan Sopranos Lucrezia Bori (left) and Lily Pons.

IN a special two-hour concert, Columbia brings the St. Louis Symphony under the direction of Vladimir Gloschmann to the air waves today.

Opening at 3 p. m. with a reading of Mozart's suite, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," the program lists Brahm's "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor," intermission commentary by Lawrence Gilliman and Tschaikowsky's overture-fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet."

Founded in 1881, the St. Louis Symphony is one of the oldest symphonic organizations in the country. Gloschmann went to St. Louis as guest conductor in 1931 and remained as permanent director. He is a native of Paris.

The New York Philharmonic Symphony returns to the same period a week from today.

Because he "never worked harder before or since," Les Bowman, WJSV technical supervisor, will never forget the most exciting time of his life which began with a faint SOS clicking into his ears as he sat in the radio room of the S. S. America one freezing, gale-driven January day in 1928 and ended with the midocean transfer of 34 seamen from the Italian freighter Florida.

Bowman picked up the Florida signal soon after noon. Twenty-four hours later through the crackle of the storm he made out the ship's location. From then on all three of the ship's operators were at the controls almost constantly, replying to press association queries, receiving messgaes congratulating the America's captain and crew for one of the most heroic rescues in history. And when they finally reached New York, when it seemed that at last they might sleep and eat, another press association offered sufficient inducement for them to write their version of the rescue.

Australia and Alaska are the only spots on the globe Bowman has not visited. Radio took him to sea when he was 19 and kept him there until soon after the rescue of the Florida.

It was his broadcasting of an account of his part in the life-saving that got Bowman his first important radio job on land. An engineer at Columbia's WABC recognized his voice, offered him a job. Bowman refused, traveled with Paul Whiteman as his personal engineer instead, but later returned to Columbia as assistant division engineer.

Before he was 15, Bowman was operating under an amateur license. At 18 he was a licensed commercial operator and studying more radio at Valparaiso University in Indiana. A year later he went to New Orleans and signed as radio operator aboard the Yucatan.

Mrs. Roosevelt has set a record for First Lady broadcasting, appearing before the microphone 17 times in less than 10 months, according to an N. B. C. count. Mrs. Hoover spoke only 10 times during her White House stay, Mrs. Coolidge with even greater infrequency.

The President has made 20 broadcasts, members of his Cabinet 107. Secretary Wallace leads the Cabinet broadcasters with 21 speeches. Postmaster General Farley is next with 16. War Secretary Dern, Interior Secretary Ickes and Commerce Secretary Roper follow with 13 each.

Vice President Garner has been completely silent, insofar as broadcasts are concerned, since his inauguration.

Copeland is the most frequent senatorial speaker with 13. Speaker Rainey tops the House with 7.

Altogether, the President, Mrs. Roosevelt, the Cabinet and members of the House and Senate have consumed 92 hours and 22 minutes of air time.

A New York agency has announced itself ready to do a radio advertising business on an international scale. That shows how far our networks have gone with transoceanic broadcasting.

Exclusive contracts in Latin America advertising areas have been obtained. Key South American stations are lined up, Program material and programs are ready for American manufacturers and exporters.

Jascha Heifetz makes his only microphone appearance this year and Bruno Walter his last this season in National's symphonic offering at 6 this evening.

Heifetz's part in the program will include Moszkowski's "Guitarre," his own arrangement of Godowsky's "Alt Wien" and Bloch's "Baal Shem."

N. B. C. apparently has decided that with the coming of this series its Sunday program has become a trifle too heavy, for the N. B. C. Symphony broadcasts with Egon Petri, pianist, have been moved over to Wednesday at 10 p. m.

Stocks Droop Again in Active Short Session

Brisk Selling Develops, Ending in Rise; Deals, 896,570 Shares.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Stocks became more active on the downside today and final prices showed numerous losses of 1 to around 3 points in a turnover of 896,570 shares.

Brisk selling developed midway through the short session. Pressure relaxed later and there was some recovery, but last quotations were not far from the lows.

It was rather widely assumed that the absence of change in the gold price and narrowness of dollar fluctuations disappointed many speculators who had been looking for fresh upward revision of the R. F. C.'s daily foreign gold quotation.

Market Sinks Slowly.

Beginning hesitantly, the market eased slowly and then ran into a flurry of offerings which suggested that professionals had turned to the selling side.

With the short interest small and new buyers still cautious, support was rather feeble for a number of favorites. Bonds were a trifle easy, but leading commodities seemed little disturbed by upsets in stock market equilibrium.

American Can, American Telephone, American Sugar, Penney and Chesapeake Corporation were down to the extent of 2 points or more while Allied Chemical lost 3½. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, du Pont, General Motors, Chrysler, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Santa Fe and New York Central were off major fractions to 1½. Utilities, with the exception of Telephone, were fairly steady and the decline in rails was less than that of industrials.

Gold Buying Guesses.

Market followers were left to guess as to just how much gold the Government has actually bought abroad, whether purchases were to increase and when the price advance was to be resumed after more than a fortnight of no change.

It was officially stated the other day that the gold policy would be continued; undoubtedly speculative quarters took this to mean soon.

Dollar rates against foreign exchanges favored the latter to a slight degree. Sterling, after advancing nearly 2 cents, retained only ¾ cent of its rise, finishing at $5.12. French francs ended the day at 6.14½ cents, which indicated the dollar's gold value, on that basis, as approximately 63.78 per cent of parity.

London Gold Price.

The London gold price persistently hovers about $2 under that fixed by Washington, a circumstance which has attracted considerable notice.

As usual at a week-end, business and trade news was light. Further improvement in steel operations, notwithstanding approach of the normally dull holiday period, would not be surprising, in view of the greater activity in public works and other projects which promise to give orders to this important industry.

Automobile makers will soon be going into larger productions of new models. Meanwhile, the Christmas shopping season heads for its peak, which bids fair to be the best in some time.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Copper—Buyers were more active last week in both the domestic and foreign markets. Cables to the trade said demand abroad was in good volume with the price ranging between 8 cents and 8.125 cents a pound.

Silk—A broader inquiry for holiday silk merchandise is reported by both ready-to-wear and piece goods departments of stores in the New York district.

Lead—Current buying is rather small, and centering on carlots for January shipment. Prices are firm and unchanged at 4.15 cents a pound, New York, and 4.05 cents, East St. Louis.

Cotton Towels—Jobbers and retailers were more in evidence in primary markets last week, providing considerable business in connection with January and February requirements. Prices were firm in most quarters.

Fuel Oil—Trade reports say that prices of some grades show an upward tendency; general demand is satisfactory.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—There was little business done on the stock exchange today. Aviation shares improved while German bonds and transatlantic issues dropped. The market closed steady.

Berlin—Uncertainty regarding the Reichsbank's moratorium statement on debt payments to be issued Monday was reflected on the boerse, causing an unsettled closing.

Paris—Uneasiness over the budget caused general weakness in rentes, bank shares and international issues on the bourse. The market was stagnant and closed heavy.

Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 16 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—The wool market was very quiet during the early part of the past week, but recently a scattered increase in buying was noticed. In most transactions the prices were at the same levels that had prevailed during the previous week. An occasional type of wool that is in rather small supply realized a slight advance. Trading in greasy wools was mostly on the finer quality territory lines.

Naval Stores Firm.

Savannah, Dec. 16 (A.P.).—Turpentine, firm, 41½; sales, 77; receipts, 261; shipments, 283; stock, 15,499. Rosin, firm; sales, 1,374; receipts, 1,269; shipments, 640; stock, 105,730. Morgenthau's Advice on Taxes

Recalls Some First Principles That We Have Been Overlooking

By Ralph West Robey.

It would be difficult to have any better advice on principles to follow in reforming our tax system than that given by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau in his testimony before the Committee on Ways and Means. One may say, if you like, that it was elementary and obvious, but this does not lessen its soundness or desirability as a code to be followed in any new tax laws that are passed. In fact it seems to me that a return to some first principles by the Administration, not only in taxation but in various other parts of its economic and financial program, would be a most healthy development. We have been experimenting on taxes in the last few years, just as we now are experimenting on money, and the results have been bad.

The first point offered by Morganthau is that our income tax law "should be revised to eliminate any loopholes which now exist and to distribute the tax burden fairly among taxpayers." Secondly, he says, "legitimate business transactions should not be impeded by being driven to take uneconomic forms." Further that the income tax should take only "a reasonable toll from the business transactions in the community" as contrasted with being so high or unjust that it will "stop the traffic entirely." Finally, our system should be so devised "as to encourage the maximum of cooperation on the part of the great mass of honest taxpayers," which means that the provisions must be "inherently fair," and "be applied without discrimination."

Public Now Convinced Of Widespread Abuses.

Now, it needs no extensive argument to convince most people that our tax system at present does not comply with these simple principles. We have imposed levies which to a greater or lesser extent have forced business and capital into "uneconomic forms;" in many particulars we have not limited the imposition to a "reasonable toll" as measured by the relative amount being paid by other forms of activity; and, over a period of years there has grown up a mass of regulations and provisions providing so many loopholes that the public at large is convinced that the levies are not "inherently fair, and are being applied without discrimination," and consequently has ceased to have any desire to cooperate.

This does not mean that our tax laws have been passed without regard to fairness and justness or that the laws have been administered with a view of extending favors. Rather, the present situation is largely the result, or so it seems to me, of our having ridden through a period of prosperity when the general level of well-being was so high and money was pouring into the Treasury at such a rate that we got careless. Abuses developed, and we knew they were developing, but the public refuse to become aroused about them because at the moment they seemed insignificant. Trying to get the public to take an interest, too, was something like attempting to get a man who has just inherited a fortune to worry about his nickels and dimes.

Depression Has Complicated Problems to a Marked Degree

The problem in recent years, too, has been further complicated by the necessity of imposing new taxes as a result of the depression. So far this necessity has been met largely by slapping a tax on about anything that looked like it would stand it. In other words, our basic principle has been too nearly one of imposing taxes where there would be the least squawking, or more properly, the least effective squawking. It now is time to put an end to this and make a thorough overhauling of the tax system, for not only is our national debt some $7,000,000,000 larger than it was four years ago but it promises to get substantially larger unless a more effective tax system is devised.

As yet, however, it is useless to talk about the details of what the tax system should be. Before we can do this we must know what kind of a financial program the Administration is going to follow. If it persists in a policy which sooner or later must lead to printing-press money, any tax system will be inadequate. On the other hand, if it returns to sound financial principles it should be able not only to raise more money by taxation than we have been doing but to raise it in a more equitable manner and with less burden to business.

Prime Bonds Hold Steady in Quiet Market

Prices Drop Two-tenths as Sales Decline to $5,637,000.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Secondary loans lagged in today's brief bond market, apparently reflecting the sell-off in stocks, but prime investment maturities held fairly steady.

The trading activity dwindled considerably under that of the previous Saturday, sales totaling only $5,637,000, par value, compared with $7,117,000.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased two-tenths of a point. This average, at 74.1, was up three-tenths of a point on the week.

Little Helpful News.

Aside from continued optimistic reports of business and industry, there was little stimulating news for bonds. That the gold price again was unchanged apparently was a negligible factor.

The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the gold rate might be tilted next week, in view of word from Washington that no change in the administration's program was being considered.

United States Government securities did little. The turnover here was small. Gains of 1-32nd to 6-32nds of a point were shown by most of the liberties and treasuries, and the few declines ranged from 1-32nd to 3-32nds.

Losers of Fraction.

Carrier losses of fractions to a point or more were recorded by some loans of Baltimore & Ohio, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, International Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, Morris and Essex, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern and Wabash.

Issues of Central of New Jersey, Central of Georgia, Hocking Valley, New Haven, Frisco and some others were a bit higher.

Bonds of International Telephone and Postal Telegraph added a point or more to their yesterday's declines. On the other hand, loans of American & Foreign Power, Detroit Edison, Pacific Gas, Shell Union Oil, Standard Oil of New York and Youngstown Sheet & Tube improved fractionally.

The foreign section was dull and price changes generally unimportant.

Net income for the recent year is after a reserve of $4,267,000 for inventory price declines.

Loft, Inc., today reported net profit of $41,884 for the nine months ended September 30, against profit of $58,383 in the corresponding period of 1932. For the quarter ended September 30, the company had net loss of $64,294 against profit of $82,332 in the preceding quarter and loss of $43,281 a year ago. Sales for the first nine months aggregated $9,000,539, compared with $9,973,007 in the same period last year.

Weston Electrical Instrument Corp. today declared a 50 cent dividend on the Class "A" stock, payable January 2 to holdings of record December 26. This is the first payment since a similar amount was distributed on January 3 of this year.

Joseph T. Ryerson & Son Co. voted a dividend of 25 cents a common share, payable December 28 to stock of record December 21, its first payment since November 1, 1931, when 30 cents was disbursed.

The Northern Central Railroad today declared the regular semi-annual dividend of $2 a share, payable Jan. 15 to stock of record December 30.

Directors of West Texas Utilities Co. ordered a disbursement of 75 cents of the $6 cumulative preferred stock, payable January 2 to stock of record December 14. A similar payment was made three months ago.

Dividends due at this time on the $6 preferred and 6 per cent preferred stocks of the Central Illinois Public Service Co. were omitted by the directors. Three months ago a payment of 50 cents a share on both stocks was made.

The annual 6 per cent dividend of the Prudential Building Association was declared yesterday at the regular monthly board meeting of the directors. Payment will be made to stockholders of record as of December 5.

The annual stockholders meeting will be held January 9, notice to this effect being mailed to stockholders next week.

Satisfaction at the progress of the association, which was organized in July, 1929, was expressed by President Luther C. Steward. "Despite the depression during the past year, coupled with the 15 per cent pay cut in Federal workers, the association has shown a consistent and steady growth both in new members and in increasing deposits," President Steward declared.

U. S. Dollar Turns Steady on Markets

(Associated Press.)

After some early heaviness, the dollar steadied in foreign exchange dealings yesterday, and in New York closed only moderately off in relation to leading European currencies. The domestic gold price continued to hold at $34.01 an ounce.

At London the American monetary unit finished with a loss of 2¾ cents at $5.13½ to the pound. The pound ended in New York, however, at $5.12, off only three-fourths of a cent.

In Paris the dollar closed 11 centimes higher at an equivalent of 6.12 cents to the franc. The French exchange finished in New York at 6.14½ cents, up .02½ of a cent.

In terms of the closing New York franc rate, the dollar was valued at approximately 63.79 per cent of its gold parity, compared with 64.05 Friday and 61.01 a month ago. Based on the domestic gold price, the dollar had a value of about 60.77 per cent of its former parity.

Butter Prices Fall ¼ to ⅞ Per Pound

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Butter prices eased further today with the withdrawal of the Government from the open market.

Declines ranged from one-fourth to seven-eighths cent a pound with 92 score, a choice commercial grade, showing the full loss, dropping to 15½. The withdrawal of the National Dairy Market Corporation had generally been discounted with a drop of 3 cents on Thursday from 19 to 16 cents.

The Government now owns approximately 46,000,000 pounds of butter, and will open bids for an additional 15,000,000 pounds on December 28.

Future deliveries of butter showed firmness and closed from one-eighth to three-eighths cent higher.

The trade in general believes that the more than 100,000,000 pounds of butter in storage in excess of last year's figures will remain a weight on trade until it has actually been removed for relief purposes.

Selling Wave Sends Curb to Lower Level

Metals, Alcohols and Oils Ease; Dealing Totals 138,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—A moderate selling wave sent curb quotations fractions to more than a point lower today. The flurry, which was of brief duration, occurred at the turn of the first hour but at the close of the session the list was again dull and the trend even.

Utilities took little part in the selling but metals, alcohols, oils and specialties eased. General Tire & Rubber lost 4 points while Singer Manufacturing and Aluminum Co. of America sagged around 2. Canadian Industrial Alcohol "B," Gulf and Humble Oils, Hiram Walker, Newmont, New Jersey Zinc, Nowadel Agene, Parke Davis and Technicolor yielded sizable fractions to a point or so.

Transfers approximated 138,000 shares, compared with 116,000 for the previous Saturday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Holders of Cuban Cane Produce Co. 20-year debenture bonds have been advised by a protective committee that conditions in Cuba at this time make it impracticable to acquire of the company's property at a foreclosure sale to be held next month.

Directors of the Firestone & Rubber Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 10 cents on the common stock, payable January 20 to stock of record January 5. Directors and officers of the company were reelected at a meeting of stockholders following the directors' meeting.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported a small gain in subscribers in Maryland during the month of November, contrasting with a loss of 728 stations in the same month last year.

Favorable dividend changes this week numbered 29 compared with 43 the previous week, but still well above the average for the past two years, says Standard Statistics Co. There were eight resumptions, 3 increases, 17 extras and 1 initial payment. Unfavorable revisions totaled 10, one less than last week.

Beet sugar deliveries in the United States last month totaled 1,898,025 bags against 1,707,373 a year ago, reports the domestic sugar bureau.

Sales of reporting chain-store systems in the New York Federal Reserve District for November were 6 per cent higher than a year ago. The comparison was more favorable than in the preceding month and the rise was of about the same proportions as those of August and September.

Wheat Moves Upward Under Closing Buying

Rallies Wipe Out Losses in Early Trading; Oats and Corn Sink.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—End-of-the-week buying that in some quarters was ascribed to Government-sponsored sources gave the wheat market renewed strength late today.

Rallies in price virtually wiped out early losses of 1½ cents a bushel for wheat.

The rallies were aided by reports of persistent dearth of moisture throughout domestic winter wheat territory Southwest and by official estimates of the 1933 wheat crop in 41 countries, exclusive of Russia and China, showing a reduction of 6 per cent from last year.

Wheat Closes Irregular.

Wheat closed irregular at ½ cent decline to ⅛ advance, compared with yesterday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1⅝ down; oats, ¼ to ½ off, and provisions, unchanged to 5 cents lower.

The late bulge of wheat values pushed the market in most cases to well above the levels of the previous close, but the full gains were not held. The start was lower because of lack of aggressive buying here, with Liverpool reporting Argentina offering wheat freely abroad.

Regulation of Exchange.

Traders said a disturbing influence was proposed regulation of United States Grain Exchange operations and Government control of profits, measures which, it was contended, would curtail speculative interests and further reduce prices for the grower.

Around 84 cents for May wheat contracts, however, a disposition was shown to anticipate Government-financed support, such as apparently took place later.

Meanwhile, the weather map promised no decided general relief for dry districts.

Bank Clearings Of Week Rise 6.6 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 16.—Bank clearings show a further gain for the first half of December. The total for the second week of that month at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,088,151,000, an increase of 6.6 per cent over the amount reported for that week of last year. New York City clearings were $2,832,965,000 and exceeded those of a year ago by 8.5 per cent, while the total for all centers outside of New York of $1,255,186,000 was 2.6 per cent higher.

Relatively the best showing at outside cities continues at the West and South. Notably larger amounts are reported at Omaha, Louisville, Atlanta and Dallas. At some of the large Eastern centers, including New York, substantial gains appear. With the latter are Boston, Pittsburgh and Buffalo, while other points reporting an increase are Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Richmond, San Francisco, and Portland. A factor to be given consideration is the extremely reduced settlements a year ago, when many elements of disturbance prevailed. This week's clearings were below those for the five days of last week by $105,758,000; a year ago for the full week, there was a reduction of $223,544,000.

House of Lords Rules Gold Clause Is Valid

London, Dec. 16 (U.P.)—The House of Lords today upheld the gold clause contained in bonds of a Belgian utility unit, reversing a previous decision of the chancery division of the British high court.

In its decision, the House of Lords ruled that despite the suspension of the gold standard by the Belgian company, Societe Intercommunale Belge D'Electricite, of Brussels, must abide by the gold clause in its bearer bonds, which provides interest and principal be paid in gold coin of the United Kingdom.

Rapid Transit Makes Surplus For November

Company Return Contrasts With Deficit During 1932 Period.

Washington Rapid Transit Co. is the first local utility to submit its November statement of operations. It filed this report yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

In the net income item for last month, the report reveals a surplus of $563.57, as compared with a deficit in this item amounting to $4,890.41 in the month a year ago. This is an improvement of $5,453.98 in the comparison.

Net income for the 11 months of the current year presents a deficit of $46,284.94, as contrasted with one of $60,157.58 for the corresponding period in 1932, an improvement of $13,872.74.

Chairman of Archives.

Miss Rose L. Royce, of Washington Loan & Trust Co., has been appointed chairman of the archives committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, according to announcement yesterday of Robert H. Lacey, cashier of Columbia National Bank and chapter president.

This committee has the function of compiling, classifying and perpetuating records and data pertaining to the institute, which, in addition to their historical value, are extremely helpful to the various chapter committees and administrative officers.

Among the records of Washington Chapter may be found reports of a number of senior bank officials when they were actively connected with the local institute more than a quarter of a century ago. Many persons of national prominence have attended some of the annual banquets of the chapter, among them being William Jennings Bryan; "Uncle Joe" Cannon, former Speaker of the House of Represenatives; Lyman Gage, former Secretary of the Treasury; John W. Weeks, former Secretary of War, and a number of United States Senators and officials whose political and public achievements were outstanding.

Documents of Interest.

One of the documents of especial interest to be found among the archives of the chapter is the original roster containing the signatures of the 62 charter members who formed the Washington branch of this organization in December, 1901.

The following local bankers were among the organizers: Maurice Otterback, chairman of the board of Anacostia Bank; George W. White, president, National Metropolitan Bank; Ernest E. Herrell, president, International Finance Corporation; Joshua Evans, jr., vice president, Hamilton National Bank; C. D Ratcliffe, vice president, Munsey Trust Co.; E. Percival Wilson, secretary, National Savings & Trust Co.; F. R. Ullmer, treasurer, National Savings & Trust Co.; Samuel R. Baulsir, cashier, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; C. Louis Eckloff, assistant cashier, National Metropolitan Bank; W. F. D. Herron, assistant treasurer, Union Trust Co.; Frank P. Morse, manager, Charles D. Barney & Co., and Harry W. Finney, of the firm of Y. E. Booker & Co.

The chairman, Miss Royce, is a graduate of the American Institute of Banking and a member of the local chapter's board of governors. She was assistant secretary in 1928-29; secretary for the two succeeding years, and a member of the Institute's National women's committee in 1931-32. She attended institute National conventions in Philadelphia, Tulsa, Denver, and Pittsburgh as a delegate of Washington Chapter. The other members of the committee are Bernadine Huntt, American Security & Trust Co., and C. Fred Schreiner, First National Bank, Alexandria, Va.

Gold Standard Urged.

A copy of the recent resolution of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, urging maintenance of the gold standard, has been received from President Thomas P. Morgan, jr., president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association.

The resolution concludes:

"We, therefore, urge that the gold standard be maintained; that our currency be stabilized promptly, and that the people be assured that there will be no experiments with new monetary systems. We are convinced that the maintenance of the gold standard, the prompt stabilization of the currency, and assurance that nothing will be done to impair it, would do more than any other thing to restore confidence; to cause business to go forward, and to promote recovery. This country is still the richest in the world and with great capacity for further creation of wealth. With returning confidence it should resume its course toward an even greater and wider prosperity and well-being."

Oyster Trade Gains in 1933; New Markets

Employment in Industry Is Increased; More of Output Shipped.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 16 (AP).—Oyster distributors say they are tonging, shucking and shipping more of the luscious bivalves this season than in the past several years.

Employment in the oyster industry here has taken a proportionate rise and new markets have been opened up for the Norfolk trade.

One plant operator who said he is employing 500 persons as contrasted with 300 last season operates a fleet of oyster boats in Chesapeake Bay and Mobjack Bay.

25 Years Ago.

Twenty-five years ago, he said, 75 per cent of all marketable oysters that were shucked or shipped in this territory came from natural resources belonging to the state of Virginia.

In order to stock a sufficient supply, he said, it was necessary to maintain a fleet of boats with a carrying capacity of from 500 to 2,000 bushels or more.

He pointed out that the boats often spent several weeks buying a load of "shell stock," especially when unfavorable weather prevented the tonging boats from working steadily.

Origin of Cultivation.

On the other hand when weather conditions were ideal the supply boats would return at about the same time, resulting in an oversupply.

The results of this situation led to the planting and systematic cultivation of oysters. Today, he said, "the shell stock is out of the water only a few hours before being shucked, iced and en route to all parts of the country."

Oysters are being shipped from Norfolk by truck as far as Chicago and are being sent by fast express as far as Houston.

China Raises Import Duties On Food Grain

Effective December 16, 1933, the Chinese government will collect an import duty on wheat, rice, paddy, barley, buckwheat, maize, millet, oats, rye and grains not otherwise specified in the tariff, both cargo in bond and newly arrived, all of which are now duty free, and will increase the present import duty on wheat flour, according to a radiogram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Julean Arnold, Shanghai.

The following are the new import duties, in customs gold units per picul: Wheat, 0.30; wheat flour, 0.75 (formerly 0.25); rice, 1; paddy, 0.50; barley, buckwheat, maize, millet, oats, rye and grains not otherwise specified in the tariff, 10 per cent ad valorem.

It is presumed the above import duties will be subject to the customs surtaxes totaling one-tenth of the duty. The customs gold unit at present exchange equals approximately U. S. $0.62; the picul equals 133 1-3 pounds.

Holland Buys More U. S. Leaf Tobacco

Imports of American leaf tobacco into the port of Rotterdam during October were notably in excess of those of the preceding month and of October, 1932, according to a report from Vice Consul H. L. Rose, made public by the Commerce Department.

Total arrivals during October, 1933, amounted to 3,359,810 pounds, an increase of 136 per cent compared with the September figure, and 60 per cent compared with the figure of October, 1932.

Virginia tobacco accounted for 47 per cent of the total October, 1933, imports; Kentucky, 35 per cent; Maryland, 17 per cent, and seedleaf, 1 per cent.

Arrivals of American leaf tobacco in Rotterdam during the first ten months of the current year reached a total of 16,649,140 pounds, an increase of 18 per cent over the corresponding period of 1932. Virginia tobacco represented 53 per cent of the imports in the 1933 period; Kentucky, 28 per cent; Maryland, 17 per cent, and seedleaf, 2 per cent.

The value of imports in the ten-month period of 1933 was 4,277,000 florins, a decline of approximately 1 per cent compared with the value of receipts in the corresponding period of 1932.

Cotton Works Lower Under Southern Sales

December Closes at 9.90 as General Market Drops 7 to 12 Points.

New York, Dec 16 (AP).—Cotton worked lower under some Southern selling and scattering liquidation in a comparatively quiet and narrow market today. Offerings were not heavy at any time during the morning, but demand was restricted to scale down buying, apparently, and March eased off to 10.09 in the late trading, closing at that figure. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 7 to 12 points.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 2 to 4 points under some overnight selling orders from the South and scattering liquidation. A little buying was reported on the relatively steady showing of Liverpool and there was a moderate trade demand, but this was quite readily supplied around the initial prices and the market sagged off later in the morning.

Liquidation Is Absorbed.

January liquidation was absorbed by the trade partly against sales in the later deliveries, but there was some liquidation of old long accounts and buying was checked by the action of the wheat and stock markets. The lowest levels of the day were reached in the late trading with January selling at 9.90 and May at 10.22 and last prices were at these levels.

Moderate fluctuations in sterling exchange rates seemed to attract comparatively little attention and the failure of favorable overnight reports from the cotton goods markets to stimulate buying, was considered a disappointment to holders of contracts.

Shipboard Lot Down.

This may have accounted for some reselling, while there appeared to be a little more hedging here late in the morning. Early advices from the South claim that the cotton was becoming rather harder to buy in some sections, at least, and that the basis continued firm. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 167,000 bales, against 197,000 last year and 193,000 two years ago.

The steadiness in Liverpool was attributed by private cables to comparatively light offerings which had been taken by moderate trade buying and scattering speculative support, partly from Bombay and the Continent. Houses with foreign connections appeared to have very few orders here during the morning.

Favorable week-end reviews of general business conditions, and the reports of renewed activity in the cotton goods market here yesterday, came in for some comment during the early trading, but appeared to be without appreciable effect on the immediate market.

Food Index Falls 1 Cent In Past Week

New York, Dec. 16.—Although nine commodities advanced and only eight declined, the Weekly Food Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., fell 1c below the previous week, due chiefly to the lowering of a full cent in quotations for butter. The index for December 12 stands at $1.93, losing the 1c increase of the preceding week. The latest index compares with $2 a month ago, a loss of 3.5 per cent, but shows a rise of 14.2 per cent over the same date of 1932, when it registered $1.69.

Higher quotations were recorded this week for wheat, corn, oats, barley, coffee, potatoes, rice, sheep and lambs, while on the down side were listed rye, hams, lard, butter, ra[illegible] sugar, cottonseed oil, steers a[illegible] hogs.

U. S.-Canadian Wheat Exports Drop in Week

New York, Dec. 16.—Exports of wheat (including flour as wheat) from United States and Canadian ports, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended December 9, 1933, totaled 3,952,526 bushels, as compared with 6,191,176 bushels in the previous week and 6,435,595 bushels in the corresponding week of last year. For the season, July 1 to date, wheat exports aggregated 96,830,135 bushels, as against 152,534,410 bushels for the same period a year ago.

Corn exports for this week were 77,000 bushels, compared with 149,000 bushels in the preceding week and 101,450 bushels last year. For the season, corn exports totaled 250,000 bushels, as against 3,551,416 bushels for the like period in the previous year.

Canada Trade Makes Strides In 8 Months

Steady Employment Gains, With Rise in Buying, Aid Prosperity.

New York, Dec. 16.—The entire aspect of trade conditions in the Dominion of Canada has been changed during the past eight months due to the steady rise in employment, the expansion of retail sales and the moderate gains reported for many divisions of industry.

Whereas, at this time last year the commercial outlook was clouded with apprehension and fear, this year there is increasing hopefulness, based on the substantial achievements thus far recorded.

As a result, the volume of Christmas buying is attaining the largest proportions in the last three seasons, with the sales of so-called luxury merchandise, novelties, jewelry, haberdashery and hosiery double those of last year.

Weather Helps Retailers.

The bitter cold weather of the past week had helped many retailers to nearly clear their accumulations of winter merchandise, particularly in the wearing apparel and hardware departments.

Fur garments now are selling better, and from country districts wholesale orders picked up sharply for clothing, boots and shoes, rubber footwear, hardware and household electrical appliances, according to dispatches to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., from branch offices located in the chief commercial and industrial centers of the Dominion.

The continued increase in the output of lumber has accelerated the demand for camping outfits and supplies, as the number of men at work in the woods this winter is nearly double the total of last year.

Business in Montreal.

A further improvement in economic conditions is indicated, the government's general index registering 83.5, as compared with 70.8 in the same week of 1932, a gain of 18 per cent.

Montreal's clearings for the week ended November 30 show an increase of 20.4 per cent, as compared with the corresponding week of 1932, but a decrease of 3.1 per cent from those of the preceding week. For the month of November, they increased 21.9 per cent over the same month of 1932.

Carloadings on Canadian railways during the week ended November 25 totaled 44,492 cars, as compared with 43,274 in the corresponding week of 1932, an increase of 1,218 cars, or 2.8 per cent, but a decrease of 2,928 cars, or 6.1 per cent, from the previous week's total. Gross revenue of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the nine-day period ending November 30 totaled $3,305,000, as compared with $3,369,000 in the corresponding period of last year, a decrease of $64,000. For the Canadian National Railway they were $4,090,827, as compared with $3,924,041, an increase of $166,786, or 4.2 per cent.

Wholesalers' Trade Gains.

Wholesalers report a satisfactory turnover in groceries, dry goods, hardware, and boots and shoes. Retailers report trade as fair, with prospects of a moderate Christmas trade bright; buying, however, continues somewhat cautious.

Favorable business and industrial items appearing during the week included: An increase in the October retail sales of automobiles for the fourth successive month, the number increasing 22.4 per cent, while the value increased 19 per cent. The report of a prominent steel concern to the effect that business is well above last year, with plants operating at close to 35 per cent capacity, as compared with a low of under 20 per cent.

Sales Up 40 Per Cent.

The report of a well-known company manufacturing aerated waters, an increase of 40 per cent in sales for October and November, compared with the same months of last year, and the paying off of all dividend arrears on its preferred stock.

Also, the declaration of an extra 10 cents on the common stock of a well-known power concern, the opening of a branch factory at Sarnia, Ont., by a well-known English tinplate manufacturing concern and the employment of 150 hands. An increase of 21 per cent in the production of newsprint in October over the corresponding month of 1932, an increase of 40 per cent in the production of cement in October over the corresponding month of last year, the best showing in three years; the resumption of dividend payments on its common stock by a well-known silk manufacturing concern and the announcement that sales, during the first nine months of their fiscal year, were up 42 per cent in value over those of the corresponding period of the previous twelve months.

Wider Buying By Consumers Aids Business

Christmas Trade Is Found to Provide Only Part of Volume.

New York, Dec. 16.—While the buying of Christmas gifts rapidly is reaching its peak and easily formed the bulk of the sales this week, these did not constitute the entire contribution of the enlarged total, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

For, the sudden change to real winter weather, accompanied by snow in many sections, caused the largest movement of women's coats, fur garments, and men's overcoats in the last month or more.

Some of the retailers who had reduced prices, particularly on women's coats, in order to effect their clearance, found that their action had been somewhat hasty, in view of the strength of the demand. Assortments already are incomplete, especially as regards the style of fur trimming desired, and calls on wholesalers and manufacturers for speedy deliveries were met with a negative response in most instances.

Clothing Movement Gains.

As a whole, the movement of men's overcoats, hats, and shoes was larger than that of women's apparel.

The Christmas buying season has advanced sufficiently to permit estimates to place the volume above that of last year, and in many districts at the largest since 1930. Medium and low priced merchandise is selling the most readily, but the items are not confined, as they were a year ago, to their strictly utilitarian application.

Sales of the so-called luxury items and novelties are running fully 10 per cent larger than last season. While operating expenses for retailers have been increased over last year's by the N. R. A. code, profits generally are larger.

Homes Get Attention.

The home is coming in for a greater share of attention in Christmas gifts than for several seasons, particularly in the rug and floor covering divisions, as Orientals and room-sized domestics are moving well in response to the extensive promotional efforts.

Fine glassware undoubtedly has come into its own again, as the demand for Christmas crystal glass is persistent.

Repeal has opened a new outlet for accessories to late suppers, special trays, electric grills, toasters, percolators, wine cooler, beer pitchers and mugs, cheese servers, and ice-cube tubs being but a few of the items now being assembled for these festive functions.

Canada Holds Vast Amount of Export Liquor

That the Canadian distilling industry is equipped to produce an amount of spirits considerably in excess of present domestic requirements is revealed in a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Avery F. Peterson, Ottawa.

Reports of small quantities of liquor now available in the United States, Peterson states, have encouraged Canadian distillers, as it is believed that demand for matured liquor for blending purposes will create available export market for their products.

A number of Canadian firms are known to be in touch with State control boards and other organizations charged with the distribution of liquor in the United States. Canadian export restrictions on liquor shipments to the United States, it is pointed out, were recently removed.

It is estimated, according to the report, that approximately 30,000,000 proof gallons of export quality spirits are available for export from Canada. Very little accurate information is available as to liquor inventories in Canada by types. It is believed that the largest distilling company has on hand nearly 7,000,000 proof gallons of American type rye suitable for blending purposes in addition to about 2,000,000 gallons of its standard brand. Another large distilling organization is known to have on hand about 5,000,000 gallons of bourbon and American type rye.

The bulk of warehoused spirits in Canada is controlled by four large groups of distillers, the report points out, with only a small quantity of liquor in the hands of individual private concerns. It is estimated that the aggregate amount of all classes of spirits held by these groups is approximately 40,000,000 gallons.

Life Insurance Improves.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—New life insurance in November totaled $681,049,000, compared with $671,242,000 in the same month of last year, marking the second monthly gain shown this year over 1932.

Trade Movements Brightened By Expansion of Retail Sales

Reports From All Parts of Nation Reveal Greatest Progress During Past Three Months; Firmer Basis Supports Upturn.

By Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

New York, Dec. 16.—Continuing the gains which have been in evidence since the latter part of November, the entire aspect of trade movements was brightened this week by the expansion of retail sales, the moderate gains registered in some industrial divisions, and the further rise in employment.

Reports received from all parts of the country reveal that more progress now is being made than at any time in the last three months, with a complete reversal of the attitude assumed at this period of a year ago, when the future was clouded by apprehension and uncertainty.

This now has been replaced by a confirmed hopefulness based on the achievements already recorded. The reports no longer contain speculative surmises on when recovery is to start, as it now appears to have arrived, and with no uncertain force in some districts, while in others the moderate recession which has been in evidence since the late summer is being brought definitely to an end.

Business Trends Upward.

Quite aside from the seasonal influences, which have such a strong bearing on the current advancement, general business trends not only are upward bu the betterment is resting on a more stable basis than during the midsummer upswing.

As a result, Christmas buying is attaining the largest proportions in the last three years, as the pinching saving of the past few seasons, when salaries were being reduced and employment curtailed, has been superseded by a more generous attitude, prompted by the conviction that a more settled progress lies ahead.

The pay-roll disbursements of the C. W. A. have resulted in liberal expenditures for necessities in nearly all parts of the country, with the buying of dry goods and seasonal wearing apparel proving effective in reducing stocks which had become unwieldy and for a time appeared likely to be included in the year's carry-over.

Feeling of Security.

The feeling of security in the future is transcending any unsettling forces present in obtruse interpretations of the application of the code of fair competition for the various industries, as greater utilization of the sustaining support of the NRA now is apparent, since its permanency is assuming more definite form as a recognized part of modern commercial and industrial conduct.

The second week of repeal found consumer interest developed to an even higher pitch, with sales limited only by the extent of the stocks, which in many instances were inadequate to the rush of the demand.

The benefits of this revived industry have been particularly bolstering to the hotel trade, which was one of the chief sufferers of the period of protracted drought, as dining-room receipts not only have been pushed upward, but room rentals are making the best showing in three years. In addition, the repeal of the eighteenth amendment has provided work for thousands, and has resulted in the occupancy of many vacant stores and buildings.

Indices Move Ahead.

The chief industrial indices now are moving ahead with more certainty, despite the year-end slowing-down which ordinarily obtains. After the first drop in 29 weeks from the corresponding totals of last year, loadings of revenue freight again reveal an increase, both as compared with the week preceding and the same week a year ago. The 11 per cent gain in the rate of steel production makes the current figure the highest reached since the middle of October.

The use of electric power continues to rise, going ahead of the comparative 1932 record for the thirty-second week. The gain of 6.6 per cent was the largest that has appeared since the early part of October. While output of bituminous coal has been stepped up, because of the heavier domestic and industrial demand, lumber orders have receded to the smallest total since March, with sales limited practically to industrials; mill stocks are heavy and current production has been curtailed to about 25 per cent of capacity.

The Business Activity Barometer, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., held the gain recorded for the previous two weeks, remaining unchanged at 62.3. This represents an increase of 3.8 per cent over its position of a month ago, while there has been a rise of 17.7 per cent from the 52.9 recorded for the corresponding week of 1932.

Quebec Sales Of Malt Grain Seen Climbing

Farmers in the Province of Quebec are finding in malting barley an assured source of income, according to a report from Vice Consul G. B. Lane, Montreal, made public by the Commerce Department.

In 1931, the report states, Canadian brewing interests offered to purchase from Quebec farmers a maximum of 500,000 bushels of malting barley per year. In that year this grain was grown for the first time in Quebec and 2,000 bushels were sold. The same offer was renewed in 1932, in which year 40,000 bushels were reported as having been sold. During the first 10 months of the current year, it is estimated that approximately 50,000 bushels have been sold to the breweries under terms similar to those offered in the two previous years.

According to reports, the largest brewing concern in Canada, together with other brewing interests, has offered to buy annually a maximum of a million bushels of malting barley grown by Quebec farmers.

In view of the efforts of brewing interests to encourage Quebec farmers to increase their production of malting barley, it is expected that production will continue to increase. The size of the annual crops to date, however, has been so small as compared with the amount the breweries are willing to purchase that it is not thought that the desired total production can be even approached for an indefinie period.

U. S. Lumber Exports Into Canada Gain

The outlook for American lumber in the Canadian market is decidedly favorable, according to Consul Damon C. Woods, Toronto, in a report made public by the Commerce Department. A substantial improvement in sales, he points out, has been evident in the past few months.

Latest available Canadian statistics covering September show imports of lumber from the United States in that period were valued at $150,000 as compared with $89,855 in the same month of 1932, a rise of 72 per cent. The chief items responsible for the increase were oak, walnut and gum, while Southern pine showed a slight decline.

Total imports into Canada of American lumber for the 12 months ended September, 1933, were valued at $1,504,610, against $2,247,915 in the corresponding period of 1932, a decrease of 33 per cent.

Augmented demand from Ontario furniture factories and local requirements for oak and walnut, the report states, caused the fall pick-up in lumber imports, despite sharp price advances in woods from the United States. These prices at Toronto, in United States currency, are now from 15 to 50 per cent higher than a year ago, a situation partially offset by a 14 per cent improvement in Canadian exchange.

Trade Activity Holds Gain of 3.8 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 16.—The Business Activity Barometer, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., held the gain recorded for the previous two weeks and remained unchanged for the current week at 62.3. This was an increase of 3.8 per cent over a month ago and compared with an index of 52.9 for the corresponding week of 1932, a rise of 17.7 per cent. A rather sharp gain in steel mill activity and a slight improvement in bank clearings were balanced by declines in carloading and the price index and a less than seasonal rise in electric power output.

Boost of French Fruit Quota May Hit America

Paris, Dec. 16 (AP).—A disastrous blow to American trade was seen by importers today in France's offer to increase its quota of apples and pears from the United States in exchange for an increased wine quota and a proposed French tariff on lard.

The wine quota offer, importers calculated, would diminish instead of increasing the imports of apples and pears, while lard would be effectually shut out by a decree the ministry of agriculture has prepared.

World Cotton Mills Score New Record

Activity Is Found Highest in Years; Spinning Up in Many Centers.

New York, Dec. 16.—An outstanding feature of the world cotton situation is the fact that cotton mill activity in most of the major cotton-consuming countries abroad is at the highest levels for this time in several years, and is tending upward, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

This is particularly true of Great Britain and Japan, which export larger quantities of cotton goods, and is also true, to a lesser degree, of Germany. These countries are the three most highly industrialized countries abroad.

It is also of interest that, despite the keen competition in export markets between British and Japanese cotton goods and the loss of British markets to Japan, mill activity is on the increase in both Great Britain and Japan.

Spinning in England.

In Great Britain, spinners used 245,000 bales of all kinds of cotton during November this year as against 238,000 in October, 199,000 in November last year, 251,000 two years ago, 194,000 three years ago, and 267,000 four years ago.

During the four months of this cotton season from August 1 to November 30, they consumed 913,000 bales of all growths as against 714,000 in the corresponding portion of last season, 824,000 two seasons ago, 670,000 three seasons ago, and 927,000 four seasons ago.

British spinners are using slightly more American cotton relative to their total consumption of all growths than last season and four seasons ago, and much more than two seasons ago and three seasons ago.

Consumption in Japan.

For Japan, the latest cotton consumption figures available are for October, during which month Japanese mills spun 247,000 bales of all growths of cotton, as against 242,000 in September, 214,000 in October last year, 208,000 two years ago, 183,000 three years ago and 238,000 four years ago.

The Japanes consumption of 247,000 bales in October this year has been equalled but never surpassed in any month.

During the first quarter of the current cotton season, that is, from August 1 to October 31, Japanese spinners consumed 723,000 bales of all kinds of cotton, as against 640,000 in the corresponding portion of last season, 623,000 two seasons ago, 534,000 three seasons ago and 682,000 four seasons ago. They are using slightly less American cotton relative to their total consumption than last season, but much more than either two, three or four seasons ago.

Mills in Germany.

In Germany, cotton mill activity turned upward last spring and has since registered some decline, but is still above the levels prevailing at this time in the past four seasons.

During October, German mills used 109,000 bales of all kinds of cotton as against 106,000 in September, 105,000 in October last year, 98,000 two years ago, 97,000 three years ago and 111,000 four years ago. During the period from August 1 to October 31, they consumed 323,000 bales as against 292,000 in the corresponding portion of last season, 282,000 two seasons ago, 285,000 three seasons ago and 323,000 four seasons ago.

German spinners are using a larger proportionate amount of American cotton than in any of the past four seasons.

South African Auto Demand Is Improving

Improvement in the economic position of the Union of South Africa was reflected in an increased demand for motor vehicles in that market during October, according to a report received in the Commerce Department's Automotive-Aeronautics Trade Division.

Automobile dealers in the principal trade centers reported a good volume of sales in spite of periods of stock shortages. The demand was active in both the new and used car markets. Johannesburg sales in October exceeded those of October, 1932, by 49 per cent, and the usual seasonal high January sales total was exceeded. October witnessed the high water mark in sales during the present calendar year.

The low retail price of gasoline, together with the restoration of salary cuts to certain public servants, as well as a return of consumer confidence in the permanency of income, have been important influences affecting car sales.

The American car is recapturing its share of the sales with the weakening of the dollar in terms of sterling. Automobile advertising expenditures are being increased and preparations for the sale of new models are taking place. Gasoline sales have increased materially and there is evidence of a greater use of personal transport.

Exports of passenger cars from the United States to South Africa during the first ten months of the current year reached a value of $3,839,345, against $1,842,991 for the corresponding period of 1932. Truck and bus shipments in the 1933 period were valued at $414,769, compared with $90,029 in the first ten months of last year.

Lumber Orders Decrease.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Lumber orders booked at the mills during the week ended December 2 were the lowest of any week since March and production was the smallest since May, due to the shorter Thanksgiving week, the National Lumber Manufacturers reported today. Production was 153,513,000 feet; shipments, 159,292,000 feet and orders, 114,968,000 feet.

Price Slashes Aid Business, Says Sprague

Recovery Depends Upon Trade Volume, He Declares.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—A program of price reduction as a means of creating employment by furnishing a market for goods was urged last night by Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who recently resigned as monetary adviser to the Roosevelt Administration, in an address before the Harvard Business Club.

"I believe," he said, "that the attitude of the business man . . . is not getting anywhere as regards a permanent trade recovery. I believe that it is the function of business to provide good services by reduction in price to the point where there will be a market, which, in turn, will bring about employment.

"When there is employment, prices will naturally go up."

Dr. Sprague charged that the "business community itself" was in large part responsible for "present economic ills" and said he was in sympathy with the objective sought by the Administration at Washington, although in disagreement with some of the methods being used to reach the "desired goal."

"More serious than anything done by the Administration is the attitude of business in not being willing to face conditions and work out its own solutions," he declared.

As an example to illustrate his theory that lower prices make for increased employment, he used the case of the automobile industry which he said created a market by cutting prices.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Increasing Malnutrition.

That the depression has not increased the death rate in America is a matter of general agreement. Probably we were in economic difficulty as early as 1928, and certainly we were there in the spring and summer of 1929, although general opinion sets it as beginning in October, 1929. That was the month in which the stock exchange and board of trade crashes dramatized conditions.

Since 1928 the general death rate has fallen slowly from year to year. The rate of drop has not been materially different from that of 1920 to 1928, and is not far from what experienced health officers expected it to be at this time. Nevertheless, general surprise is expressed because the death rates have not gone up since 1929.

The birth rate has been falling much more rapidly than the death rate in the last four years. Since the death rate among young babies is so much higher than that of adults, the comparatively few young babies with the few baby deaths has been an important factor in holding the general death rate down during the last four years.

When we analyze the statistics for this period we find that there are certain diseases that are more deadly than they were four years ago. These are diabetes, cancer, and heart disease. These are not all. In the field of consumption, whereas the general death rate is falling satisfactorily, there are groups of people who are not participating in the improvement in safety.

When the groups are rearranged by ages it is found that malnutrition is most in evidence in age group 6 to 12, with age group 12 to 16 a close second. It is least in age group under 6. Comparing the subgroups by years we find that in each instance there was considerably more malnutrition in 1932 than in 1928.

This study indicates that the harmful effects of the depression will begin in a few years to show in increases in tuberculosis and other diseases associated with poor nutrition.

You Forget Them.

G. E. writes: We are a group of girls in the office and very often these girls tell one another what they had dreamed. These girls dream on an average of four nights a week.

I very rarely dream—maybe three or four times during the year. The girls say there is something wrong somewhere.

Reply.

Everybody dreams repeatedly—every night. Some remember dreams better than others.

Salt As Teeth Cleaner.

T. M. writes:

1. Is salt good to clean teeth with?
2. Does it harm the enamel in any way?

Reply.

1. Yes.
2. No.

At the Chess Table

By Willard H. Mutschler.

The next chess event of general interest is scheduled at the Jewish Community Center January 10, when I. S. Turover, retired undefeated District champion, will perform in simultaneous play. The center for two years has been staging exhibitions of this type, and among the notables paraded before local fandom were World Champion Alexander Alekhine and Untied States Champion Frank J. Marshall.

In several of its exhibitions prospective participants were unable to play because they were unable to supply their own boards and chess men, and the center's equipment had already been loaned. Turover's exhibition is primarily for the purpose of raising funds to secure more equipment for the public's use against visiting masters. A charge of $1 per board is to be levied against contestants for this reason. Turover compares favorably with many of the masters who have appeared before, but he has already given several simultaneous exhibitions in Washington which the public enjoyed without cost. Now fandom has its opportunity to express its gratitude, not only for the entertainment to be derived in encountering Turover, but for that player's efforts in making possible past exhibitions.

"Chess Strategy and Tactics."

In our opinion the year has produced a chess classic which every player would do well to include in his collection. The volume in question is the result of efforts of Fred Reinfeld and Irving Chernev, and has for its title "Chess Strategy and Tactics." It consists of a collection of 50 games played between 1870 and 1933. Less than 10 per cent of the games chosen have heretofore appeared in book form in English. Outstanding examples from the play of famous masters include the names of Dr. Lasker, W. Steinitz, L. Steiner, Pillsbury, Tarrasch, Maroczy, Janowski, Schlecter, Marshall, Leonhardt, Dr. Bernstein, Duras, Mieses, Rubinstein, Flamberg, Breyer, Nimzowitsch, Tartakower, Honlinger, Teller, Rabinowitsch, Vidmar, Frydmann, Landau, Pirc, Rellstab, Tschigorin, Reti Johner, Bogoljubow, Grunfeld, Torre, Alekhine, Vajda, Przepiorka, Spielmann, L. Paulsen, Schallopp, Porges, Vuckovics, Thomas, Burn, Marco, Judd, Colle, Euwe, Perlis, Cohn, Kupchik, Swiderski, Teichmann, Selesnieff, Saemisch, Lewitsky, Forgacs, Becker, Botwinnik, Kmoch, Yates, Capablanca, Kashdon, Florh, Noteboom, Stolz, Charosek, and Eliskases.

The games were chosen most often to illustrate some specific feature, such as premature attack, the feint attack, restraint, defending gambits, the attack on both wings, the school of Tarrasch, attack and counter attack and pawn sacrifices. The principal value of the book lies in the annotations of Reinfeld and informative introductory remarks preceding each game, which frequently contain instructive sidelights on the life of one or both of the contestants. If you are wondering what to present the chess-playing friend for an instructive and entertaining Christmas gift, this is our idea of the proper one, be he beginner or near-master.

So that readers may judge for themselves, we present below a specimen game with its diagrams, which the volume contains copiously, omitted. This one deals with premature attack. Says Reinfeld:

"It is well known that an attack undertaken without adequate means must result in the loss of the initiative, if parried properly. This is demonstrated most convincingly in the present game—the chief interest of which lies in the harmonious simplicity of Reti's beautifully timed play. The unusual movements of the Kt add a certain piquancy to Black's artistic conduct of the game.

Mahirsch-Ostrau, 1923.
French Defense.

White	Black
E. Bogoljubow	R. Reti
1 P—K4	P—K3
2 P—Q4	P—Q4
3 Kt—QB3	Kt—KB3
4 P—K5	......

It is surprising that Bogoljubow does not adopt Alekhine's attack (4 B—Kt5, B—K2; 5 P—K5, KKt—Q2; 6 P—KR4), with which he has won some pretty games.

4 ...... KKt—Q2
5 Q—Kt4 ......

The Gledhill variation, which leads to a lively game—by no means to White's advantage, however!

5 ...... P—QB4
6 Kt—Kt5 PxP

The simplest. Black's attack on the hostile center outweighs White's would-be attack.

7 Kt—KB3 ......

Not 7 Kt—Q6 ch, BxKt; 8 QxP? BxP

7 ...... Kt—QB3
8 Kt—Q6 ch BxKt
9 QxP BxP!

* In conjunction with the next move, this is the most effective way of ending White's demonstration.

10 KtxB Q—B3

Once the Queens are off, Black's advantage soon becomes quite marked.

11 QxQ KtxQ
12 B—QKt5 ......

Fortunately Bogoljubow can still manage to regain his Pawn.

12 ...... B—Q2
13 Kt—B3 Kt—K5!

Well-played. Reti is now able to build up a formidable center.

14 O—O P—B3

Compelling White to carry out the following exchange else . . . P—K4 would retain the QP permanently.

15 BxKt PxB
16 KtxP P—QB4

The four Black Pawns now constitute a compact and powerful center, the Rooks have open files on which to operate, and the King is well posted for the ending—all a consequence of White's faulty strategy in embarking on an attack without sufficient means.

Reti's play from this point on is as delightful as it is convincing.

17 Kt—K2 K—B2
18 P—KB3 Kt—Q3
19 P—QKt3 ......

B—Q2 would be useless because of . . . Kt—B5 and the Bishop must return home.

19 ...... P—K4
20 B—R3 ......

This exerts a certain amount of pressure on Black's center, but Reti soon finds a way to break through.

20 ...... QR—QB
21 QR—Q P—Q5
22 Kt—B ......

During the last few moves White's prospects seem to have improved somewhat, and the threat of Kt—Q3 seems very troublesome.

22 ...... Kt—B4

This gains the necessary time for . . . P—B5.

23 R—B2 Kt—K6

"To have a Knight planted in your game at K6 is worse than a rusty nail in your knee!"

24 R—K P—B5!

A tremendous move. If now 25 PxP, RxP; 26 R(K)—K2 and Black has so many good moves that he would be embarrassed for a continuation!—for example, 26 . . . KR—QB winning a Pawn, or else 26 . . . B—B4; 27 Kt—Q3; BxKt; 28 PxB, R—QKt! 29 B—Kt2 (29 RxKt, PxR), RxB! 30 RxKt, PxR or . . . R—B8 ch. and wins.

25 P—QKt4 ......

Not very pleasing esthetically, but White must keep the B file closed at all costs.

25 ...... B—R5
26 R(K)—K2 ......

After 26 P—B3, Kt—B7 would likewise be decisive.

26 ...... Kt—Q8
27 R—B Kt—B6
28 R(K2)—B2 Kt—Kt8!

It does one's heart good to watch the peculiar wanderings of this Kt.

29 B—Kt2 P—B6
30 Kt—Kt3 ......

There is nothing else left: 30 B—R (!), Kt—Q7; 31 R—K, BxP would be quite hopeless.

30 ...... BxKt
31 RPxB ......

Again forced, for if 31 BPxB, P—B7 followed by . . . P—Q6, or else 31 RxKt BxPR; 32 R—R, PxB, &c.

31 ...... Kt—Q7
32 R—K KR—Q
33 B—B P—Q6!

A "finisher!"

34 PxP ......

Or 34 BxKt, PxB; 35 RxP, PxP; 36 RxR, RxR, &c.

34 ...... RxP
35 BxKt RxB!
36 R—R K—K3
37 K—B RxR ch.

Destroying White's last hope—38 RxR, PxR; 39 R—Q, R—B8; 40 K—K2.

38 KxR P—B7
39 R—QB K—Q4
40 K—K3 R—B6 ch.

Driving back White's King in order to allow the inroad of his own King.

41 K—Q2 K—Q5
42 P—R4 ......

After 42 RxP, PxR ch; 43 KxR, K—K6; 44 K—B3, K—B7 Black would win easily.

42 ...... R—Q6 ch!

Putting an end to all resistance; if 43 KxP, R—B6 ch; 44 K—Q2, RxR; 45 KxR, K—B6 and the QRP will Queen. Or 43 K—K2, K—B6 followed by . . . R—Q and . . . K—Kt7, &c. Therefore:

43 Resigns.

The Science of Right Thinking.

Taken from The Christian Science Monitor.

In the saying, "Knowledge is Power," the word "knowledge" implies clear or true thinking. To think clearly means to see things, events, or circumstances in their true light and perspective. Or, to put it somewhat differently, clear thinking recognizes the truth about a given situation. Now there is but one truth about anything, and in the degree that one's thinking approximates it, the true concept has ascendancy over the false.

Teaching, as it does, the truth about God, man, and the universe, Christian Science may be termed the Science of right thinking. It is based on a foundation that is fixed, immutable, and universal. This foundation is the perfection of God and of man in His image and likeness. Being scientific, this truth of the perfection of God and man is demonstrable, and in proportion as we put it into practice in our daily life, that is, adopt it as a rule for thought and conduct, we are benefited by it. To quote from page 225 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy; "The history of our country, like all history, illustrates the might of Mind, and shows human power to be proportionate to its embodiment of right thinking."

All right thinking is spiritual thinking, that is to say, it is thinking which has as its foundation the allness of Spirit, God. Every thought based on physicality, materiality, or mortal mind, being devoid of spirituality, is spurious, and must of necessity yield to right thinking based on the scientific fact of the allness of Spirit and the consequent spirituality of the universe including man. Mrs. Eddy say (Science and Health, p. 492): 'For right reasoning there should be but one fact before the thought, namely, spiritual existence. In reality there is no other existence, since Life cannot be united to its unlikeness, mortality."

How, someone may ask, can thought affect a condition predicated upon matter? The answer is that according to the teaching of Christian Science material conditions objectify material thoughts. Understanding this, we can see how erroneous material conditions can be corrected by true or spiritual thinking. Christian Science reveals that in God's creation there is no such thing as disease, a career beyond repair, an irreparable past. Error, or evil, cannot hide from the light of Truth. Its falsity is exposed on the basis of the allness of God. Christian Science teaches and proves that God's law of harmony destroys evil by virtue of the allness of divine Truth and Love.

What if from the human point of view a situation or condition seems hopeless? What if one has apparently reached the end of his resources, endurance, or patience? Let him remember that the human point of view gives a perverted picture of the situation, for it leaves out of account the scientific fact of God's goodness, justice, mercy and munificence. Let him recall that "God created man in His own image, in the image of God created he him" forever free from materiality, discord, lack—wholly spiritual. Remembering these things, he will consistently exchange the material point of view for the spiritual view of creation, and thus experience blessings. This Science of right thinking, when understandingly persisted in, will prevail.

Christ Jesus was preeminently a right thinker. He practiced right thinking to a greater degree than any other has ever done. He saw things as they really are. His thought rested on spiritual reality. He looked out upon life from the standpoint of God's omnipotence, omnipresence, and omniscience. Such a point of view enabled him to do his mighty works— healing the sick, reclaiming the sinner, raising the dead. If we would be his true followers, doing the same works which he did, as he enjoined us to do, we must adopt the same spiritual point of view which he had—that of the allness of God and the perfection of the universe, including man. He said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. . . .And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; . . . they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them."

How to acquire and preserve that spiritual point of view is tersely described by Mrs. Eddy on page 4 of her work "Pulpit and Press," as follows: "You have simply to preserve a scientific, positive sense of unity with your diviine source, and daily demonstrate this."

MEN

On account of the steady progress and growth of our company, we are in a position to take on a few additional men from time to time; the requirements for these positions are quite reasonable, so that the average man of good habits and clean-cut appearance will stand a fair chance of being employed.

This company has been uniquely successful throughout this depression, in fact 1933 has been our fourth successive record sales year. In line with our steady gains in business, the earnings of our men are higher; not only are more men earning $50.00 and $75.00 a week, but in recent months we have issued many weekly pay checks running between $100.00 and $250.00, throughout the entire country. These earnings, of course, are generally made by more experienced men, but there are exceptions where new men have quickly advanced themselves to the higher incomes.

Similar positions are available in our local office to a few more men who are qualified to learn this work and who would be satisfied with earnings of $125.00 monthly while learning, provided they saw opportunities for increases with experience; the men accepted for these positions will be given a very thorough course of training free of charge.

For personal interview, call at Room 201, Denrike Bldg., 1010 Vermont Avenue N. W., Monday morning, 9:30 to 1.

Veterans' Relief Battle In Congress Declared Menace to U. S. Budget

Legislators Expected to Ignore Recent Economy Act in Face of Formidable Onslaught by Former Soldiers.

By Laurence F. Schmeckebier, Of the Brookings Institution.

(Written especially for The Post.)

The Federal budget for the fiscal year 1934-35 is now in preparation. In the preliminary discussions Lewis Douglas, Director of the Budget, has stressed the necessity of keeping expenditures below revenues, thereby averting the threat of fiat money and laying a firm basis for currency stability.

Endangering the success of this program are the lavish demands for emergency outlays to be expected from the forthcoming Congress. Among these demands the effort to secure further bonus payments to war veterans is one of the best organized and least understood.

Veteran Relief to Date.

Since the establishment of the United States $16,000,000,000 has been expended for various forms of veteran relief, of which about $7,000,000,000 has been on account of the veterans of the World War. In the eight years from 1924 to 1932 annual expenditure for veteran relief increased from $537,000,000 to $893,000,000, or more than 60 per cent.

These expenditures received a sharp check in March, 1933, as a result of the law passed after President Roosevelt's message of March 10. The President then forcibly pointed out that a first concern of the administration should be economies to maintain unimpaired the credit of the United States.

It was then estimated that the reduction of expenditures on veterans would save the Treasury about $410,000,000 annually. In the first four months of the current fiscal year, however, the outlay of the Veterans' Administration was only $63,000,000 less than in the corresponding months last year.

Some Reductions Eliminated.

Some of the reductions in payments to veterans were wiped out by the appropriation act passed in June, and a determined effort will be made at the coming session to authorize further expenditure. The main fight will probably be for immediate payment of the bonus, the revival of presumptive disabilities, increased service pensions and more liberal hospitalization.

When the bonus act was finally passed over President Coolidge's veto in 1924 many persons naively believed that the issue was settled for all time. But the ink was hardly dry on the measure before immediate payment was agitated. This resulted in another measure, passed over President Hoover's veto, increasing the loan value to 50 per cent of the deferred value of the certificate. A bill carried over to the forthcoming session of Congress provides for immediate payment in full.

It is doubtful whether many of the veterans really understand the bonus situation. Some supporters of immediate payment are further obscuring the issue by demanding that the Government "keep faith with the men," avoid a "breach of contract," and keep "within the intent of the law."

All of these statements have been made by a member of Congress, and they indicate either misrepresentation or ignorance. There has been no advocacy of a breach of contract or of faith on the part of the Government. If any one contemplates a departure from the intent of the law, it is the proponents of immediate payment.

Bonus Outlined in Brief.

The bonus, or adjusted compensation as it is called by the veterans, is a gratuity in the form of a paid-up endowment policy payable 20 years after its issuance, or at the death of veteran if occurring prior to the expiration of this term. Its amount is based on the number of days' service and the age of the veteran at the time the certificate was issued.

For each day in excess of 60 days' service the veteran receives a credit of $1 if the service was at home and $1.25 if the service was abroad. To this is added 25 per cent. On this basis, the age of the veteran, his life expectancy and 4 per cent interest compounded annually, is computed the maturity value of the certificate.

For instance, if a veteran had a service of 100 days at home and 200 days abroad, his basic adjusted compensation credit would be $100 plus $250 less the $30 already paid on discharge, or $290. To this would be added 25 per cent, making the total adjusted compensation $362.50.

If the veteran were 30 years old at the time of making application a certificate would be issued with maturity value of $914.95, payable to him in 20 years or to a designated beneficiary in the case of prior death.

Seek Immediate Maturity.

What is advocated is immediate payment of the individual maturity values, less such loans on the policies as may have been advanced already. It is estimated that such an outlay would total about $2,250,000,000.

Moreover, a fight will be staged in Congress to restore payments to men whose pensions have been stopped by discontinuance of awards based on "presumptions." Under the law in effect prior to March 20, 1933, certain diseases manifested up to January 1, 1925, were presumed to have originated in the service. It was not necessary to prove that the disease was incurred in the service; the mere fact that the disability existed was sufficient. A bill which passed the House in 1930 went so far as to make all diseases presumptive to January, 1, 1930.

The regulations resulting from the act of last March practically wiped out all awards based on presumption. But a later act, of June 16, provided special boards to pass on all discontinued awards, and it is understood that about 40 per cent have been reinstated. The American Legion program calls for restoration of all presumptive disability compensation.

In addition to these presumptive disabilities, there are "service pensions" paid for a disability which did not arise in the service. Service pensions have been paid on account of all wars; and for wars prior to the World War such pensions have been based on age alone, regardless of need or disability.

The recent regulations have materially reduced the service pensions to veterans of the World War and the Spanish-American War. A determined attempt to restore service pensions may be looked for.

Finally, under the laws in effect prior to March 20, 1933, a veteran of any war could receive medical and hospital services for a disease or injury arising at any time after his termination of military service. Such privileges have been materially restricted, but the American Legion is advocating free hospitalization for World War veterans regardless of the cause of disability.

The average man is apt to regard a war veteran as a man who has faced the guns of the enemy in the gray dawn and who has experienced the horror and carnage of battle.

Law Describes Veteran.

By law a veteran is any man or woman who has been enrolled in the military or naval service, even if the work was no more dangerous than was that of the 11,000 female yeomen enlisted in the Navy, primarily as typists, during the World War. Out of over 4,000,000 persons enrolled in the forces of the United States during the World War, a little over 2,000,000 served overseas and something over 1,300,000 saw service in the battle zone.

Unfortunately the real issue is obscured by the fact that reduction or discontinuance of pensions has undoubtedly worked a hardships on many unemployed veterans. To offset this it must be remembered that the Public Works Administration and other emergency job-creating activities give special preference to unemployed veterans, for whom a special division of the Federal Reemployment Service has been organized.

Position of President.

No one in any responsible position has advocated the discontinuance of reasonable compensation to persons actually injured in the military or naval service. The issue is whether benefits, not for any emergency, but of permanent character, should be established for a favored class.

President Roosevelt clearly stated this in his speech to the last American Legion convention. There he enunciated the principle that "no person, because he wore a uniform must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens."

It was on that principle that the economies of last March were accomplished. It will be in defiance of that principle if these economies are undone this winter at a time when the imperative effort to secure a balanced budget is at best exceedingly difficult to achieve.

Tiny North Atlantic Isles Wail As Depression Follows Repeal

St. Pierre and Miquelon Were Long Center for Rummers.

St. Pierre, Miquelon, Dec. 16 (AP). Repeal of prohibition in the United States has brought gloom to St. Pierre and Miquelon, France's last North American possession.

For more than 10 years St. Pierre was the liquor warehouse from which the North Atlantic rum fleet drew its supply. Today that trade has vanished. The rum fleet is idle, as are many of the daring men who weather indeed to this island settlemada.

For more than 10 years the colony waxed wealthy, but no thought was given for the future, nothing was put aside against the proverbial rainy day. And repeal of prohibition in the United States was wet weather indeed to this island settlement.

Duties Aided Government.

"The duties on all the whiskey imported during somewhat 10 years had placed the administration in the opulence," said one well-known citizen today. (Influence of the mother tongue can be detected in all English conversation here.)

"As soon as the Scotch and rye whiskies have been allowed to be imported," he continued, "the liquor trade immediately started to increase rapidly, as this was the sort of alcoholic beverage the United States customers were asking for.

"The duties on foreign whiskies imported in St. Pierre were approximately 10 francs per case (actually $0.58) and consequently the reselling price of a case of whisky remained very low. On these conditions the island of St. Pierre soon became the supplying market for many schooners in the bootlegging.

Officials Wasted Money.

"Unfortunately officials during this wealthy period have wasted shamefully all this money, thinking this situation would last forever, and now that the business is ended, the colony is just as poor as it was 10 years ago.

"The effects of this prohibition repeal will certainly be a hard blow on St. Pierre et Miquelon, although all the inhabitants were expecting it since a long time and are not at all surprised that it has at last occurred. It has been, however, a real surprise to the government representatives who did not want to believe it would happen."

New taxes, unusually high, have recently been imposed in the colony. Efforts are being made by the government to find new employment and to develop the fisheries and other trade in the hope of rescuing the colony from the economic blow dealt by repeal in the United States.

Postal Man Confesses Rifling Mission Mail

Seattle, Dec. 16 (AP).—Postal inspectors have arrested Douglas J. Christenson, trusted employe of the Seattle postoffice, asserting he had stolen hundreds of letters addressed to foreign missionaries, obtaining a considerable sum of money.

Inspectors A. A. Imus and Bernard Mein said Christenson admitted taking letters over a period of six months, but could not estimate how much money he obtained. He is married and has two children.

5-Man Brain Trust Formed By Mussolini

Like Roosevelt, He Calls on Professor; Mystery Banker Included.

Rome, Dec. 16 (AP).—Mussolini's own "brain trust" is assembling its mental forces behind the premier as heavy problems of economic and financial nature press upon Italy.

The beginning of the new year will land them in the midst of many difficult questions.

The five men upon whom the Duce depends for his financial and economical advice are:

Guido Jung, 57, minister of finance, brave soldier, international banking expert, reparations authority, exporter, speaks English perfectly, visited the United States last spring.

Statistician on "Trust."

Prof. Alberto Beneduce, 55, statistician, is president of the Industrial Reconstruction Institute, similar to the American Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and is therefore in charge of the government's new policy of financing industry through guaranteeing the bonds of private companies.

Bruno Biagi, 44, undersecretary of the ministry of corporations, which controls the industrial, commercial and agricultural activities of the kingdom.

Alberto Asquini, 44, also undersecretary of the ministry of corporations, formerly head of the Triest Commercial University, an expert on commerce.

And a Mystery Banker.

Vincenzo Azzolini, head of the Bank of Italy, a man who lives on the same mysterious level as Montagu Norman, of the Bank of England. The newspapers never speak of him, but his work is among the most important in the kingdom, since the Bank of Italy controls the issuance of currency.

This "braintrust" will have problems of fundamental importance to handle shortly after the new year begins. Among these are:

The radical changes projected in the corporative system, including institution of the new "corporations of category," and the granting to the national council of corporations of legislative powers now held by the Chamber of Deputies.

Big Bond Issue Near.

The possibility of a large bond issue next spring to retire other bonds and meet budget deficits.

The position of the Italian lira if the American dollar and the British pound restabilize, as many bankers think they will, in the spring.

The extension of government financing of industry, begun with Mussolini's decree permitting the state to guarantee the principal and a modest rate of interest on the bonds of private corporations.

Final settlement of the war debts owing to the United States and England.

All Equally Baffled on Gold

Even Bankers Puzzled, Investigator Finds; Farmers Know Somebody Must Pay Government Bills, but "Why Bring That Up?"

(This is the third of a series of occasional articles by Mr. Sokolsky, who has been observing the New Deal during a trip covering the entire United States.)

By George E. Sokolsky.

New York, Dec. 16.—The other day, in a cafeteria in Danbury, Conn., I listened to two gentlemen of the white-collar class discuss gold. They had listened to the University of Chicago's round-table discussion of gold last Sunday—at least, I am sure, one of them had. Gold was uppermost in their minds.

"I was glad I listened to the professors last Sunday," said the Danbury white-collared gentleman. "It was a mighty fine talk those professors put on."

"Well, what did you get out of it?"

"I got just this. Those boys don't know what it's all about. And that made me feel fine. I now know that I'm not the only dumb-bell in the world."

This conversation reminded me of another which took place one night on the train between Omaha, Nebr., and Davis Junction, Ill. There were three of us on that train, a traveling salesman, the Pullman porter and myself. We started talking about fine fishing on Lake Erie and ended in a forensic dissertation on gold. When I turned in, the traveling salesman and the Pullman porter were still trying to explain the commodity dollar to each other. The Pullman porter's comment was really brilliant:

"A dollar bill is a dollar bill. I gets it from the railroad and I puts it in the bank. No one yet wouldn't take it, would they?"

Bankers Puzzled.

During the past two months I have traveled more than 15,000 miles of this country, in and out of places. I have yet to discover any ordinary citizen who can sit down calmly and tell anyone what the commodity dollar means, what all the excitement about gold is and why the American Government becomes an exchange broker.

One group agreed a government can always be arbitrary and if the American Government wants to pay even twice as much as the market price for gold, nobody will mind giving the extra money to the gold miners. They probably need it, poor things.

But no one quite understands just how this particular operation manifests itself in the economy of prices. When I say nobody, I do not, of course, refer to Profs. Warren and Rogers, nor even to the President himself. It is to be assumed that they know what they are doing and that Mr. Morgenthau has some understanding of their operations. I do, however, maintain that neither business man nor banker, neither farmer nor laborer, neither voter nor nonvoter, knows what it is about.

Money Is Money.

In fact, that is the main criticism of the peresent Administration; nobody quite knows what is the inherent meaning and purpose of its conduct. When I first began this hegira in October, the Administration was frightfully unpopular among farmers, except in the cotton belt, to which processing checks had already been sent. At the end of this particular trip the Administration was less unpopular, because in other parts of the coutry checks were being distributed. To the farmer a check is money, and the Government is giving him money, cash right out of the till. He does not altogether understand why he is getting this money and he frankly says so.

Many farmers told me that the checks are coming to him at the exact moment that they come so that he will cease to demand greenback inflation. And the farmer is no longer shouting for greenbacks; a check on the United States Treasury will do just as well. Furthermore, he is no longer opposed to the gold standard, nor does he mind Mr. Morgenthau's gold purchases, because the Government has sent him some money to tide him over the Christmas holidays. It is a pleasant experience to jingle money around Christmas time.

I have on many occasions and in many parts of this country raised the question of the eventual payment of these checks by the people of the United States. The general attitude to that question is:

"Why bring that up?"

Why, in fact, bring anything up? A curious complex has overtaken the multitude. When one points to Prof. Tugwell's Marxism, the response is, among farmers who have received checks, that they got some money for Christmas. The other farmers have some money too—from the county, from some relief organization, maybe even from one of the alphabetical bureaucracies. What if Prof. Tugwell is a Communist or a Fascist, or any other kind of a European—the checks came, didn't they?

How Long Will Checks Last?

Now, when Congress meets, these checks will have done their work. There will be less pressure on Congress as long as the money lasts. There will be less opposition to the Administration—infinitely less to the radicals. For more than ten days now I have not listened to any red-faced, angry comments on Gen. Johnson, although Prof. Tugwell still arouses a dazed expression in the eyes of the multitude.

"That boy sure can talk more words that don't make sense than anybody outside of any Octavus Roy Cohen book," I was once told.

And when I argued that to me he made lots of sense, Marxian sense, the commentator thought that I, too, had gone the way of the professors.

The checks are working. They are giving the farmer money. They are reducing, silencing opposition. Now, the question is, does the National Treasury have to pay out these checks forever?

Utility Fears Of U. S. Cited

Virginia Power Official to Seek Admission of Competition.

Richmond, Dec. 16 (AP).—National Recovery Act officials in Washington, in passing on a permanent code submitted by Electric Utilities, will be asked to admit that the Federal government is engaging in unfair competition with utilities, although fair codes of competition apply to every other industry, Jack G. Holtzclaw, president of the Virginia Electric & Power Co., said today.

Mr. Holtzclaw recently attended a three-day utilities conference in St. Louis, at which the utilities' permanent code provisions were discussed.

"The Federal Government," Mr. Holtzclaw said, "proposes to lend money to projects which will compete with privately owned utilities already in operation. That looks like singling out the electric industry for unfair competition.

"The permanent code now in Washington, as offered by the public utilities, contends that the Federal government itself is defeating the purposes of NRA regarding fair competition by treating the utilities unfairly."

AMERICANS have forgotten how to drink!

That startling but painfully accurate fact is causing consternation among liquor dealers and importers, a few of whom voiced their wonderment about it all before the House Ways and Means Committee last week.

Not that Americans ever stopped drinking or will not continue to drink in such quantities as will delight the heart of any rum baron.

Not that individual capacities diminished one dram during thirteen years of legal abstinence and illegal inebriety.

It is taste that has changed, and upset all old drinking formulas. Something terrible happened to taste in those thirteen years! Try and convince any one expertly versed in the liquor business this isn't so.

Importers of the finer foreign brands are doing most of the worrying about this strange American metamorphosis. Dealers in domestic labels aren't particularly concerned. They count on weaning erstwhile bootleg clients on rectified liquor. Afterwards? Well, let things go as they may.

But the importer—the man who depends on that fine sense of discrimination which led the true bon vivant in other days to seek out the more expensive imported products because of some shade of aroma or delicate flavor—is perturbed.

THIS was plainly apparent at the liquor hearings before the House committee.

Take Harry S. Radcliffe, representing the original Pilsner Beer Importing Co., which deals exclusively in the rare old product of a certain Czechoslovakian village.

Radcliffe sorrowfully told the committee it may be several years before American drinking habits can be educated to the point they can distinguish all the delicate lines of difference between American and imported brews.

"Americans have acquired abnormal tastes during prohibition," he told the committee. "They are accustomed to judge a drink by the degree of shock they receive."

Radcliffe, of course, was anxious to convince the committee there won't be a rush demand for his particular imported beverage anyway, hence why raise formidable import barriers?

But at least one witness who wasn't an importer told the committee the same thing about the depraved condition of a once celebrated American taste for beer.

This was none other than George P. McCave, representing the American Brewers Association, and a one-time Agriculture Department solicitor.

"People are all alcohol minded," he said. "We know a 3.2 per cent brew actually may be better beer than any containing 6 per cent, but the people don't. If it has 6 per cent alcohol, they think the beer is twice as good."

All of which is very disconcerting to Prof. Yandell Henderson, original proponent of 3.2 per cent beer, and now embarked on the philanthropic mission of instructing the Nation in moderate drinking.

WE let him speak for himself:

"What I want to urge on you as earnestly as I can, as a practical and scientific solution of this problem, is that whisky that has been diluted at the distillery down to 10 or 12 per cent alcohol and supplied only in pint, or better, half-pint bottles, should be given the benefit of a relatively low tax.

"Drunkenness and the saloon are peculiarly the products of drinking alcohol in high concentration. By that I mean the practice, which is unfortunately rather common among considerable numbers of those who drink whisky, of drinking it almost diluted, just two or three fingers of rye or bourbon with at most a dash of water as a chaser.

"That might be called the old-fashioned National, typical American way of drinking whisky.

"That kind of drink is four or five times as concentrated, and at least that many times as intoxicating, as the National drink of any other nation, such as the French, or Germans, or even the English. A man drinking in that way can easily drink a pint of whisky in an hour and a quart in an evening. If he is not habituated to it the pint will make him extremely drunk and the quart will render him unconscious and may kill him."

Herrscher said the purchase price was "in excess of $500,000."

Rise in U. S. Morale Seen as Bar Against Rule by Dictatorship

Andre Vulliet Says Fear and Unrest Are Needed for Absolutism Eliminated Since Roosevelt Took Office.

By Andre Vulliet.

The demoralization of men which always results from the confusion of ideas and things is the greatest menace to democracy. Directly or indirectly it makes the masses ready for dictatorship. We see the effects of this psychology in two of the western European nations, its possible application in a third of the western European group, and the probable passing of the menace in America.

The development of Socialism, or if you prefer of some of its essentials, during the last decade has been general and unquestionable. The economic crisis has permitted the trial of some of these ideas in the practical field. The old standards, cursed as the root of all our evils, have been discarded. But the new ones, permeated with socialistic ideology, have not yet proved their efficacy.

The bewildered masses are in the same confusion as a man whose religious faith has not helped him out in a period of distress. That conflict of ideas, developed in an epoch of misery, causes a moral disorder. And when a nation becomes demoralized it is ripe for a dictatorial government. According to condition or temperament, that dictatorial government may be a dictatorship or a socialistic state. But it is all one.

Anarchy Avoided by Fascism.

At its origin, in 1919-1920, Italian Fascism was only a movement against Communism. It developed for two years. Then, before the growing menace of anarchy, in a day of alarm, Italy let Mussolini assume the burden of her destiny. Dictatorship, there, was the result of the fear of anarchy. The masses were ripe and the man to play the part was ready.

In Germany Hitler, who struggled eight years to become the ruler of the country, succeeded only when the fear of Communism and the demoralization of youth were such as to lead the masses to welcome a dictator. And the actor was ready for the role.

But it is a mistake to believe that dictatorship in these two countries is a movement of reaction against the ideas of Socialism or Communism. It may control these ideas, channel them into certain directions, but it can not suppress them.

Note Hitler's projects of nationalization of banks, of allotment of land in Prussia and the very name of his doctrine — national - socialism. Observe the particular care with which Mussolini deals with the masses and his recent project of corporate state.

Once the masses have been awakened, given promises, and made conscious of their strength there is no magician who will spell them back into sleep. Dictators today can not govern against the masses. If they wish to last they must give the masses what they want.

Have Done as Expected.

And they have done so. Mussolini and Hitler, both first-class psychologists as regards the mentality of their respective countries, have spoken to and governed the masses the way these masses expected them to do. A dictatorship is not an absolute power in the sense of the former kingdoms. It is not dynastic. True, there is one man at the top. But in its applications it is a government of the left. In theory its attitude toward the individual, is opposed to that of Socialism, but in effect it is a disguised form of Socialism.

Confronted with this aspect of dictatorship, one must speculate as to what is the actual viewpoint of modern Socialism. In France a group of young liberal Socialists, who have just split from the old Socialist party, give us enlightening ideas on their program.

From the economic crisis they conclude that the capitalistic system is a failure.

From the intellectual crisis, they conclude that the old ideals of liberalism that prevailed during the nineteenth century have failed.

From the moral crisis, they deduce the failure of individualism.

Can Democracy Remain?

And, to them, the political crisis in France goes far to prove that political parties are a failure, too.

Thus, suppressing all political parties, they seek an authoritarian state. The dictatorship would be economic. But economic dictatorship is only possible through political dictatorship, either personal or collective.

Then if, in practice, a dictator must apply a socialistic program and Socialism must inevitably lead to dictatorship, the important question is this: Can the great democracies still in existence continue drifting toward the left without finding one fine morning that they have lost their very character of democracies?

France, since May, 1932, has had five cabinets headed by five different premiers. If "to govern is to choose," this has not been put into practice for a long time. The last ministry, for instance spent three weeks in building up a financial program and gave it up three days later before the finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies. The complete submission to lobby intrigues and to electoral groups seems to have brought the possibilities of government to a standstill. Some political writers foresee a dictatorship. But if France is nearing that point of demoralization, it has not yet reached it.

Moreover, a dictator does not come overnight. He wants a preparation. You hear him come, you sense his power over the crowd before he can actually get in. He is a leader, a fighter, a man who has done something for the people and who, little by little, forces his way up the ladder. Mussolini, Hitler! Napoleon himself could not have made his coup d'etat through political intrigues had he not acquired a tremendous popularity during his campaigns of Italy. He may have been pitifully inadequate on the decisive date, "Brumaire 18th." That mattered little. The people of France had chosen him.

Dictator Popular at Debut.

For the dictator, who may be hated later, when he holds in his hands all the reigns of government, is accepted fervidly at his debut.

A foreigner must hesitate in diagnosing the political ailments of the United States. Nevertheless, it would seem that the way a presidential campaign is conducted gives one man every possibility of developing a strong popular support for himself. When President Roosevelt entered the White House last March he had all the background that a dictator wants. The country, confused and bewildered, had reached the demoralization point where all it wanted was leadership. Perhaps if President Roosevelt ever had an opportunity of becoming a dictator it was then. But since then the morale of the Nation has gone up.

The people, though still confused, are recovering their heads. Opposition is organizing. The chances of a dictatorship appear to be on the wane. For dictatorship is not a regime that you choose coldly. It is a hot demoralization that brings it.

Lynchburg to View New Artificial Lake

Will Cover 50 Acres of Land Near College.

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 16 (AP). Plans for creation of a lake in the vicinity of Lynchburg College have been submitted to the resident highway engineer.

Fifty or more acres that the lake will cover in the college area have been promised by the owners of the property.

A high level earth dam will be constructed in the form of a causeway over which a highway will run. A spillway 100 feet long will be constructed under the highway to carry off surplus water in Glackwater Creek in times of floods.

Shippers Look For British Aid

They Feel It Will Come, But Are Puzzled as to Form.

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—British shipping interests, while convinced that the government intends to do something calculated to revive their languishing industry, were nevertheless puzzled today regarding the shape assistance is likely to take.

They took much interest in the statements before the House of Commons by Walter Runciman, the president of the Board of Trade, that "we may be forced reluctantly to take measures to safeguard our shipping;" that a subsidy for tramp ships was under consideration, and that Britain should "hit back and hit hard at aggressive countries" fighting her shipping.

It was understood that a movement was under way among members of the industry to send a deputaiton to Runciman in an endeavor to clear up the obscurities in this public treatment of the subject.

He avoided any direct promise of subsidies, it was pointed out, but, on the other hand, invited shipping men to present him with a plan the government could accept "by which any financial aid we can give shall not be dissipated."

This was construed in shipping quarters as an invitation to put in concrete form the suggestion of a temporary subsidy for tramp shipping, which was advanced by shipping interests, coupled with safeguards against possible waste or abuses.

Officials Blame Slip-Up For Insurance Boost

Richmond, Dec. 16 (AP).—Members of the State corporation commission expressed surprise when notified of reports from Norfolk that it has developed in the recent automibile insurance rate case in which reductions in rates were ordered that trucks in the Norfolk area have to pay an increase of 10 per cent.

Thomas W. Ozlin, member of the commission in charge of insurance matters, said: "I can not believe it true. The report is either erroneous or there has been some mistake or slip-up somewhere. No increases were ordered in the commission's recent ruling."

Attractive Young Capital Society Matrons Enjoy Busy Holiday Season

Washington Gay As Yule Spirit Spreads Mantle

Deluge of Christmas Cards Descends; Students Back to Cheer Homes.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

THE annual deluge of Christmas cards has begun. Each morning the postman, burdened with piles of various-sized envelopes, leaves that heap of mail at the door, and eagerly each person opens the morning post, hoping against hope that there will be something more personal inclosed than the usual greeting card. In spite of the fact that the wholesale sending of Christmas cards is passe, there still is a goodly quota of those impersonal square cards, bearing a narrow red border, a coat-of-arms and a stilted greeting with the name of the sender engraved at the bottom, an unfriendly Mr. and Mrs.——

Christmas cards are a grand idea if selected with some thought of the recipient. But a lover of pets invariably picks the smart etching of a Scottie in a gay plaid blanket to send to Aunt Maria, who never by any chance could be in sympathy with those gay little creatures; or the rollicking, jolly English Yuletide greeting so frequently goes by inappropriate selection to the solemn cousin who feels that Wise Men and Eastern Stars should decorate the good wishes of their relatives and friends.

But in spite of all, there is something in the Christmas spirit that "gets" everybody, particularly in this week before the holiday, say what you will about the exhausted crowds of shopping mothers, bedraggled wreathes that have been hung up too soon, tired children who have been disappointed in the department store Santa Claus. The original meaning of Christmas may have taken a back seat in these recent and commercial years, but the season still has its appeal to one and all.

Students Return To Their Homes.

In Washington, as in many other cities, society will be brightened and lightened by the advent of home-coming children from schools and colleges. Youngsters who have been away for the first time in their lives, bursting with news and plans, with not half enough time to tell it all, between their hectic activities that must be crowded into the brief vacation; blase collegians who weary through their holiday, hoping that none of their inner enjoyment will show through a pose; dapper midshipmen and cadets, stiff and formal, reveling in the flutter they create in the heart of every girl they dance with, or to whom they give the coveted golden buttons from their uniforms.

Christmas at the White House will be a gala day, with great numbers of the Roosevelt clan gathering to celebrate the feast with the President and First Lady. Mrs. Dora Delano Forbes, aunt of the President, arrived in New York the middle of the week from her home in France to be present at the four-generation family reunion in the White House, which will range in ages all the way from Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, down to "Buzzie" Dall, aged 3, grandson of the Chief Executive.

Mrs. Forbes, who is the sister of Mrs. James Roosevelt, does not expect to spend a great deal of her stay in this country at the White House, however, but will visit her own sisters and brothers. In the New York home of Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Forbes will spend some time renewing acquaintances with a society that knows her well. Mr. Frederic A. Delano, a brother, who lives in Washington in a handsome home on S street and is famed as a civic beauty planner, will also be host to Mrs. Forbes. Mrs. Price Collier, another sister, of New York and Tuxedo Park, also will have Mrs. Forbes with her for a short visit. Mrs. Collier is the mother of Mr. Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada, who with Mrs. Robbins is visiting in the Capital with Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison.

Big Birthday Party Planned for President.

Plans are being made for the greatest birthday celebration in the country to be given on Tuesday, January 30, in celebration of President Roosevelt's fifty-second birthday anniversary.

The committee in charge, known as the National Committee for the Birthday Ball for the President, has started a Nation-wide movement to honor the Chief Executive by raising a permanent endowment fund for the Warm Springs Foundation at Presidential birthday balls to be held in every community of the Nation.

The Committee, which includes leaders in many walks of life, is headed by Mr. Henry L. Doherty. Headquarters have been established in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Gen. Pershing, Gov Herbert H. Lehman of New York, Cardinal Hayes and Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, are among the nationaly known names that appear as members of the committee in charge of the plans.

Other outstanding men who will lend their name, and patronage to the undertaking are Mr. Vincent Astor, Rev. W. W. Atterbury, Col. Edward M. House, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Dr. William V. Mayo, Mr. Will H. Hays, Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, Mr. Will Rogers,

Miss Stockton Becomes Bride Of Mr. Warfield

Miss Harris Bridesmaid at Brilliant Wedding in Princeton.

Miss Charlotte Shields Stockton and Mr. Richard Webster Warfield were married yesterday at Princeton, N. J., the wedding having a wide social interest in Washington.

Miss Virginia Harriss, daughter of Mme. Federico Monreal, of Washington, was bridesmaid at the service.

An aigrette of seed pearls, which was first worn by her great-great-grandmother at a ball given in Philadelphia in the early part of the nineteenth century for the Marquis de Lafayette, held the tulle veil Miss Stockton wore.

On that historic occasion, Miss Stockton's ancestress on her maternal grandmother's side of the family opened the ball with the French hero, and ever since the brides in Mrs. Bayard Stockton's family have included this ornament in their trousseaus.

Miss Stockton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stockton, of Princeton, and Mr. Warfield is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ridgely Warfield, of Baltimore. The ceremony took place in Trinity Episcopal Church in Princeton, and a reception followed in the ballroom of Thompson Hall. The Rev. Robert Williams, the rector, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Russell Wicks, dean of the chapel of Princeton University, officiated.

Court Train of Satin.

The bride's gown was of creamy satin, made on simple lines, with which she wore a court train which has been worn by brides in her mother's family for several generations. It also was of satin and trimmed with antique duchess lace and seed pearls. Her flowers were a sheaf of calla lilies.

Miss Martha Hughes Stockton was maid of honor for her sister and Mrs. Herbert O. Crisler, of Princeton, whose husband was Mr. Warfield's best man, was the matron of honor. They wore frocks of Burgundy colored velvet made in the current mode, with high neck bodices, long sleeves and skirts that formed brief trains. Instead of the traditional bridesmaid's bouquet they carried velvet muffs of the material of their frocks and hats, to which were attached clusters of orchids of harmonizing shades.

The bridesmaids wore costumes similar in design and material, but of a slightly deeper shade of Burgundy. The bridesmaids included another sister, Miss Roberta Stockton; a cousin, Miss Roberta Speller, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Georgia Kilpatrick and Miss Eleanor Sheedy, of New York; Miss Sarah Johnston, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Elizabeth Pendleton, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Miss Catherine Cabaniff, of Jersey City, N. J.; Miss Jane Sayen, of Hamilton Square, N. J., and Miss Katherine Stryker, of Trenton, N. J.

J., and Mr. William Beekman Van Alstyne, jr., and the bride's brother, Mr. Bayard Stockton 3d, of Princeton.

Mr. Warfield and his bride will make their home in Princeton, where they have taken an apartment.

Miss Stockton is a descendant of Robert Stockton, who purchased from William Penn a 6,000-acre plot that now forms part of the city of Princeton, and where the family has made its home since early in the eighteenth century. The bride studied at Miss Fine's and at the Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore, and was presented to society last winter at the Baltimore Bachelors Cotillon.

New Clubs Mark Season Opening At Miami Beach

Many from Capital Are Among Vanguard Along 9-Mile Sea Front.

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 17 (Spl.). To a bird on the wing it would seem the season is in full swing along the nine-mile ocean front at Miami Beach.

Every hotel on the ocean, every exclusive club, is open for the daily entertainment and recreation of guests and members. Most of the winter residents have returned and opened their homes for preholiday social activities.

One of the important affairs of the coming week will be the annual book program on Tuesday night when the new cartoon room of the Committee of 100 of Miami Beach will be dedicated. In this room will be hung the more than 100 original cartoons by the Nation's leading artists, which have been presented to the club by their authors or by leading newspapers of the country. Dating back to pre-war days these cartoons present humorous interpretations of dominant scenes in the Nation's history George Ade, Johnny Gruelle and Duane Gaylord will be the featured speakers, and members will present to the club books for the library.

Safeguards Children's Health

The McIlvaine method of heating by oil eliminates the danger and discomfort of cold floors . . . Balanced Heat maintains a continuous circulation of heat and avoids those cold "off" periods of ordinary oil burners when cold air comes down from the windows and runs out on the floor like ice water.

SAVES TIME, HEALTH and MONEY

The McIlvaine Oil Burner is quiet, healthful, dependable and economical. It automatically governs and maintains an even heat, in every room, all winter long, with a remarkably low oil consumption. It is not only efficient, but is economical in operation, because there is no waste or fuel loss.

"God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen . . .

. . . Let Nothing You Dismay"

"THE owner of one scant nose . . . stooped down at Scrooge's keyhole to regale him with a Christmas carol . . ."

In one movement . . . Scrooge reached for his ruler . . . and the would-be caroler scampered from the keyhole into the cold fog.

Dickens wrote "A Christmas Carol" in 1843. The story is so well known that it might in itself account for the association of caroling with the English people. But many of the favored carols have their origin in the quaint tunes and crude rhymes of England's sixteenth century.

Christmas time is singing time. It was so in the Middle Ages . . . was revived in the years of the Restoration following the ban by Puritan leaders . . . and no less so today. Literally, carols are songs of praise and joy . . . and the sixteenth century carol was a combination of the religious and the convivial—the celebrating of the birth of Christ and the exalting of mirth and feasting over the wassail bowl.

Wynken de Worde, in 1521, printed a set of Christmas Carols. And an eighteenth century commentator said "they were festal chansons for enlivening the merriment of the Christmas celebrity, and not such religious songs as are current this day under the same title, and which were substituted by those enemies of innocent and useful mirth—the Puritans."

According to an observation of an English bishop many years ago, the earliest Christmas carol was "the 'Gloria in Excelsis'—the widely known hymn sung by the angels to the shepherds at Our Lord's Nativity." And early writers cite Durandus to "prove that in earlier days of the Church, the bishops were accustomed on Christmas Day to sing carols among their clergy." Durandus derived the word "carol" from cantare, to sing, and rola, an interjection of joy.

It has been said the custom of caroling, so popular in England, grew out of a play given by St. Francis of Assisi, in 1223 . . . to tell the people of Grecia, in Italy, the Christmas story.

At least 400 years old is "The First Nowell" . . . a peasant's crude attempt to tell the New Testament story of the birth of Christ in rhyme . . . sincere and devout. Quite as old, no doubt, is "Deck the Hall," picturing the old Welsh household preparing for the Yuletide feast—for at midnight Christmas Eve the Yule-log was brought in to the middle of the room . . . and each member of the family sat upon it and sang a Yule song . . . for luck . . . before it was lighted ceremoniously in the great fireplace.

Of all God's rich endowments, the raising of one's voice in song is of the most priceless. And yet . . . there is the song that fills the heart this time of year . . . when a gift is sped upon its way in affection and remembrance.

The Washington Post

"Silent Night," for a time believed to have dated back many centuries, has been traced to the town of Oberndorf, in Germany, and is said to have been sung first in a Christmas church service there in 1818.

Of relatively recent origin is "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," another New Testament story of the birth of Christ in song . . . a poem in 1849 by a Unitarian minister, Edmund H. Sears, and music by Richard S. Willis, a composer.

"Good King Wenceslas," of more robust nature, is the story of the tenth century Bohemian king, who performed a kind deed for a poor peasant . . . and a miracle was performed. The song ends with a plea to give to the poor and explains why it was sung by the English waits, or outdoor carolers, just before the Wassail Song . . . a direct appeal for gifts.

And "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen," another story in song of the birth of Christ, was sung by wandering parties of carolers 200 years before similar lines appeared in Charles Dickens' Christmas story.

Caroling is singing . . . and Christmas is singing time. And though today the expression of the heart and soul is confined more to the church and the home than in the Tudor days in England . . . the sweet voices of roving bands of singers as in "the olden days" still are raised in song Christmas Eve . . . where lighted candles brighten windows.

Miss Hepburn Translates Fruits of Film Career to Theater of Living Drama

Mr. Harris and His Star Revive Fragrant Memories of the Past

By Nelson B. Bell.

IN maintaining a profound and piquing silence with regard to the actual nature of "The Lake," the play in which he will return Katharine Hepburn to the theater of the living drama as a star in her own right at the National Theater tomorrow night, Jed Harris, the young producer whose play judgment has been described as clairvoyant, merely adheres to a precept laid down by the late David Belasco, Charles Frohman and others of the Drama's most astute practitioners.

They perceived in a somewhat prevalent practice of disclosing in minutest detail the developments of plot, prior to the formal presentation of the given play, only a device for dulling the spectator's interest and destroying in large measure the elements of suspense and surprise.

This, therefore, they never did.

The precise content of a Belasco play never was known, save to a favored and trustworthy few, until it was revealed upon the rise of the curtain on opening night.

Mr. Harris has been successful in preserving a comparable secrecy in the case of "The Lake." Nothing is known of this play by the mass of the American public beyond the fact that it is heralded as "a beautiful piece of writing" by Dorothy Messingham and Murray MacDonald, its authors, and that it enjoyed a considerable vogue in London strictly on its own merits after a modest launching under obscure auspices at the Arts Theater Club last March. It is divulged, too, that Miss Hepburn is cast in a congenial role of copious emotional opportunity. Beyond that, nothing.

* * * *

IT is not alone in this Sphinxian reticence that Mr. Harris in his present enterprise recalls to mind the inspired prescience in the playhouse of the late David Belasco. He has summoned to his current project two brilliant figures in the theater whose careers are inseparably bound up in the Belasco legend.

These, of course, are Frances Starr, who emerges from a Washington retirement to lend her distinguished support to Miss Hepburn in her first stellar venture on the boards, and Blanche Bates, who has similarly departed the subtropic delights of California to celebrate a comparable renaissance of her art behind the footlights.

These two artists, to perhaps as great a degree as any to whose talents he ever devoted his wizardry, exemplify the incomparable faculty which Belasco alone seemed to possess of unfailingly fitting his stars with vehicles impeccably fashioned to the measure of their capabilities. His plays made vastly more stars than his stars made plays.

Like an artist who discerns the perfect color to complete a masterpiece on canvas, Belasco was able to detect the particular facet of his star's natural endowment that would make the quickest and deepest impression upon the consciousness of the playgoer.

Miss Bates, he early discovered, possessed a natural flair for robust and colorful drama, cast in somewhat heroic mold. Thus, we see her at her best in such discreetly melodramatic plays as Ouida's "Under Two Flags," John Luther Long's "Darling of the Gods" and Belasco's own "Girl of the Golden West." This reputation for adeptness in adventurous and robustious romance clung to Miss Bates also throughout the brief period of her interest in the cinema.

Miss Starr, on the other hand, exerted a gentler and less flamboyant appeal through the exercise of wholly different qualities. Her most effective implement of attack, as Belasco well knew and never sought to disparage, was her voice—an exquisitely modulated and tender instrument of innocence, plaintiveness and charm, capable of melting the icy hearts of men and reducing susceptible members of her own sex to the priceless ecstasy of tears.

This was a qualification largely subordinated to the artifices of stagecraft in "The Rose of the Rancho," Miss Starr's first starring vehicle under the Belasco banner, but one that was fully availed of in "The Easiest Way," Eugene Walter's then daring expose of connubial relationships unsanctified by the formal ministrations of the clergy. This, however, was a mere foretaste of the superb things Miss Starr later was to do through the limpid hypnosis of her incomparable vocal organ.

"One," a slightly eerie and flagrantly ill-judged attempt to dramatize an abstruse spiritual affinity, "The Case of Becky," a melodrama of hypnotism and the charlatans, and others of her plays depending principally upon the ingenuousness of their heroines for climacteric effect, proved scarcely more than preparatory exercises for the delicately ethereal personification of Edward Knobloch's "Marie Odile," one of the loveliest and most memorable creations in the annals of the modern theater.

It is to be hoped, as fragmentary reports from rehearsal halls lead one to suspect, that Mr. Harris has found at his disposal in "The Lake" the facilities as well as the inspiration to preserve to the stage in Miss Hepburn's support the superlative qualities of distinguished artistry so indelibly imprinted upon the past achievements of her associate stars.

* * * *

FOR Miss Hepburn, there is a peculiar justice and rightness in the fact that the National Theater in Washington is to be the scene of her return to the stage under circumstances slightly at variance with those surrounding her last appearance in the same playhouse—as Mr. Arthur J. Levy, now performing on behalf of Mr. Harris valuable func-

KATHARINE HEPBURN,
probably most renowned of the theater's contemporary stars, who, following her sensational triumph in four screen productions, now reverts to her first love, the living theater, and tomorrow night will be seen for the first time on any stage in Jed Harris' production of "The Lake," at the National Theater.

When Two Brilliant Stars Met And Peered Back Across Years

ONLY a few weeks ago the stage of the Martin Beck Theater in New York, where rehearsals were being started for Jed Harris' production of "The Lake," was the scene of a meeting between two of the most illustrious names of the American Theater. Katharine Hepburn, who is new to fame, was then presented to Frances Starr, who has been a distinguished actress through many seasons, as work began on the play in which they will open together at the National Theater tomorrow night.

It was one of those dramatically interesting meetings that are so apt to occur in the theater. On the one hand there was Miss Hepburn, who a scant year and a half ago shot into immediate and startling fame through her work in the cinema version of "A Bill of Divorcement," and on the other there was Miss Starr, who made her emergence as a brilliant luminary in David Belasco's production of "The Rose of the Rancho," quickly followed by "The Easiest Way," and who has been for many years a name to be taken into account.

Each was made famous, almost literally, overnight, by an appearance in a single play. There are few who will ever forget the profound excitement that followed Miss Hepburn's appearance in her initial motion picture, when sheer public insistence, unaided by publicity, forced her into immediate stardom. There are likewise few who will ever forget that astonishing opening night of "The Easiest Way," which put Miss Starr's name in electric lights and redirected the entire emphasis of the popular theater in America to new channels of verity and realism. Each of those openings, no doubt, will have its permanent niche in dramatic history.

Miss Hepburn is still a little new to the acclaim and popularity which have become hers. Three pictures have followed the first, and each has done its part to put her in a place beside the very small handful of great actresses whose names dominate the stage.

Miss Starr has worn her laurels longer through a series of successes, "The Easiest Way," "Marie Odile," "Shore Leave," "Rose of the Rancho," "Tiger! Tiger!" and others.

Some years ago Miss Hepburn was a not particularly demure young miss in Hartford, Conn., just about to enter her teens and already seized by a youthfully ardent love of the theater. Among the actresses who meant to her an incomparable glamour and allure was Miss Starr, who was playing at the Lyceum Theater in "The Easiest Way." Now this play, however admirable as a piece of dramaturgy, was not quite the thing for the children to see. It was, in short, regarded as distinctly sophisticated. In Hartford they dismissed it as "sensational."

Little Miss Hepburn had been taken to "The Bluebird" and to "Peter Pan" and "Treasure Island," but the family drew the line at "The Easiest Way." Their daughter failed to see eye to eye with them in this decision, and determined, with that firmness of purpose which is still one of her outstanding characteristics, to see Miss Starr's performance.

Her chance came in the course of a visit to friends in New York, escorted by her mother. Mrs. Hepburn and the mother of Katharine's little friend had gone out to a matinee, leaving the children behind in the care of a nurse. As soon as they were out of sight, Katharine proceeded promptly and effectively to bully the nurse into taking her little charges to the matinee. The nurse eventually succumbed under the impression that the play in question was a dramatization of a fairy tale, and once there, was either too fascinated or too weakened by shock to remove the children, who were enjoying the whole thing enormously.

Fortunately, the three of them arrived home before the mothers, and there were no dire consequences to the afternoon which Miss Hepburn has always recalled as being both strikingly entertaining and remarkably instructive.

Thus, there was really considerable esprit in the meeting of the older and the younger actress, recently, for were they not, in a manner of speaking, old friends?

Joe Cook, With Usual Gadgets, D. Chasen et al.

That droll funster, Joe Cook, returns to Washington on Monday night, January 8, at the National Theater, for an engagement of one week, thereby assuring joy to thousands of playgoers who have found his personality and comicalities so inspiriting and enjoyable.

His reappearance will be effected in "Hold Your Horses," a musical comedy now playing a long and successful engagement at the New York Winter Garden.

"Hold Your Horses," in 2 acts and 21 scenes, is by Russell Crouse and Corey Ford, with music and lyrics by Russell Bennett, Robert A. Simon, Louis Alter, Arthur Swanstrom and Ben Oakland.

Mr. Cook's supporting company numbers 100 entertainers, headed by Harriet Hoctor, formerly the star dancer in Ziegfeld's "The Three Musketeers," "Show Boat" and "Simple Simon." Others include Tom Patricola, Rex Weber, Frances Upton, Dave Chasen, well-known right-hand man to Joe Cook; June O'Dea, Dorothy Dare, Jerry Norris, Jack Powell and others, not forgetting a chorus of 50 gorgeous girls.

R. H. Burnside staged the entire production under the supervision of J. J. Shubert.

Carl Laemmle Confesses All With Pleasure

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, recently revealed the inside facts concerning the screen version of "Counsellor at Law," which has just been produced at Universal City after two years of hectic uncertainty of various kinds.

"Universal paid one of the highest prices on record for the picture rights to this great play. Then we tried to cast it, and we simply couldn't.

"I tried to borrow stars from other companies. I almost got down on my knees in an effort to get other companies to lend me a star who would fit 'Counsellor at Law.' But I flopped on the job. No other company would come through.

"Then I tried to sell the story to get some of my big investment back. Several companies seemed interested but all of a sudden they lost interest. They quit bidding for the story. They said I had paid too much for it.

"I tried again to cast it properly and out of a clear sky I got the one man in the world I would rather have than any other to play the lead—John Barrymore.

"And to think that I tried to force some other companies to buy the story; actually tried to get rid of the darned thing."

A New Hepburn Vehicle Given Premiere Here

Jed Harris, who has to his credit such outstanding theatrical hits as "Coquette," "The Royal Family," "The Front Page," "Serena Blandish" and the never-to-be-forgotten "Broadway," will bring his second venture of the present season to the National Theater tomorrow evening, when he presents for the first time in America Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake."

The new play is the collaborative effort of Dorothy Massingham and Murray MacDonald and was the outstanding hit in London last season. First produced at the Arts Theater Club, London, its success was instantaneous and it was immediately transferred to the Westminster Theater, where it achieved a run of 250 performances.

In Mr. Harris' production of "The Lake" Miss Hepburn's supporting cast will be headed by three such distinguished artists as Blanche Bates, Frances Starr and Colin Clive.

Mr. Harris, who is at present represented on Broadway with "The Green Bay Tree," at the Cort Theater, believes he has found for Miss Hepburn an ideal vehicle for her return to the legitimate stage. Brooks Atkinson, distinguished critic of the New York Times, recently stated that Mr. Harris possessed one of the most clairvoyant minds in the theater. With a higher percentage of hits to his credit than any producer of his time, it is safe to assume that "The Lake" again w[illegible] Miss Hepburn to stellar [illegible] the theater, which she abandoned three years ago to begin a movie career.

An indefatigable worker, Miss Hepburn will bring to her role in "The Lake" that charm and artistry that have so endeared her to the theatergoing public. Possessing dynamic energy, she left Hollywood a few hours after her last picture was completed, hopped aboard a transcontinental plane and arrived in New York fresh as the proverbial daisy, ready for rehearsals.

The scenic background of the play has been provided by Jo Mielziner. In addition to Miss Bates, Miss Starr and Mr. Clive, the supporting cast includes Geoffrey Wardwell, Roberta Beatty, Lionel Pape, J. P. Wilson, Esther Mitchell, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Philip Tonge, Audrey Ridgewell and others.

Red Light Flashes New Film Prompter

A complicated system of electric lights is the latest "prompter" in Hollywood. It's being used daily on the "Alice in Wonderland" set at Paramount. The huge rubber masks permit the actors to give expression, but sometimes they have difficulty in hearing. So when Charlotte Henry, who has the role of "Alice," is talking to the dutchess and the cook, the flashing of a little red light notifies Alison Skipworth and Lillian Harmer when it is their turn to talk.

Bathrobe Designed To Fit Caterpillar

The wardrobe department at Paramount is at work on the smallest garment it ever has made—a bathrobe for a caterpillar. In fact, two bathrobes for two caterpillars.

Director Conducts Chorus in Cheering

Baton in hand, Director Ernst Lubitsch last week led a chorus of 500 voices, not in song, but in laughter, cheers and applause. He took this method of solving the difficult problem of controlling crowd reactions for a scene in Noel Coward's "Design for Living," in which Fredric March, Gary Cooper and Miriam Hopkins appear.

Rare Perfume Given To Marlene Dietrich

Marlene Dietrich, portraying Russia's most fascinating empress in "Catherine the Great," her new production now being directed by Josef von Sternberg, has received as a gift a beautiful bottle of perfume, the formula of which dates back to the historical period dealt with in the picture.

Musical Stage Genesis of an Engaging Film

Back in the early years of the present century the Chicago scene of the theater was famous throughout the Middle West—the Mississippi Valley so to speak—for two houses that produced musical comedy.

They were the Princess and the LaSalle.

And the trio of writing men who usually signed their names to the successes that played six and eight-month runs at these theaters were Will Hough, Frank Adams (now a great short-story writer), and Joseph Howard, the composer, who wrote "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?"

These men wrote musical comedies that were as big and successful in Chicago and the valley cities as anything playing on Broadway during the corresponding era. And the tenor who played in a great many of their productions was the handsome George Damerel. He married one of the prima donnas with whom he sang. The lady's name was and still is, Myrtle Vail.

These two stars have a daughter now—she's grown up to the dazzling age of 20—and she inherits talent from both sides of the family, plus beauty and mother's complexion and lovely hair. She is Donna Damerel.

Myrtle Vail, long since retired from the world of musical comedy, and her daughter, Donna, have, within the past two years, risen to the heights on radio, in a dramatic sketch that has been voted the most popular on the ether waves. And Donna herself has been voted a greater air favorite than either Ruth Etting or Kate Smith.

It is only natural that these two big radio stars should eventually land in pictures. And they have—with a bang! In a picture named after themselves — "Myrt and Marge."

The Rialto Theater is playing the film and in the supporting cast are Eddie Foy, jr., Trixie Friganza, Ted Healy and Grace Hayes.

It is the work, as to authorship, of Willard Mack's wife, Beatrice Banyard. Al Boasberg dialogued the production and directed it.

It is a film with delightful comedic and melodic trimmings.

LILLIAN HARVEY AND JOHN BOLES, brilliant young German-trained English star and popular American leading man, as they appear in "My Lips Betray," second of Miss Harvey's American-made screen releases, being presented currently in conjunction with George White's "Scandals," at Loew's Fox.

JOEL McCREA AND MARION NIXON, handsome young screen star, a recent Washington visitor, and one of the cinema's most reliable ingenues, in a scene from RKO-Radio's production of "Chance at Heaven," being presented as this week's screen feature, with Ginger Rogers, at the Earle.

What's Going On in the Amusement World as Yuletide Festivities Draw Near

Stage Actress Groomed for a Cinema Career

RKO-Radio Pictures announces an important addition to its player personnel in the signing of Ada Cavell, who comes to the screen with an international background of experience with such institutions as the Theater du Vieux Colombier of Jacques Copeau and With Walter Hampden and William Hodge.

Ada Cavell, who has adopted this screen name because her own is too long and hard to spell, won her new contract through several screen tests, all of which showed her to be a born dramatic actress of exceptional emotional capacity.

Although her career is international and she speaks French, Italian and Spanish fluently, Miss Cavell is a New York girl. Following her elementary school training, she attended Miss Spence's famous school.

Bent upon a career in the theater, Miss Cavell devoted much time to amateur theatricals. Upon completing her education she went to Europe, where she studied with Jacques Copeau for a year and played extra roles at the Comedie Francais.

A role in "Macbeth," with Florence Reed, on the road in the repertoire of the Jetney Players, then touring the New England States, were her first professional engagements upon her return to America. Then came a role with Walter Hampden in "Caponsacchi." Stock engagements in several cities trained her further and she was engaged by William Hodge to play with him on the road in his last great success, "The Old Rascal."

Ada Cavell's first film assignment is understood to be an important one, even for an established screen artist, let alone a newcomer, but the studio that brought Katharine Hepburn, Ann Harding and others to marquee lights is keeping its plans for its new discovery a secret.

Song Idea Hardest Job for Composers

Thirty minutes is all the time required to write a popular song, according to Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, who composed the numbers used by Jack Oakie, Jack Haley and Ginger Rogers and the Pickens Sisters in "Sitting Pretty." "The idea for a song takes longer to get," Gordon explained. "Usually it's a catch phrase. Then we get the rhythm at once and write the words and tune at the same time. We have found that we work best when we work rapidly."

Gary Cooper Hunts On Montana Ranch

With the completion of "Design for Living," Gary Cooper, who is featured in the Noel Coward drama with Fredric March and Miriam Hopkins, has left Hollywood for a vacation of hunting on his Montana ranch. A 2,000-acre tract, the ranch is situated 50 miles south of Helena, near the source of the Missouri River. On his return, Cooper will star in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

Stellar Cast Picked For Dietrich Story

With Marlene Dietrich back in Hollywood, Director Josef von Sternberg has begun assembling her supporting cast in "Scarlet Pageant." Signed to date for leading roles are Kent Taylor, John Lodge, Louise Dresser, Olive Tell, C. Aubrey Smith, Sam Jeffe and Gavin Gordon.

Collier Joins

William Collier, sr., has been signed for "All of Me," with Frederic March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft and Helen Mack.

Artists Who Distinguish the Week's Stage Shows

JAMES MELTON, one of the most popular of the tenors singing over the air, who makes his first local theater appearance this week as headliner of the stage bill at the Earle.

Lois Eckhart, center, one of the blonde adornments of the new edition of George White's "Scandals," which this week constitutes the stage portion of the bill at Loew's Fox. Inset, Gloria Clarke, prominent in the cast of "Gals from Georgia," the new burlesque attraction at the Gayety.

At the Play in New York

By Mark Barron.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16 (AP).—That long troublesome problem of adapting a novel into the more compact form of a stage drama has been solved by the theater's borrowing motion picture technique.

A happy solution was first found by Herman Shumlin in depicting "Grand Hotel" behind the footlights, and the idea has been worked out even more successfully by Howard Lindsay in trimming down "She Loves Me Not" to stage pattern.

Since the days when the dramatic versions of "Revelry" and "An American Tragedy" were criticized as being too sketchy and slow-moving pageants of their original novels, the playwrights and directors have been trying to find some way to overcome this limitation placed on them by the stage.

Revolving stages and quick scene changes were tried, but they never quite worked because, if they weren't too slow, they caused so much noise behind the curtain that the audience was jarred out of the mood of the story.

"GRAND HOTEL," by the use of a small revolving stage and stationary scenes on the sides, moved so fast as almost to seem to be a movie. Director Shumlin emphasized this pace by starting each new scene almost before the preceding one was finished.

The cinematic idea has been carried out further, and impressively so, in "She Loves Me Not." In adapting this novel, Lindsay faced the problem of dramatizing a plot jammed with quick, exciting action and one which must shift instantaneously from scene to scene. Any delay would have botched it into a slow motion tintype.

He has staged the play on two levels, a lower and an upper floor. In the center, on each of the two levels, is a large room, and on each side, on both levels, are smaller rooms. In order to move the action from one room to another, it is not always necessary to lower a curtain or shift the scenery. It is only necessary to douse the lights on one scene, and turn them upon the new one.

THUS there is no reason either for noise or delay in pace. "She Loves Me Not" proceeds with the speed of a talking movie, and there is little doubt that this succession of instantaneous action is responsible for much of the unabated interest in this, one of the best comedies of the new season.

The effectiveness of "Grand Hotel" and "She Loves Me Not" behind the footlights undoubtedly means that playwrights in the future will not hesitate to tackle many novels, from which they would otherwise shy away because of the multiplicity of scene and action.

The novels need only a touch of the cinema to make them footlight triumphs.

Along Comes Rosemary to Prove Even an American Can Be Exotic

HOLLYWOOD—A middle-Western girl is the newest aspirant to a place among the exotic queens of the screen.

Meet Rosemary Ames, red-haired, green-eyed Evanston, Ill., girl whose work on the London stage during the last few years prepared her for the movies.

Without ballyhooing her as the girl who will run Greta out of Hollywood and back to Sweden and Marlene back to Germany, Rosemary's employers are betting quite a lot that they've picked a winner. After seeing her screen test, they cast her opposite John Boles in "Disillusion."

Trips Up Theories.

Miss Ames refutes many movie theories, among them the idea that an American girl can not look exotic, that an actress can not be both frank and mysterious, natural and reserved.

Five feet six and a half, Miss Ames is above the average feminine star height. She weighs 121, a reduction of 7 pounds in three weeks at the request of the studio dressmaker.

Her paternal forefathers arrived from England in the seventeenth century. A maternal grandfather Frederick Schroeder, was a mayor of Brooklyn and had before his store Brooklyn's first wooden Indian, says Rosemary proudly.

Girl of Many Schools.

Miss Ames' education was obtained in Roycemore School in Evanston, University School for Girls in Chicago, Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington, D. C.; Ely School in Connecticut, Mills College in Oakland, Calif., and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London. While studying in the last-named school, she made her professional debut as an American girl in "Five Star Final."

ROSEMARY AMES.

After six years in England and Europe, Miss Ames returned to this country.

Miss Ames has a swell sense of humor, a determination not to be advertised as a "sensational discovery," a divorce and a second husband (an Englishman from whom she is separated), an earnest desire to make good and a small coupe.

Films Turn to Royal Themes In New Cycle

Hollywood has turned quite definitely to royalty and history's great figures for its latest cycle of screen offerings.

Six pictures dealing with the lives of colorful rulers or brilliant personalities out of the pages of the past are either in production or in preparation for filming at the present time, with a seventh in the same category imported from abroad.

Producers have cast the die for a vivid revival of period drama and screen fans of the country, who must have expressed a desire for such fare at least in some degree, many sit back and await a passing parade of imperious queens and gallant officers, with all the pomp and ceremony of days that are gone.

"Catherine the Great," in which Marlene Dietrich will bring to the screen the romantic and dramatic life of Russia's most glamorous empress, is now in production at the Paramount studios, under the direction of Josef von Sternberg.

Given an impressive cast, with more than 50 "name roles," the production is occasioning comment because of the pretentious seettings and lavish costuming which enhance it.

Paramount's second contribution to the coming group of historical offerings will be "Cleopatra," with Claudette Colbert to be featured under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer entered the ranks with their production of "Queen Christina," in which Greta Garbo dons the crown of the queen who was outstanding among the rulers of her native land.

A preference for queenly roles was indicated again by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the selection of "Marie Antoinette" as Norma Shearer's forthcoming production.

"Queen Elizabeth" will be produced at the RKO studios with Katherine Hepburn starred.

Warner Brothers have scheduled for production "Napoleon," in which Edward G. Robinson will portray the little corporal on celluloid.

Rounding out the list is Charles Laughton's current appearance in "Henry VIII," which was filmed in England and recently released.

Nora Ford Has Foremost Role At the Gayety

Starting with the customary matinee this afternoon, the Gayety Theater will offer "Gals from Georgia," headed by that popular little star, Nora Ford, assisted by a large cast of burlesk luminaries.

Prominent in the cast will be the ever popular Bates Sisters, Lucky Darlin, Howard Padden, Steve Mills, Georgia Clark, Jack Rosen, Willie Gordon, Fred Binder and Dolly Hendricks.

The popular morning and afternoon matinees continue at 12 noon and 2:20 o'clock, at the new depression prices. One evening performance is given daily, beginning at 8:20 o'clock.

Film Camera Balks At Studio Retake

Cecil B. DeMille is the victim of another Hollywood irony. After six weeks of filming "Four Frightened People" under every sort of handicap in the jungles of Hawaii, he found not a single scene spoiled when he returned to Hollywood. Only three small interior scenes had to be made at the studio. On the first one attempted, he had to make a retake because something had happened to a camera.

Raft Once More Is Dancer in "Bolero"

George Raft, at one time the highest paid American dancer in Europe, became a "hoofer" again as production began on "Bolero," with Carole Lombard, Frances Drake and Sally Rand. Among the many sensational dance numbers for the production is an original creation—a climactic dance number interpreting the spirit of Ravel's famous "Bolero," from which the film derives its title.

Woman Artist Turns Tables On the Males

"Hell hath no fury like a beautiful woman called unbeautiful."

Chris Marie Meeker, foremost portrait painter of Hollywood stars, rises in defense of the famous feminine stars whose alleged shortcomings were recently exposed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, famous artist.

And here, Mr. Stanislaws, it comes:

"John Barrymore—He's the Katharine Hepburn of the males," says Miss Meeker. "Sensitive nostrils denote an artistic, but not a perfect face.

"James Cagney—A perfect example of a face composed of heterogeneous parts. A jumble of features, made attractive by a vital personality.

"Richard Barthelmess—A well-moulded face of the pugilistic type. Dogged expression rather than esthetic.

"Clark Gable—A type whose features do not appeal to the tender woman. Eyes, ears and nose all too prominent for perfection.

"Dick Powell—Contrary to millions of misses, he is not really good looking. Mouth irritating, and not kissable! (One woman's opinion, anyway.)

"Robert Montgomery—Eyes a little too close together, but it's their devilishness that lends him an appeal to women just a little bit bored.

"Frederic March—Chin and forehead construction balance face into one of masterful business executive type. Eyes, nose and mouth commonplace, however, and of secondary importance to chin and forehead.

"Warren William—The Barrymore type but with stronger facial characteristics. The type that smashes his way through, rather than by employing subtlety.

"Ronald Colman—Only the eyes prevent a classically sculptured face from being symmetrical. Face of a student, rather than a playboy.

"Gary Cooper—A pouty mouth, otherwise a strong he-man face."

Progress Made By Radio With Year's Output

One of the busiest production periods of the year at the RKO-Radio Pictures' Studio, was concluded during the past week with the completion of six feature films, bringing the total to 20 1933-1934 features finished to date.

With one film now shooting, and ten others in preparation for early shooting, the RKO-Radio studios will have completed more than half of the new season's crop of feature productions by the first of the new year.

Included among the six films finished during the past week are "Man of Two Worlds," which marke the American film debut of Francis Lederer, internationally known stage star, costarred with Elissa Landi. Another outstanding production completed is the latest Kaharine Hepburn starring vehicle, "Trigger."

In preparation for early production are vehicles for Ann Harding, Irene Dunn, Colleen Moore, Francis Lederer, Richard Dix, Dolores Del Rio, Joel McCrea, Clive Brook and a comedy feature costarring Zasu Pitts and Pert Kelton.

Also included in this group is the initial RKO-Radio starring vehicle for Lenore Ulric, distinguished stage star, entitled "I Love An Actress."

Among the six films completed during the past week are "Hips, Hips Hooray," a musical film starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, with Ruth Etting, Dorothy Lee and Thelma Todd as their trio of leading ladies, and George Meeker and Phyllis Barry in the cast.

"Long Lost Father," starring John Barrymore with Helen Chandler playing the featured feminine role, and Alan Mowbray, Donald Cook, Natalie Moorhead and Adele Thomas in the other principal roles, was directed by Ernest B. Schoedsack and is based upon the G. B. Stern novel.

"Once Over Lightly" is a comedy production introducing a new romantic screen combination, El Brendel and Zasu Pitts. Appearing with them are a group of popular screen comedians, including Pert Kelton, Skeets Gallagher and James Gleason. Russell Mack directed, from an original story by Arthur E. Hornman.

"Wild Birds" is a dramatic story of love involving a country boy and girl, with Tom Brown and Jean Parker in the leading roles. Elliott Nugent directed, from an original story by Don Totheroh. In the cast are Nydia Westman, Zasu Pitts, Arthur Byron and Charles Grapewin.

"Man of Two Worlds" is based upon the Ainsworth Morgan novel of Eskimo locale, involving an Eskimo tribesman in a modern romance with a beautiful English lady. J. Farrell McDonald, Henry Stephenson, Ivan Simpson, Christian Rub and Steffi Duna, prominent European actress, are featured in the cast.

Acute Memory Makes Filming A Possibility

Because one man happened to remember an advertisement that had been run in a Hollywood film trade magazine six years ago, "Alice in Wonderland" is to be brought to the screen.

But for that one man's memory it is quite possible that "Alice," darling of millions, might still be suspended inanimate in a court of motion picture arbitration. Instead, within two weeks—three at most—she will appear on the cinematic horizon to delight anew and afresh those same millions who have since childhood come to love her.

A few months ago three motion picture companies announced simultaneously that they were going to film Lewis Carrol's "Alice in Wonderland."

Paramount was going to, Columbia was planning a production of it, and Mary Pickford made known that Walt Disney was contemplating her as a mistress of Alice-ish ceremonies for a colored cartoon presentation of the classic.

But Edgar Norton held the key.

And one production executive at Paramount, alone amongst his kind in Hollywood recalled that he did.

Norton, player of butler roles in motion pictures for many years, six years ago acquired the screen rights to "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass." This was the result of childhood memories and fancies in England, plus an acute sense of dramatic appreciation and long negotiation.

At the time Norton acquired his rights, at the advent of talking pictures, he inserted a small advertisement in one Hollywood film trade paper. It announced that he, Norton, was the one person in the world who held such privileges of sale.

No one paid much attention to that display at the time.

Except that one film maker at Paramount. He remembered. He remembered Norton's name, telephone number and address.

And that is why one film company beat out three others in bringinng Alice to the screen.

Fields Relents, Will Juggle in New Film

W. C. Fields, once one of the world's greatest jugglers, who consistently has refused to do any part of his act in the films, has relented a bit. He will do part of his famous billiards stunt in his next picture, "Six of a Kind." Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, Alison Skipworth, George Burns and Gracie Allen are cast with Fields in the comedy.

Cinderella.

Dorothy Wilson, selected for the lead in "Eight Girls in a Boat" was elevated from an RKO studio stenographer to a featured player then forgotten. Six months elapsed before Paramount "rediscovered" her.

Fragrant Memories of the Past

tions which formerly he contributed to the Belasco enterprises, opportunely points out.

On this occasion the National, for the second time, will have been the scene of a focal juncture in this amazing young actress' career.

Tomorrow night will be a happy occasion, when she emerges for the first time as a star of the legitimate stage; a night that will find her at the very peak of almost dizzying success. But a few years ago, the same stage saw Miss Hepburn at what was close to the lowest point in her life as an actress. That was the time when she was dismissed without warning from the leading feminine role in "Death Takes a Holiday."

Miss Hepburn had been engaged for the part of the Princess Grazia in this play almost solely on the strength of her own personal magnetism, very faintly supported by her meager experience on the stage. She had always had the kind of personality that caught and held the imagination of producers, and unlike most novitiate actresses she had rarely had difficulty in finding work. But because she had had so little experience, she had encountered very considerable difficulty in holding onto her jobs after she got them.

At the very outset of her career she had been catapulted into the leading role of "The Big Pond," only to receive her notice of dismissal after the opening performance.

For a time after that she had contented herself with understudy work and small but effective parts.

Then she was once more engaged for a leading role in "Death Takes a Holiday," and her career was again taking an upward path.

She opened in the play at the National Theater, and played it there for a week. So far as she knew, she was satisfactory—having been given no indication to the contrary by the management. Therefore, it was the greater blow when on Saturday night she received a brief and impersonal note from the stage manager that her services would no longer be required.

For a time she was shattered. It was her second great opportunity, and for the second time she had failed to grasp it!

The resilience which had hitherto served her so well now disappeared, and she was for the first time a really frightened young girl, uncertain of her talent and of her future, wondering whether there might be any use in her continuing as an actress.

Fortunately, her innate self-confidence and sense of humor triumphed, and she went back to understudies and bits for a few years, until she was engaged to play an important role with Jane Cowl in "Art and Mrs. Bottle."

It was in this part that she first attracted critical attention and established herself as one of the rising young ingenues of the stage.

What added inches "The Warrior's Husband" and the cinema since have added to her dramatic stature is an item of the theater's most exciting current history.

* * * *

THE current week, by every tradition of the theater, should be the least fruitful of any in the year, with the single exception of Holy Week.

These two intervals of contemplation—the week preceding the anniversary of the birth of the Saviour and Passion Week—give pause to the ceaseless quest of gayety and entertainment that characterizes the other 50 weeks of the year and bring an inevitable lull in theatrical activity.

The Capital is, perhaps, less affected by this retarded tempo of the amusement world than some other centers of culture, and so it is that entertainment does not wholly stagnate at this particular season of Yuletide observance. So it is, likewise, that the impending seven days, elsewhere than at the National, do not hold out especial promise of riches in store in any playhouse.

There are available, to be sure, a goodly number of fair average diversions, but the flow of the studios' most compelling personalities and most engaging product across the stages and screens of the National Capital will not resume its normal course until New Year's Eve, or thereabouts.

Santa Claus is a jovial but a ruthless competitor and the entrepreneurs seeking public favor have long since found it out!

Sell Your Songs to the Public, Is Miss Etting's Sound Advice

By Hubbard Keavy.

HOLLYWOOD—The movies are simplifying singing, whistling and humming for those who have poor musical memories, since songs, now more than ever, are being given pictorial treatment which blends into the picture and stirs the imagination.

This thought was one advanced by Ruth Etting, who believes there are more and better songs now than during any period in the last 20 years. Songstress Etting credits the great wave of musical pictures streaming from Hollywood.

Selling a Song.

"The way to win people to a song is to sell them on it," Miss Etting says. "Songs to be important demand a personal enthusiasm, an intensely personal liking. When a song gets to be a favorite of enough people, both of singers and listeners, then it's a hit.

"A good example of pictorial treatment of a song was the number 'Shuffle Off to Buffalo' in 'Forty-second Street.' When audiences came out of the theater whistling or humming this tune, they were remembering a cute and lively scene, pretty girls, bright and airy nonsense."

In Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals" Miss Etting's first full-length picture, she sings just one number, "No More Love." Her role matches the plaintive ballad—she is the discarded mistress of the emperor about to be auctioned off in the slave market. The entire scene is built around this song.

"I enthused over 'No More Love' as much as I did over some of my own favorites," Ruth says. "As I sang it, I was selling it. My personal enthusiasm, coupled with the spectacle that goes with the song, should make it easy for anyone to remember it."

Affection Helps.

Often a song becomes a hit out of someone's affection. Miss Etting took it upon herself to revive Norah Bayes' old favorite, "Shine On, Harvest Moon," and she made it a bigger hit than it ever was. Ruth liked it and she sang it because it made her happy.

RUTH ETTING.

"Song writers are finding great encouragement in the success pictures are giving their numbers," says Ruth.

"The great many popular numbers which first were heard in the new order of filmusicals is proof of this. 'Happy Days Are Here Again' might easily be the songwriters' theme song."

George Arliss Reaffirms His Belief in "Costume" Picture

He has proved his faith in the past and will probably go on fighting the battles of this form of screen entertainment, and fighting them successfully.

"Disraeli," his first talking picture, is now being re-released by Warner Bros. after four years. It was based on his outstanding stage success, and had served him as a silent film before it was launched as a pioneer "talkie."

From "Disraeli" to "Voltaire," his most recent vehicle, released a few months ago, Mr. Arilss's career as a film star has demonstrated his confidence that the past as well as the present offers advantages that the producers of motion pictures, and those who play in them, cannot afford to overlook.

"Disraeli" was shown in 1929 and 1930 not only in every country where the English language is spoken, but also in the greater part of continental Europe. It won not only the praises of critics and the box office patronage of the public, but many medals and other awards for stars and producers and a degree of prestige which played no small part in the rapid advance of the "talkies" to the position they hold today in the entertainment world.

"Costume" pictures, Mr. Arliss contends, have been good, bad and indifferent, and they have met corresponding fortunes. The causes of success or failure, he believes, lie in each of these pictures simply as a picture, as entertainment; such matters as the period of the story, the clothes worn, the manner of speech (within certain obvious limitations), have no bearing on the essential point.

According to Mr. Arliss, "People were just as human, just as interesting, 100 or 500 years ago as they are today. As for Disraeli, he is really a modern in every respect except the cut and color of his coat and trousers."

The national re-release date of "Disraeli" was December 16. For the past three years requests have come to Warner Bros. from members of the public who saw and enjoyed the film when it first came out, and who have asked for another opportunity to see it and to send others to see it.

National Symphony Orchestra Is Believed Well on Way to Its Most Successful Season

Reception by Washingtonians Encourages Kindler's Group

Attendance at Concerts Shown to Be 15 Per Cent Over Previous Record; Steady Growth of Interest Displayed by Music Lovers.

From the managerial office of the National Symphony Orchestra comes the pleasant news that the status of the organization is more firmly established than ever before, and that the prospects for the most successful season in its history are excellent. Conductor Hans Kindler and his men have played during the current season a number of concerts sufficient to form a basis for an estimate of the year's achievement.

Thus far the orchestra has given six concerts in Constitution Hall and three programs for young people in the auditorium of the Central High School. The final concert of 1933 was played last Thursday and for the next event one must turn to January 7 on a new calendar.

C. C. Cappel, business manager of the orchestra, announced yesterday that tabulations kept in his office show attendance at the concerts this season has increased slightly more than 15 per cent over the previous record at this halfway point. And there are indications this percentage will grow during the coming months.

Sees Growth of Interest.

"This is certainly an evidence of a steady and healthy growth of interest in the orchestra on the part of Washington music lovers," said Mr. Cappel. "No extraordinary or spectacular means have been used to stimulate that interest. There has been merely the constant effort to give the finest music possible, played to the best of the orchestra's capabilities. I think this proves Dr. Kindler's ambition to build the National Symphony into an orchestra second to none is being more and more appreciated by everyone interested in the musical reputation of the Capital."

The orchestra has presented an impressive list of soloists this season, and will be equally generous during the remainder of the concerts. Those heard so far are Ernest Hutcheson, pianist; John Charles Thomas, barytone; Edward Johnson, tenor; Gloria Perkins, talented child violinist, and Rose Bampton, contralto.

Those scheduled to appear after the new year are Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist, on January 18; John Powell, American composer-pianist, on January 28; Albert Spalding, violinist, on February 11; Guiomar Novaes, pianist, on February 21, and two of the orchestra's own members on March 1.

Soloists to Share Honors.

On that date, Concert Master Frank Gittelson and George Wargo, first chair viola, will share the honors. Mr. Gittelson was a soloist with the National Symphony last season, playing the Bruch concerto, but Mr. Wargo has not yet had the opportunity to appear here as a soloist.

An announcement of interest to subscribers was made yesterday, following the Friday meeting of the women's committee of the National Symphony Orchestra Association. It was decided that on every subscription of $25 or more to the orchestra's sustaining fund a credit of 12 per cent will be allowed, if desired, to be applied by the subscriber to the purchase of season tickets for the 1934-35 season.

In order to receive this credit, subscriptions must be in the hands of the orchestra management before April 12. A subscription makes the donor eligible for membership in the association, and carries with it a vote in the affairs of the organization.

Choral Society Will Give Free Yule Concert

Louis A. Potter Will Direct Program at Church Thursday.

Under direction of Louis A. Potter, the Washington Choral Society, assisted by Adolf Torovski and Walter Nash, organists, and Edwin C. Steffe, barytone, will give a candlelight concert of old Christmas music, free to the public, at 5 o'clock Thursday in the Church of the Epiphany. Selections from the "Christmas Oratorio" of Bach, traditional English songs, Cornelius' arrangement of "How Brightly Shines the Morning Star," and other numbers will constitute the program.

Christmas chimes will be played for the half hour preceding the concert. This contribution to the city's observance of Christmas is made possible by the combined efforts of the musicians, the officers of the Society, headed by Myron W. Whitney, and a group of sponsors, among whom are the following:

Mesdames Charles E. Acker, Anne Archbold, Charles Bell, Robert Woods Bliss, Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, Hennen Jennings, Frederic A. Keep, Henry Leonard, Edward B. Meigs, Eugene Meyer, Edwin B. Parker, and Armistead Peter 3d, Miss Grace Dunham Guest, Miss Helen Lee Jones, Miss Strong, Miss Grace Lincoln Temple, Messrs. Kreisler Appears Here January 16

Noted Violinist Will Launch Mrs. Dorsey's Recital.

Fritz Kreisler, who has flitted back across the Atlantic to spend the Christmas holidays with friends in Europe, will return to the United States January 9, and one week later, on January 16, will inaugurate Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's Tuesday afternoon recital series in Constitution Hall. This is the only professional appearance the famous violinist will make in Washington this season.

Ocean voyages are mere episodes in Kreisler's active life. In December of last year he did the same thing—suspended his American tour to visit Vienna for the final rehearsals of his latest operetta, "Cissy," which had its premiere two days before Christmas. This tuneful work has proved to be an uncommon success. A second company has been organized, and is now appearing in Munich.

En route home this year for the holiday season, Kreisler stops off in London to make arrangements for the opening there of "Cissy" during Easter week. The operetta is typically Viennese in its musical atmosphere and is based on the romantic marriage of Empress Elizabeth of Austria.

When Kreisler returns to resume his recital tour, he will remain in this country only a month, going to Europe immediately after his New York recital, February 10.

Oratorio Society Gives "The Messiah" Jan. 14

Handel's "The Messiah," which has not been heard in the Capital City for several years, will be presented by the Washington Oratorio Society, under the direction of George F. Kortzenborn, in the Central High School auditorium Sunday afternoon, January 14. The Oratorio Society will have the assistance of the Washington Orchestral Society, conducted by C. E. Christiani, and of vocal soloists.

The chorus will number 130 voices. Interest is being shown in this production by the comparatively new choral organization, which was formed a year ago. The Washington Oratorio Society made its first appearance last May, when "The Creation" was given.

Army Band Will Play 5 Concerts This Week

The U. S. Army Band this week will play five concerts at the Army War College. The Family Hour of Music is scheduled for Monday at 6 p. m., and Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock there will be a concert of Venezuelan music.

Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock will be presented a "Music of the Americas" program, featuring Eduardo Caso, tenor from the Dominican Republic. This will be followed at 12:30 o'clock by the Land Grant College program of the National Farm and Home Hour. The Friday concert will be at 4:35 p. m.

Navy Band Orchestra Plays Tomorrow Night

The U. S. Navy Band Orchestra will give a concert tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Sail Loft at the Navy Yard. On the program will be the "Capriccio Espagnol" of Rimski-Korsakov, the overture of Offenbach's light opera, "Le Belle Helene," and the Yuletide fantasy, "Christmas Bells," by Erno Rappe.

The Navy Band will broadcast three concerts from the Sail Loft, Monday morning at 11 o'clock, Tuesday at 4 p. m., and Thursday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Philadelphia Orchestra Plans Varied Concert Here Tuesday

Mozart and Gluck Will Be Features of Evening at Constitution Hall.

Having substituted Mozart and Gluck for the Gliere symphony originally announced, Leopold Stokowski will conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra in its third Washington concert Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall. "Bali," the latest work of the American composer, Henry Eichheim, will have its first hearing in the Capital City, and there will be a Wagnerian excerpt infrequently heard outside of opera houses—the "Liebesnacht" music from the second act of "Tristan und Isolde."

The concert will begin promptly at 8:45 o'clock, and the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, under whose management the orchestra appears here, again calls attention to the fact that the doors will be closed at that hour not to be opened for tardy auditors until the intermission. The complete program follows:

Suite .... Gluck-Mottl
"Air gai" and "Lento," from "Iphigenie en Aulide."
"Reigen seligen Geister," from "Orfeo en Euridice."
"Musette," from "Armide."
"Air gai," from "Iphigenie en Aulide" and "Sicilienne," from "Armide."
"Symphony in G Minor".... Mozart
Intermission.
"Bali" .... Eichheim
"Liebesnacht," from "Tristan und Isolde" .... Wagner

From the operas of Christoph Willibald von Gluck, six selections were assembled and orchestrated by Felix Mottl, who published the suite in 1900. The first movement combined two contrasting passages from "Iphigenie en Aulide," written in 1774, with an introductory passage from the ballet-opera, "Don Juan or the Stone Guest," produced in Vienna in 1761.

The second excerpt is the familiar "Dance of the Blessed Spirits" from "Orfeo ed Euridice," written in 1762. The third is a "Musette" from "Armide" (1777), and the concluding number united an "Air gai" from "Iphigenie en Aulide" with a "Sicilienne" from "Armide."

Mozart's G minor symphony is one of three great works written within a space of two months in 1788, when the composer was trying to pay his creditors with the proceeds of masterpieces. The E flat symphony is dated June 26, the G minor July 25, and the "Jupiter" August 10.

At this time Mozart was desperately hard up and continually harassed by demands for money. Hints of his mental distress began to be reflected in his music by July when he was working on the G minor symphony, according to some critics who discover "joy and gladness yielding to sorrow and complaining," a sorrow which mounts climatically to a wild merriment "as if seeking to stifle care."

"Coming of the King" To Be Staged Tonight

A dramatized version of Dudley Buck's cantata, "The Coming of the King," will be presented in the National City Christian Church this evening at 7:45 o'clock, under direction of H. Augustine Smith, director of fine arts in religion at Boston University. A cast of more than 100 persons from the choir and church school will participate in the ten episodes dealing with the prophecies and events attending the birth of Jesus.

The part of the Madonna will be sung by Helen Turley, contralto, and that of Joseph by Earl Bullock, barytone. Robert A. Voorus will take the role of Herod, and the Magi will be impersonated by Finnel F. Estes, Theron C. Copeland and Charles Planck.

Solo parts will be sung by Mrs. B. D. Shreve, Cecile Littlefield, Helen Turley, Mrs. Leo Tooley, W. E. Braithwaite, Leo Tooley, J. Horace Smithey and Frederick Freund. William Fletcher Smith will be at the organ console, and will play also a brief program of carols on the tower chimes before the cantata begins.

District Women Marshal Forces to Procure Legislation Affecting Welfare of Home

Status of Women, Children, Other Problems Will Come Up

Virginia and Maryland Clubs Join With Leaders Throughout U. S. in Drive for Laws to Bring About Better Conditions.

Forces are being marshaled in many centers for women in Washington for a determined drive to procure legislation at this session of Congress affecting the status of women and children and other problems of interest here.

Washington civic workers who must go to Congress and congressional committees to get the measurements for civic betterment and progress will not go alone, for women throughout the Nation always are generous in lending suport to projects for which voteless women in the District of Columbia stand.

In keeping with the general idea that the National Capital should be a model in all things, especially the protection of the home and children, many women who are workers in their home States for certain legislation pass at least part of each session of Congress working shoulder to shoulder with the women of the District.

In return organizations here help the back-home State projects as much as they can, and the working committees give support in solving problems presented by other sections of the country. The women who live in Washington and yet have votes in other States quite naturally become the spokesmen before their congressmen for women of the District. The power of the outlying women's clubs in Maryland and Virginia, where the women, although belonging to Washington organizations, yet have voting powers in one of these States, is not to be underestimated. These "border club" circles understand the point of view of women of Washington, because they belong to the same circles. They have been powerful in furthering measures relating to schools, sanitation and similar projects.

Of the 18 women who have been members of the National Congress practically all have taken a pronounced interest in District of Columbia matters. At the present time women members of Congress evidence a much more than transient residential interest in the Capital City.

The national board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which will meet at headquarters on N street in January, according to the usual custom, will consider the interests of women of the District of Columbia.

Outranked in Air by Other Powers, U. S. Army Corps Labors to Lift Fighting Strength

Curtailed Funds Fail to Halt March of Experimentation

Air-Cooled Engine Favored for Future Battle Planes, and More Speed is Promised by New Streamlines on Scientific Lines.

Despite curtailment of experimentation by the Army Air Corps this year because of economy legislation, much progress has been made in the development of military airplanes.

But the Air Corps believes this development will still leave the United States with planes not up to the standards of England and France's new models, now in experimental stages.

It has been the policy of the Materials Division of the Air Corps to continue engine and power plant projects at the expense of other activities.

As a result of this year's work with engines, it is thought the air-cooled engine will entirely replace the liquid-cooled engine for military purposes.

Development of fuel injection, exhaust driven supercharger, improved fuel with lower specific consumption all favor the replacement of the liquid-cooled engine.

In the development of the air-cooled engine, Maj. Clinton W. Howard, chief of the materials division, said there have been marked changes, many resulting in the increase of power.

Important, too, have been experiments with the elimination of propeller noise, as reduction of this noise is an item contributing to the success of night air operations against an enemy objective well defended by antiaircraft forces.

The work of silencing propellers includes the design of blades having thin wide tips and working at high angles of attack along the blade. With tip speed well under 900 feet per second, 50 to 75 per cent of the noise-producing energy is eliminated.

Stronger materials, as well as more efficient methods of handling them, will be needed to meet the strength requirements of new pursuit types, if the structural weights are to remain within the desired limits, it was stated.

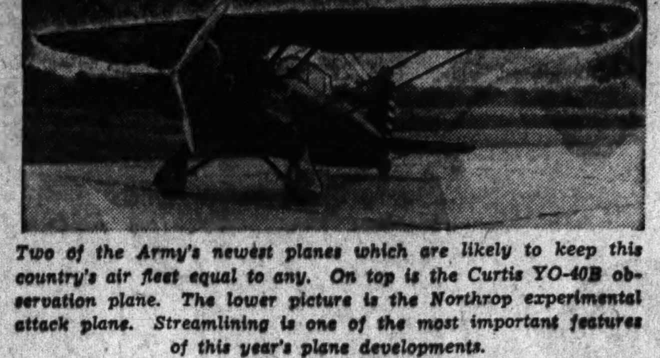
Streamlining of planes has been important. It has been learned through experimentation in the full scale wind tunnel that the flush type of rivet will reduce drag so that increases in speed of from 8 to 10 miles per hour may be expected in a 200 mile an hour ship.

The streamline wheel has been standardized for all sizes and all standard planes. The use of streamline wheels improves the landing of planes on soft fields, as much larger tires are used.

Because of the need of an amphibian type in connection with the tactical work of the Air Corps, such a plane is being developed from the Douglas Amphibian.

Armament development has gone forward, with the result that new bomb racks are to be placed in all planes now under construction. Bombs will be carried within the plane because of the increase of speed possible. All new racks are electrically operated.

New Threats for Air Battle



Two of the Army's newest planes which are likely to keep this country's air fleet equal to any. On top is the Curtis YO-40B observation plane. The lower picture is the Northrop experimental attack plane. Streamlining is one of the most important features of this year's plane developments.

New Promotion Plan Adopted For Reserves

Army Medical Corps Will Forego Certain Steps for Elevation.

Provisions of regulations governing exemptions from examinations for promotion in the Officers' Reserve Corps have been amended by the War Department to include the Medical and Dental Corps. According to instructions made public by the adjutant general, reserve officers of the Medical and Dental Corps who are graduates of Medical or Dental Reserve Officers' Training Corps institutions will be exempted from 12 of the 14 subjects of the military knowledge test for certificate of capacity for promotion to the grade of captain.

The subjects in which they are required to qualify are "supply and mess management" and "defense against chemical warfare." The exemptions are only authorized, however, when the R. O. T. C. training has been completed within five years of date of application for examination.

The news has been received with interest by District medical and dental officers, and a flood of applications from first lieutenants entitled to the exemptions is expected by reserve headquarters. After receiving the appropriate certificate of qualification in the military knowledge test the officers may then apply for the practical test conducted by a board of medical officers at the Army Medical Center. If successful in the practical test examination the officer is issued a certificate of capacity, which certifies the officer has met the professional qualifications for promotion to the next higher grade.

Two of the officers named in the order are residents of the District of Columbia—Lieut. Cols. Randolph E. B. McKenney, of the Cosmos Club, and Philip P. Cole, of 3514 Macomb street northwest. Col. McKenney is of the Infantry Reserve and Col. Cole is of the Field Artillery Reserve. Only those officers qualified by education, military experience and character are selected for General Staff duty.

Lieut. Col. Robert Lee Longstreet, Quartermaster Corps, of 1627 K street northwest, has been reappointed in the Officers' Reserve Corps for another period of five years by the War Department. Col. Longstreet is third vice president and chairman of the membership committee of the Quartermaster Association.

Department Adjutant Howard S. Fisk, of the District Department, has been advised by National Adjutant Frank E. Samuel of details of the new organization and attachment of these junior units to posts is to be started soon. Those eligible for membership include all male descendants, adopted sons and stepsons of members of the American Legion, and such descendants of male and female veterans who died in service during the World War or who died subsequent to honorable discharge from the service. There is no form or class of membership except an active membership.

Designed for Civilians.

It is to be purely a civilian organization, and membership does not affect nor increase liability for military or police service. It is to be a nonpolitical organization and is not to be used for the dissemination of partisan principles nor for the promotion of the candidacy of any person seeking public office or preferment. It is also to be a nonsectarian organization.

The new outfit is to be organized into detachments and these in turn into squadrons. There is to be one detachment to each department. They are to be organized under the jurisdiction of local posts of the American Legion and are to bear the name of the post to which attached. Only one squadron is permitted to be attached to a post. The minimum membership for the forming of a squadron is ten.

The department organization is to be known as the "headquarters detachment" and is to consist of seven members of the American Legion, to be atppointed by the department commander of the American Legion. The chairman of this committee is to be known as the commander of headquarters detachment. The officers of a squadron consist of captain, first lieutenant, second lieutenant, adjutant, finance officer, sergeant at arms, chaplain and historian.

The officers of a squadron are to be elected once a year and meetings are to be held not less than once a month. Application blanks for charter membership cards and the squadron handbook were received at the headquarters of the Department of the District of Columbia in the Bond Building the past week. Several District posts are arranging for the formation of squadrons.

Ready to Present Bill.

A new measure in the shape of the American Legion's bill to be presented in the Senate and House January 3 was prepared a few days ago by John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the national legislative committee of the American Legion, and already has been approved by several departments in its completed form.

The new bill is not to be construed as an attempt to repeal the economy act. It does not disturb the economy act's provisions relating to nonservice connected disability payments for World War veterans, nor does it affect the pensions of veterans or dependents of other wars.

The rate of compensation for service connected total disability for World War veterans provided in the proposed bill is $100 per month. Where the service connected disability is partial, the monthly compensation is to be a percentage of the compensation that would be payable for total disability.

Where a World War veteran entitled to service connection is shown to have a service connected active tuberculosis disease of a compensable degree, which has reached a condition of complete arrest, the rate of compensation is to be not less than 50 per cent. Benefits payable to World War veterans are to be entitled "compensation" and not "pension." Provision also is made for the widows and children of deceased veterans of the World War, as well as those of the Spanish-American War, Boxer Rebellion or Philippine Insurrection.

Sculptured Silhouette Inspired by Mae West Continues to Bask in Style Spotlight

Gay Four-Cylinder Pajamas Win Easily in Fashion's Race

Newest Scarfs Resemble Miniature Tablecloths; International Shoe Made for Globe-Trotting; Peplum Is Upside Down.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Although the name of Mae West, according to style authorities, has lost considerable of its brilliance in the fashion world, the buxom blonde's influence is still apparent in gowns that "sculp" the figure.

A young American designer, Irma Kirby, has taken this sculpturing business seriously in the case of a black transparent velvet evening gown. The woman with too generous upholstery had better pass up this little Kirby number. If she should manage to wriggle into it her friends will unite with her in wishing she hadn't. But let the sylph-like creature with a few curves here and there give this gown careful consideration. If she gives it half a chance it will make her a modern Venus.

Flounce Ends in Train.

At first glance the velvet seems to be a simple tube-like affair. But that is where Miss Kirby's artistry comes in. The cut which looks so amazingly simple is actually amazingly intricate. As a result the gown molds the body from decolletage to within a few inches of the floor. A full taffeta-lined ruffle encircles the neck, a shallow U in front and a V in back. This ruffle may be yanked at the sides to make a quaint drop-shoulder line. Rustling taffeta also lines a full flounce, which is placed at the bottom of the skirt and forms a frivolous, ruffly train.

The gown's inky blackness is relieved by smoky red, green, and periwinkle roses, which are crushed against the neck frill and the skirt flounce in front.

Fringed Tongues and Split Vamps.

An international shoe. Sounds as if it were meant for globe-trotting. And it wouldn't surprise many if this Russian calf-colored English brogue of Norwegian grained leather were to stroll practically all over the face of the earth. It surely is destined to do a lot of walking in Washington this winter and spring.

Seldom has practicability been so suavely combined with downright good looks as in this tan five-eyelet oxford with flexible sole and military heel. Old-fashioned pinking outlines perforated strips which swirl across counter and vamp and make wing-tips. An amusing fringed tongue may be worn over the lacing, a style that is particularly dear to the collegienne. Should she grow tired of having her tongue hang out she may easily remove it and expose the stout lacing on the instep to an admiring world. The brogue is made in black as well as Russian calf color.

A shoe designer not long ago looked at the vamps of his models and wondered what he could do to them that would be new and different. Bows had been used in every conceivable way. Fancy tips, gypsy seams, clips, and buckles were an old, old story. Then he had an inspiration. He would slit the vamp. And that, dear readers, is just what he did, to the huge delight of those who like shoes that are novel but not bizarre. After the designer had ruthlessly split the calf vamp wide open, he inserted a V-shaped piece of suede and then made tiny perforations along the leather's edge. Suede was also set in the sides to advantage.

This unusual shoe is the dress oxford type that may be worn for the street or informal afternoon affairs. The leather heel is neatly Cuban. Laces are run through four eyelets over a suede tongue. Black or brown are the colors.

Tinsel Poises on Bright Chiffon.

Feathery Shetland yarn has been woven into foamy scarfs that will please grandmother and thrill her gadabout granddaughter. Grandmother will most likely wear the shawl draped softly about her shoulders as she sits by the fire. Granddaughter will draw it tightly about her throat and tie it in a big pussy-cat bow beneath her chin before she goes motoring on wintry nights.

Deep lacy borders adorn these scarfs, which were made in England. A luscious peach one has a beige border, a white one has a lovely pale green border, and an orange one has a peach border. Two shades of gray, brown, and green make other attractive ones. All are 72 inches long and 24 inches wide.

For the athletic young woman who just must spend so many hours each day out of doors, no matter what the elements are doing, there are sturdy knitted scarfs that look handmade, but probably aren't. They're fit to be tied Ascot fashion, being mere woolly strips that widen a trifle at the ends. A scarlet one with narrow bright green stripes at intervals is no end Christmasy. Rust, orange, and green ones also have contrasting stripes.

Tiny tinsel posies are sprinkled over chiffon evening scarfs that resemble miniature tablecloths. These frivolous doodads with hand-rolled hems are useful as well as ornamental, since they keep prickly lame evening wraps at their distance. Because they are so nice and big, 54 inches by 20, they may be gathered into a roll that protects the throat from stormy weather. These posy-sprinkled scarfs may be had in green, purple, red, white, or pale pink. The red and green ones are especially effective with black velvet evening coats.

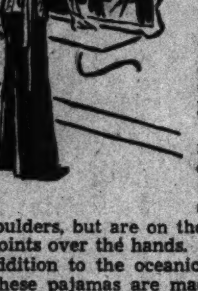
Monkish Sleeves, Cowl, and Cord Girdle.

A hunter's green transparent velvet hostess gown will turn most any woman into a huntress. She'll fight her way through a forest of formal affairs and a jungle of household duties, searching for leisure hours in which to wear this glamorous garment that has bowed to the ecclesiastic influence. High cowl neck, great loose sleeves, and silk cord wrapped about the waist are all very monkish and picturesque. The bottoms of the immense sleeves are folded back to make soft cuffs. Gold cord tassels, 24 inches long, dangle from the ends of the green silk cord girdle. The skirt hangs straight to the floor in front, while the circular back ends in a long, swishy train. The gown hugs the body and fastens on one side.

Black and White Again.

Chic afternoon dresses are disgustingly hard to find in this day of formal elegance. Although most of the designers have blissfully ignored the fact, there are women who go places and do things between luncheon and dinner time. For strictly informal afternoon hours those sumptuous long gowns that hem us in on all sides this year are decidedly too dress-up. But we finally found a trim little black and white frock that could go tea-ing downtown and still create a sensation at the next meeting of the bridge club.

The material is corded silk crepe in a diagonal weave. The white bodice has a front cowl and long plain black sleeves with stitched black crepe wings standing out crisply over the shoulders. Wee black butterfly bows are poised on the white, not far from the tips of the wings. The slim black skirt has a wide stitched band at the top which gives the effect of a peplum turned upside down.



Those who prefer something less forthright than the black and white combination may select this dress in black with ashes of roses.

Oceanic Color Scheme.

Four-cylinder pajamas will win over other entries in fashion's race if the cylinders are smooth crystal studded with rhinestones. Heavy silk moire in a radiant aquamarine color makes the hip-length tunic jacket. Greenish blue velveteen makes the wide-legged trousers.

The glistening jacket has a youthful round neck, fastened with two of the sparkling cylinders. The other two are used as fasteners just above a narrow waistline sash. The sleeves are a bit puffed up at the shoulders, but are on the straight and level by the time they end in deep points over the hands.

In addition to the oceanic color scheme of aquamarine and greenish blue, these pajamas are made with maize or peach moire jackets and brown velveteen trousers.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of the Woman's Department of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Pleats and veils are highlights of the midseason mode.

The tea hour takes on a delicious sparkle when the hostess is gowned in black bagheera crepe with gold stripped lame bodice. The sash is brilliant green crepe.

Black maline, stitched in little squares, makes a frivolous tricorn with a gold threaded twinkling along the edge of its crescent-shaped veil.

Cartridge pleats give a dashing military air to a jungle green bagheera crepe afternoon dress. The sturdy pleats march across the back of the shoulders and continue down the generously cut sleeves. Large gold links fasten the belt and a gold ornament holds a floppy crepe bow at the neckline.

Jungle green bagheera also makes a turban with a stiff veil dipping over the left eye. The velvety material has been pulled across the head to make a flippant chou on each side.

Accordion pleats are used for sleeves, lower half of bodice, and skirt flounce on a brown faille crepe street or afternoon frock. Gold dots add their glitter to a green lame tie, which is fastened with a gold bar and chain mail ornament that is reminiscent of the days when knighthood was in flower. A similar gadget adorns the waistline belt.

Round and round goes the stitching on a brown wool crepe off-the-face hat with a dear little veil relieving that naked forehead look. Brown wool crepe also makes the jaunty bow.

Christmas Goes Modernistic In Color Schemes

Green Poinsettias With Red Leaves and Cellophane Trees Are Latest.

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Christmas trees and holly wreaths have gone modernistic.

It almost seems that cobalt blue and silver or white are threatening the supremacy of red and green as the traditional colors of Yuletide.

In fact, it is "all very confusing," as Alice in Wonderland would probably say in wandering through store departments devoted to artificial Christmas decorations for the house and table.

She would see green poinsettias, holly leaves of red, holly wreaths with white leaves and blue berries, Christmas trees having holly leaves of silver and trimmed with bright red berries as big as cherries, blue artificial Japanese lanterns on silver stems, bare-limbed gold trees trimmed at the tip of each bough with a gold star.

The blue, white or red artificial trees that seemed radical last year are conservative now.

The most daring of this season's artificial trees are of cellophane in outlines as modernistic as the buildings of A Century of Progress.

Some are white, others colored. Yes, several green ones were seen. Still others are variegated with the darker color at the bottom of the tree. One clever way of lighting is to set the tree in a box having an opening in the lid through which light, generally a contrasting color, shines up, tinting the cellophane.

Oh, well; Santa Claus still wears his same old red outfit.

Hairy woolens, sometimes plaided, sometimes plain, are noticed wherever smart sportswomen assemble. Youthful two-piece effects predominate.

Auxiliary Aids in Party Plans

Mrs. Edythe M. O'Connor, department president of the American Legion Auxiliary, has been named vice chairman for the children's party to be given Friday at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing under the auspices of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary.

The department will assist the Tuberculosis Association in the sale of Christmas seals. The chairman of the child welfare committee, Mrs. Mary E. Kolhos, announced that workers would be assigned to booths.

Department officers and officers of the American Legion are now preparing plans for Christmas tokens for all veterans in the hospitals.

O'Brien of Victory Post spoke on the American Legion rally to be held January 2 at Central High School. This rally will be a testimonial to the congressmen who opposed the passage of the economy act at the last session of Congress. Citations awarded 19 senators and 89 representatives will be presented to them at the rally.

A benefit card party was held at the home of Mrs. Gladys Marthill. Mrs. Grace Idler assisted the hostess.

A joint Christmas party with the post will be held Thursday at the Thompson School. Donation of clothing and groceries may be left at the home of Mrs. Edythe M. O'Connor, 5400 Nebraska avenue northwest.

George E. Killeen Unit.

George E. Killeen Unit met Wednesday at 3109 N street northwest. Mrs. Mary Killeen presided.

The unit gave ten Thanksgiving baskets to needy families and shoes and stockings to needy children.

Mrs. May Spedden, chairman of rehabilitation, announced the annual Christmas party at Mount Alto Hospital on Friday at 7:30 p. m. The unit is collecting jig-saw puzzles for the patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital. They may be left at the home of Mrs. Mary Killeen, 3117 N street.

The department president has appointed Mrs. Mary Killeen on the committee for Christmas rehabilitation at local hospitals.

Contradiction Is the Spirit Of New Styles

Gowns That Are Nun-Like in Front Cut to Waist in Back.

Contradictions give a provocative quality to interesting new dinner and evening gowns. One might suppose that when a woman is swathed from chin to instep in a nunlike garment, her back would be similarly covered. But in keeping with the merry contradiction idea, her back is more than likely bare to the waist, if her gown is a spring, 1934, model.

From a Florentine cloister came the inspiration for a white waffle crepe dinner dress with nun collar and cowl in front and an extremely low decolletage in back. A cord belt with great long tassels enhances the convent effect. She who wears this picturesque costume should leave her jewels in their hiding place. Their glitter would detract from the ecclesiastic feeling.

Frightfully quaint is an informal dinner dress that is plainly an adaptation of a Breton peasant's garb. An extremely full dusty brown moire skirt is shirred on a waistband which hooks in back in good old petticoat fashion. A burning brown shade of velvet makes the tuck-in blouse, with shallow neck and full sleeves, which are gathered into three-inch cuffs. This unusual costume is delightful for dining at home.

The contradiction idea again comes to the fore in a black linen evening gown embroidered with wriggling white flowers. Stiff white pique forms lapels in front and a round collar in back. Below the collar the back is quite naked to the waist, where white pique streamers tie in a crisp bow. Scarlet velvet gardenias are placed just above the right hip.

The cowl neck has been carried over from fabrics to fur for a sports coat. Nutria is draped in cowl fashion across the back of the shoulders.

Fine Lace for Afternoon Gowns Favored by Fashionables Here

Velvet Ensemble Is Favored by Women When Calling; Costume Jewelry Often Worn to Enhance Otherwise Plain Color Garb.

The vogue for fine lace for afternoon gowns is pronounced in Washington this winter, especially for hostesses at afternoons-at-home and receptions and their assistants.

There is something very feminine and gracious about the formal lace afternoon gown, which rivals in the affections of the woman of taste those of velvet and satin. These fabrics, of course, often are combined with lace.

For the woman who goes calling, the velvet ensemble suit is in high favor. Many ensembles are composed of lace dresses of black, or the rich dark shades so popular with the women of fashion, and have fitted princess coats of velvet with high collars of fur. With these go little hats of the same color of velvet. With the very formal lace afternoon gowns more jewelry is being worn than for some time. The jewelry must be real, however, for while there is as mush vogue as ever for costume jewelry, it always is worn with street clothes or not very formal afternoon clothes.

A strange contradiction in jewelry is the vogue affected by a number of women for costume jewelry to go with evening gowns. Some advocates of the evening costume jewelry mode have caskets full of precious gems.

Color Note Acquired.

This costume jewelry nearly always is used to give a color note to an otherwise plain color costume.

Certain women who refuse to wear costume jewelry in spite of any passing fad, however, are following the vogue for hair ornaments. Some of the diamond bandeaux, coronet diadems and tiaras, which have been in safety deposit vaults for many seasons have been taken out this winter and worn many evenings.

A rare independence is being demonstrated among fashion leaders in the matter of evening gloves. Some of them following the announced intention of Mrs. Roosevelt not to wear gloves with her evening dress at the diplomatic reception also left off their gloves for evening affairs. But the evening gloves of this season are fascinating creations which any women would be glad to own if only to view. Many of them match the dresses in color and instead of stitchings on the back are embellished with tiny rows of seed pearls or semiprecious jewels to match the real or costume jewelry with which they are worn.

Mrs. Roosevelt is wearing an evening dress of soft bluish gray velvet that is much bluer than the accepted conception of Eleanor blue This is made with a crossed surplice bodice and with points over each shoulder.

Mrs. Curtis D. Dall, daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, has a number of dinner dresses that are well worthy of attention. At a recent supper party Mrs. Dall wore a dress composed of a long, tight-fitting black velvet skirt and a fitted bodice of bright red velvet with long sleeves but cut to a deep decollete in the back.

Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock wore at a recent at-home a dress of soft red lace, made on the dignified lines which always marks her gowns.

Mrs. Charles L. Hussey, who presided at the tea table for Mrs. Fahnestock, wore a dress of golden brown lace, with hat of brown felt. For a shopping tour Mrs. Hussey wore a sport ensemble of black and gray tweed and small black velvet hat.

Other Costumes Observed.

Mrs. John Rutherford looked handsome at a tea in an ensemble of black velvet with a cape scarf of sable. Mrs. Rutherfoord wore a hat of black velvet with a soft crown and narrow brim with this costume.

Mrs. Frances Bennet Poe was seen strolling on Connecticut avenue with her daughter, Miss Katherine Poe, both of them in smart wool ensembles. Mrs. Poe is wearing dark red and Miss Poe golden brown.

Miss Helen Lee Washington is costumed in green cloth with borders of brown fur. With this she wears a green felt hat.

Mrs. William Barrett Ridgely has a dress of black velvet made on modish lines. With this she wears a fitted black velvet coat with black fur trimmings.

Miss Mary Randolph is wearing an afternoon dress of dark red wool. It is made on tailored lines and has touches of gray fur.

Miss Dorothy Sollers wore one evening a dress of fine blue net made over satin, with short sleeves. She wore a spray of gardenias on one shoulder.

One of the prettiest dresses seen this season is the white chiffon dress worn by Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister. This is made with a surplice flounced skirt and soft scarf collar.

Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace is wearing a dress of black crepe with a bodice formed of cut steel beads.

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark has been doing her Christmas shopping in a smart sport ensemble of brown tweed. This is made with a plain skirt, with which she wears a brown sweater and a seven-eighth-length coat. Her skirt is brown and cream checked wool. With this she wears a brown hat with a flat crown and rather wide brim.

Girl "Hostesses" Aid Men to Choose Hats

New Style Advisers Give Feminine Reaction to Headgear.

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—A new scheme for selling turned up yesterday in the form of a lady who tells a man when his hat looks nice.

The system works like this: A man goes into a hat store and finds a good-looking girl, who decides when he has picked the right one.

This new trick in the headgear business was brought to light when a chain of men's hat stores advertised for attractive young women.

"Between 18 and 25," the ad specified, "to be trained as hostess and style adviser."

Almost 300 girls were waiting on the doorstep when the office opened.

The idea is that what counts in a man's hat is the feminine reaction; so a woman should be there when it's chosen, to gauge the effect.

"In fact, women know more about men's hats than men know themselves," a member of the firm said.

Whether it should be a rolled or a snap brim the lady will say; what angle is preferable, what color is best.

And when the right hat is donned, she'll be there to exclaim, "Ah, Mr. Smith, how handsome you look in that fedora!"

Mre. Phoeba Ann Cassey, Mrs. Emma E. Kelley, Mrs. Katie May Dowd, Mrs. C. Viola Callipeau, Mrs. Josephine Weber, Mrs. Eliza Murray Savage, Mrs. Margaret Spring, Mrs. Louise Phillips and Mrs. Mae M. Clippinger.

On the same evening the District Chapter held its monthly meeting. Mrs. W. J. Seelye, first vice president, occupied the chair for the first session and the president, Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, presided after the intermission.

The president named Mrs. Alida T. Bruce and Mrs. E. M. H. Guedry as auditors to examine the books of the chapter.

Pillow's Comfort Matter of Stuffing

Down Is Best, but Goose Feathers Are Very Luxurious.

With sofa pillows the outside generally seems to be more important than the inside. But the pillow you sleep on at night is quite another matter. A live, springy pillow is an incentive to good sleep.

What goes into a pillow to make it a good pillow? Goose feathers are usually conceded to be the best filling. The curve and strength of a goose feather, the broad, fan-shaped tip and the abundance of long, fluffy fibers down to the base of the quill give buoyancy and "spring" that last for years. Duck feathers are next best to goose for pillows, but they lose their "life" much sooner. Turkey and chicken feathers are also used, but they soon become matted and heavy.

Kapok is a vegetable fiber imported from the Philippines, Java and other Far Eastern countries. It is cheap and satisfactory for sofa pillows, but is not recommended for bed pillows. Under daily use the kapok fibers soon lose their light fluffiness and the pillow becomes full of hard lumps.

Down pillows are almost too luxurious and expensive for ordinary use. The best down comes from geese and ducks, but it is very scarce and high priced. A few unscrupulous pillow manufacturers mix stripped chicken and turkey feathers in with a small quantity of real down to lower the cost. Then they stuff this mixture into cases and call them down pillows.

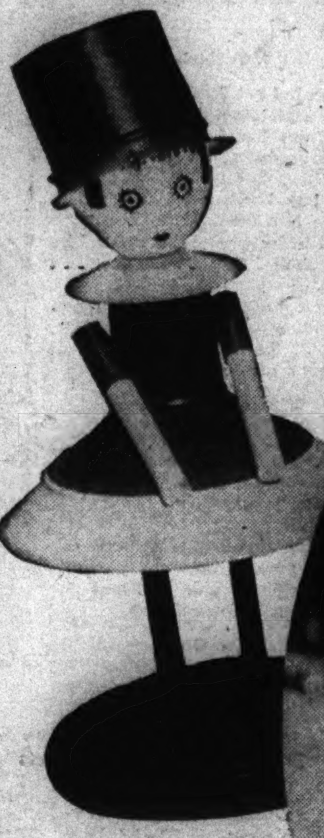
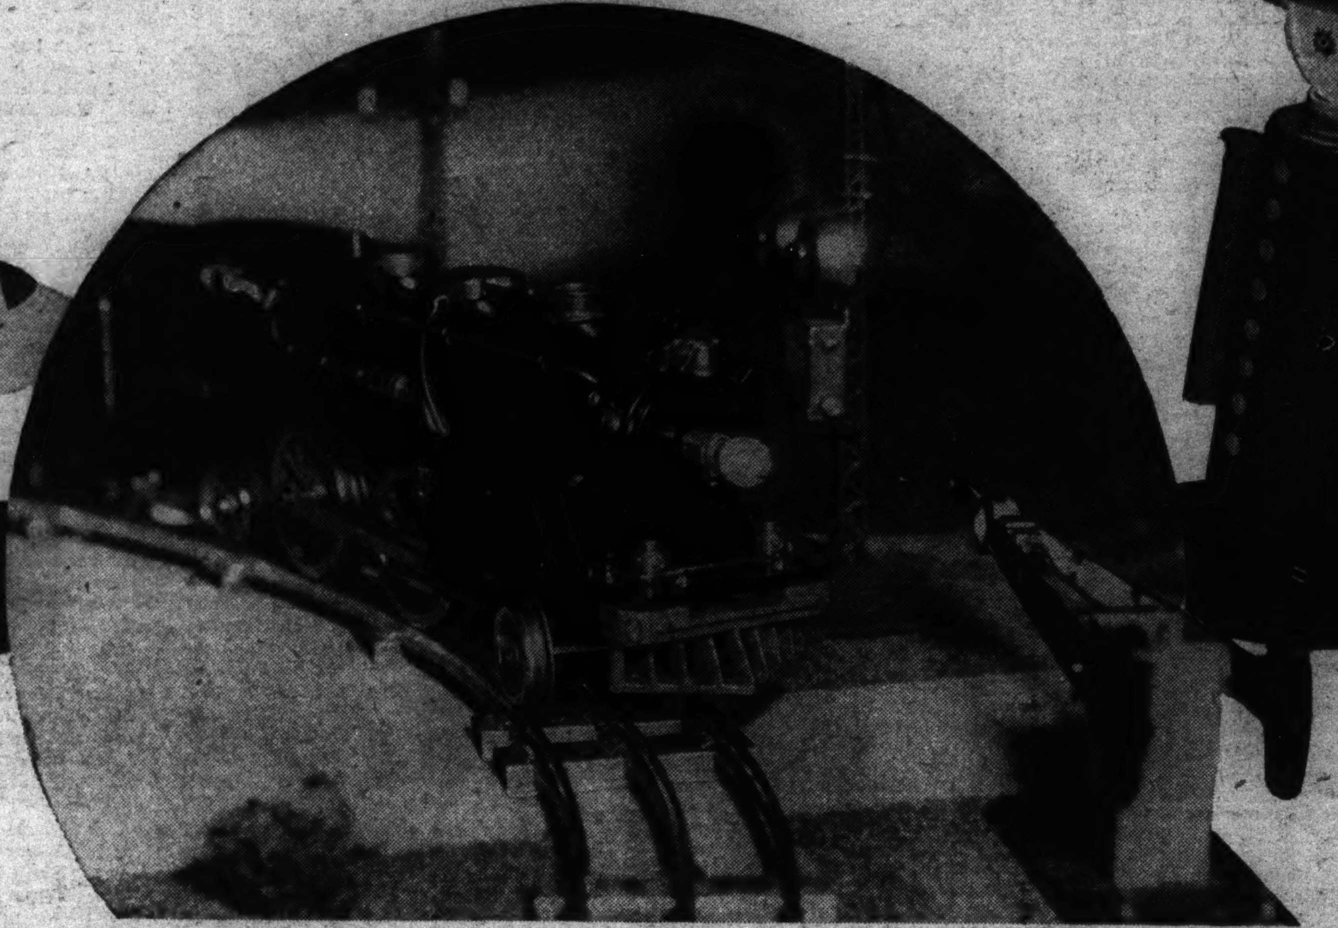
Toyland Marches On





Goodwin, Post Staff Photos.

Grown-ups Vie With Children in Admiration of 1934 Super-Models

EXPLORERS in Toyland have come back with wonderful reports of modern improvements made this year in that shining country. While everybody knows Toyland is the best place in the world, it isn't content to shut its eyes to progress; it prides itself on being up-and-coming.

The morning after the visit of Santa Claus boys and girls will awaken to see streamline fire engines and underslung baby carriages and electric engines designed to break all records on Toyland lines.

The machine age has interested Toyland's craftsmen, and as a result the play-world is going to have efficient transportation. Electricity has been harnessed to drive fire-rescue trucks, and fast mails, and other exciting vehicles. All the new models run toward ultramodernism with even a futuristic touch. As a result, when Johnny and Willy and Margie and Mary Louise unscramble their gifts, they'll really be five years ahead of the times.

"Never have we seen so many electrically lighted toys," agreed two buyers who select immense stocks for two of the city's largest toylands. "There are easily 50 times as many lights on toys this year as last. Probably illumination is the most striking feature of this year's displays."

No full-grown automobile has a smarter designing than do some of the toy models. Bicycles have the new flowing lines in body construction. Coaster-bikes and little red metal wagons have a low-slung grace created by the 1933 toy builders.

Why attempt to describe the noises of the miniature police and fire chief cars with their tiny shrieking sirens so well copied from the originals? The police car is patrolling Toyland for the first time. The fire-fighting racer is entirely new, too.

"This is one of the sturdiest toys we've ever had," a salesman said, in demonstrating a metal car for imaginary small fire chiefs. "See, I can stand on it." And he did, with no apparent damage.

Lively little locomotives make an actual "chugger-chugger" sound. A famous manufacturer of electric trains presents this new sound effect with his product. One Toyland elaborates still further on realistic effects by showing a dashing express in toy movie scenes, hooked up with a whistle and exhaust victrola record of locomotive sound. And when customers hear the train whistle from this record as the little cars go whizzing around the track, the synchronization is so nearly perfect the effect is astonishing. They are puzzled to know just how the electric train can whistle. Another innovation, "remote controls" make it far more exciting to stop and start the magic toys than did last year's local controls.

They still ride to hounds in Toyland, but to a smaller degree. A spanking team of rocking-horses with a seat between them amuses youngsters too young to drive. Despite the kiddy cars with protecting rails, and "walkers," which are nonspilling seats on casters, a rocking-horse will remain for a long time baby's best friend.

Then, too, dogs will always find masters while their tails look as if they had a wag left in them. Toy Scotties, snuggling in authentic dog baskets, are leaders among the woolly canines. Angora kittens all ready to curl up before the fireside, present a picture of graceful indifference to the Scotty with the terrifying glare due to his electric eyes.

Little pigs in sets of three, or individually, have appeared, inspired, of course, by the revival of the ancient pig story. Some of them can dance—with their cheery behavior and optimistic conduct.

The dolls of 1933 spent a busy summer letting their hair grow. To be sure, the conventional "baby-face," with her unruffled locks painted on a smooth composition head, is still with us. However, distinctly more chic is her debutante sister whose long curls show she has spent a good bit of her time at the Toyland Beauty Shop. And then there's the jolly young emancipate who sticks by her yarn bob, and manages to look very Parisian, too.

The tiny girl gets more consideration from manufacturers this year. One large toy baby in the new displays is of very lightweight felt construction. It is an artistic evolution of the old rag baby. So a 2-year-old's doll may be as large as herself and still not too heavy to carry.

Alice in Wonderland dolls have a vogue, with their native expression, blonde yarn wigs and pinafore costumes. This novelty toy naturally is popular because of the screen and stage portrayals of the immortal Alice.

A musical cradle, fashioned in early American design, emits soft notes with every rocking. It costs little, complete with its wee imitation baby tucked under a blanket.

The mimic persons in Toyland must be exclaiming over the Murphy bed in their midst. A bit of toy furniture which appears to be a miniature wardrobe, pulls down to show a dolly sleeping within, under a real, if diminutive, bedlight! But surely no motherly little girl will shut the little occupant up in the folded bed as do the heartless salespeople.

A Victorian doll, a new creation, comes from an old pattern. It is made here and boasts beruffled skirts, laced boots and a little bonnet.

Tea gowns, ball gowns and fluffy underwear are in the wardrobe of a distinguished toy lady prepared for one of Washington's most fortunate little girls.

Belles Find Second Youth.

The belles of former Toyland seasons are finding a second youth with the assistance of white-haired toy menders, a husband and wife, who have been rejuvenating dolls in their doll hospital for 25 years. Three flights up a winding stair is the shop where the beauties of 30, 40 and 50 winters ago had their faces lifted, complexions analyzed and corrected, and scalps treated.

"Daughter is 27 years old and has just had this old dolly she played with fixed for her little girl," a matronly shopper explained as she fondled an out-moded bisque toy, with platinum blonde curls.

"I'll show you one you'll like," said the proprietor, exhibiting an amazing doll as large as a child, its body of bisque and its head of china.

"Those big black eyes are new," the hospital lady said. "The hair has been recurled and I even gave her a new complexion. She looks young and pretty—but she's 40 years old if she's a day."

Chase Longue, 1933 Model.

The little girl who "has everything" may not have a 1933 model chaise longue in perfect line and finish, or sturdy construction, however. This sophisticated bit of furniture is large enough for actual use. The chaise longue and the chairs scaled to similar size may be upholstered to suit the customer.

Instructive Toys.

Hammering boards of cork, with a thought for mother's nerves, are offered by manufacturers of instructive toys. Small hammers, strips of bright wood and almost harm-proof tacks are sold with the boards.

For older children there are microscopes, elementary chemistry outfits, printing presses, tool chests, movie machines, airplane construction sets and even a set of materials for making thumbprints.

The displays in the games section are suitable for "children" of all ages. Recreation rooms now found in many homes have brought out, prominently, rows of family games—the old bagatelle board, backgammon, diabolo and a roulette board. Ping-pong, or parlor tennis, is a frequent choice of buyers in this section.

Artists have almost given life to their drawings in children's books. The tiger in the little Sambo tale leaps toward his victim. After Sambo's hair-rising adventures are over, the little black hero voraciously feeds himself pancakes with hands that actually move!

The "pop-ups," or illustrations that spring forth with the turning of story book pages, are great favorites with children. Attractive photographic poses of children and animals make irresistible illustrations in some of the newer juvenile books. "Children like these pictures of little persons like themselves, and of animals much like their own pets," a book shop manager said. "We doubted that the youngsters would be as interested in photographic illustrations as they are in the traditional brightly colored drawings intended to attract them. To our surprise they seem to get great pleasure out of the books made vivid with pictures."

Flashing their headlights, flaunting their streamlines and boasting bright colors, the wheel toys ride into the Christmas scene.

"The next size in this orange and black bike will be just right for the boy, madam," the salesman said to an interested mother, as he measured carefully and finds the eager rider stoops a bit too much as he pedals. So the [illegible]bing bicycle that "just fits" will be left by Santa. And what a "bike!" It has everything such a first-class vehicle is supposed to have—headlights, streamline fenders over the wheels, brakes well-adjusted and a bell. Some of the cycles even come equipped with side cars.

* * * *

So what with fire engines, fitted bikes, "live" pictures and folding beds, it looks like an animated Christmas, indeed. Saint Nick, as usual, has kept up with the times, and undoubtedly has acquired a streamlined sleigh to use on the night of Christmas eve.

IN WASHINGTON

Shopping.

1. Problem.

What shall I get for Uncle Ben?
What shall I get for Sue?
I could get handkerchiefs, I guess,
Or gloves, what would you do?

I can't buy books for Jim because
I gave him one last year,
I wish I knew what Jane would like
What shall I do? . . . oh, dear . . .

I thump my head, and chew my pen
And tell myself, "Think HARD!"
I've got it! Tear up all the lists
And send the folks a card!

2. Store Window.

The pink-cheeked baby dolls kick up
Their shiny dimpled toes,
And metal warriors stand alert
In stiff and proper rows.

A girl outside now fingers through
A ragged pocketbook,
Then closes it—moves on with one
Heart-broken backward look.

3. Sales Girl.

December 22.

What can I do for you, Sir? I see—
Here is the thing for you.
What is the size? . . . Well, from that I guess
You'll want a thirty-two.

December 26.

What can I do for you, Ma'm? . . . Exchange?
Yes, here's a forty-eight.
(Looks like the gentleman's "thirty-two"
Put on some excess weight!)

4. Packages.

Hustle and bustle—
Scurry and worry—
Rustle and tussel—
Hurry and flurry—

Tie it with ribbon
Wrap it up tight,
Mail it to Boston—
Send it tonight . . .

Hustle and scurry—
Bustle and worry—

Where is that pencil?
Where is the string?
I can not manage
To locate a thing!

Rustle and flurry—
Here's the last one—
Tussel and hurry—
There! Thats all done!

5. Winter Bloom.

Streets are all blossoming
Flowered with light
Windows are glittering
Recklessly bright.

Soon all the flowers will Wither, and then
Sleep through the summer to Blossom again.

Millions for Forest Work.

More than $8,500,000 will be spent during the next two years for maintenance of 18 national forests in California and southwestern Nevada, according to S. B. Snow, chief of the Federal Regional Forest Bureau in San Francisco. Used to purchase equipment and to pay wages, these funds will provide 1,500,000 "man days" of labor, or the employment of 10,000 men at a substantial wage for 180 days each, Snow said.

Roses Now Bloom in Government Files

ROSES now bloom among the records of the United States Patent Office. Pictures of luscious fruit tempt the appetite. The use of colored pictures for plant patents are an innovation. So, too, are plant patents themselves.

The first plant patent in all the world was granted to Henry F. Rosenberg, August 18, 1931, for a climbing and trailing rose, which blooms successively. A number of new roses have been patented since then. Their specifications and claims describe their color, habits of growth and other characteristics.

Here is a beautiful one of "true rose pink" color, with "long buds," and "superior keeping qualities." When "half-opened," it "gives a distinctive gardenia-like effect." Some exquisite yellow and striking "cerise" roses are found in this class.

One charming new rose had for its "parents" a well-known scarlet climbing rose and a rich dark-red rose. The new rose was of a color different from either parent, and combined many of the good points of both.

There are other patents on flowers of many sorts, including carnations, freesias, dahlias, water lilies, chrysanthemums, snapdragons and gladiolus. A thornless barberry bush will make an appeal to many.

The first tree patent ever granted was issued February 16, 1932, to James E. Markham, for a peach tree. Its special value is that the fruit ripens late. Another tree patent is for a pecan tree. There are patents on cherries and strawberries developed in Michigan, also a thornless dewberry. A seedless grapefruit in its cross-section shows colors that suggest sunset sky. An apple patent mentions "uniqueness of color effects," and these artistic apples will command a good price. Luther Burbank's widow has taken out several patents, and is carrying on her husband's great work.

Formerly a man might work for years to develop a new fruit or flower, and then would sell a few specimens at as high a price as possible. After that, anybody could produce the plants. Often Burbank and other originators of valuable plants urged the idea of patent protection for developers of new plants. The Seventy-first Congress passed a bill which gives this protection, and it was ordered printed in 1930. In the discussion of the bill it was said there was "no just and logical reason why reward for service to the public should be extended to the inventor of a mechanical toy and denied to the genius whose patience, foresight and effort have given a valuable new variety of fruit or other plant to mankind." Plants found growing in a wild state, also those propagated by tubers, like potatoes, are not covered by the bill, which provides that the plant inventor shall be given "an exclusive right to propagate that plant by * * * grafting, budding, cuttings, layering, division and the like, but not by seeds."

Almost every one is interested in improved plants, either in buying them for their gardens, or because they use plant products. For our food, timber, stationery, some of our clothing, house furnishings and medicine, as well as many other things, we look to the plant world. Luther Burbank said "The surface of the plant experimentation has only been scratched."

Magic Is U. S. Official's Hobby

William W. Durbin, Register of the Treasury, Practiced His Skill On Platform for 55 Years. He Is Rated With Best in the Business

By John J. Daly.

WILLIAM W. DURBIN, Register of the United States Treasury, has a habit of pulling rabbits out of hats. This is the Durbin hobby. He is a magician.

Long before Durbin assumed this important post he had amused countryside audiences with feats of legerdemain.

Up and down the Ohio countryside—his native heath—the Durbin caravansarai was known. One night stands, split weeks, and full weeks were on the schedule when the old master of magic performed.

Fifty-five years as a magician is Durbin's record. Many of his friends claim that no other man has a longer career on the platform.

In his day Durbin has entertained in his own theater such outstanding magicians as Kellar, Herman the Great, Thurston, and Blackstone—along with lesser lights. He fooled 'em all, as he states with a glow of pride.

As a result of his proficiency in the art, Durbin is now president of the International Brotherhood of Magicians. He is also editor of the society magazine, The Linking Ring.

Harry Houdini was about the only magician of modern times who did not go to Kenyon, Ohio, and sit at Durbin's feet.

Kenyon, however, became the Mecca of magicians.

So great was the hobby of "Bill" Durbin that he built his own theater. It stands as one of the most unusual playhouses in America.

Going . . . Going . . . Gone!

Theater in Back Yard.

Called the American Egyptian Hall, Durbin's Theater is in his back yard. It is the only theater in America exclusively devoted to magic. A fortune of $50,000 is tied up in its equipment.

About the only time the late President Warren G. Harding occupied the chair of a dramatic critic he wrote, in the Marion Star, of 1898: "Durbin is not only a friend of the eminent Kellar, but is considered by critics to be greater and he gave a performance that would have graced any temple of amusement in the land."

At that performance, Durbin thrilled the future President with a series of card tricks.

Even though he is retired from magic, Durbin can not refrain from his old habit of springing a trick or two on an unsuspecting visitor.

Down in the old Bureau of Engraving and Printing, at Fourteenth and B streets, where the Register of the Treasury holds forth, the office force is used to seeing dollars vanish before their eyes. But Mr. Durbin, in the mood, pulls a billiard ball from his right ear, makes it disappear into his left sleeve and then roll out of his pants' leg.

Of course, it is all in the spirit of fun. Magicians seem to have a happy outlook on life. At least Durbin has. He claims that magic, like music, has power to soothe the savage breast.

So, whenever affairs of state rest too heavily upon his head, Durbin takes a trip to Kenyon, and puts on a show.

"Any time I get worried," he says, "I like to go out into my own theater and run a performance."

He finds it soothing to the nerves—and he believes anybody suffering from "nerves" ought to take a course in magic.

While he is strictly a politician, as he admits, even politics must take a back seat when it comes to magic in Durbin's life.

Here is the proof:

Years ago there was a magician called Imro Fox, "The Comedy Conjurer."

Durbin had always wanted to see Fox perform. At the time of Fox's popularity—back in the Gay Nineties—Durbin was chairman of the Democratic State committee in Ohio. As such, it was his duty to entertain visiting political celebrities. On top of this, the Bryan-McKinley campaign was under way.

And it happened that Bryan and Imro Fox landed in Durbin's home town at the same time.

Durbin was in a dilemma. As chairman of the committee, it was his duty to be on the stage with the Boy Orator of the Platte. In a near-by theater was Fox.

You guessed it.

As soon as the master of ceremonies introduced the Hon. William J. Bryan to a meeting of 10,000 men and women, assembled in an open field, Durbin raced across the public square to the Op'ry House.

There was a slim crowd in the theater, due to the big political rally—so Durbin got himself a front-row seat. He describes that thrill:

"The show was in progress when I got in, and Fox was doing the Tambourine trick of putting a piece of newspaper between two rings and then trimming off the paper with a pair of scissors. In doing this, he injected quite a bit of comedy by working the scissors like some barbers do when they are cutting hair—in fact, he drew a laugh when he said, 'I learned that in a barber shop.' Then, from the tambourine he produced hundreds of yards of paper ribbons and from this he produced several chickens and a duck, much to the amazement of the audience."

Mastered 3,000 Tricks.

Naturally Durbin went out and mastered that tambourine trick—as he came to master some 3,000-odd tricks of every sort and description.

Imro had another trick that fascinated Durbin—a trick which came very near being the end of Fox after he performed it for the Sultan of Turkey—in the old days when a sultan was easily insulted.

That trick, which Durbin also mastered, was performed in this manner:

Fox took a pair of pigeons, one black and the other white. Apparently, he twisted their heads off. Then he put them in two nickel-plated compartments. In doing so, he made the mistake of putting the black head on the white pigeon and the white head on the black pigeon. When the magician removed the cover the audience saw his mistake. So he tore the heads off the pigeons again and put them on right. That, of course, was the hit of hits.

When the trick was performed the Sultan demanded that Fox do the same thing with a couple of slaves—one white and one black.

Lese majesty or not, Fox declined to perform the trick and the Sultan ran him out of the country.

As Durbin says, "You can't make a monkey

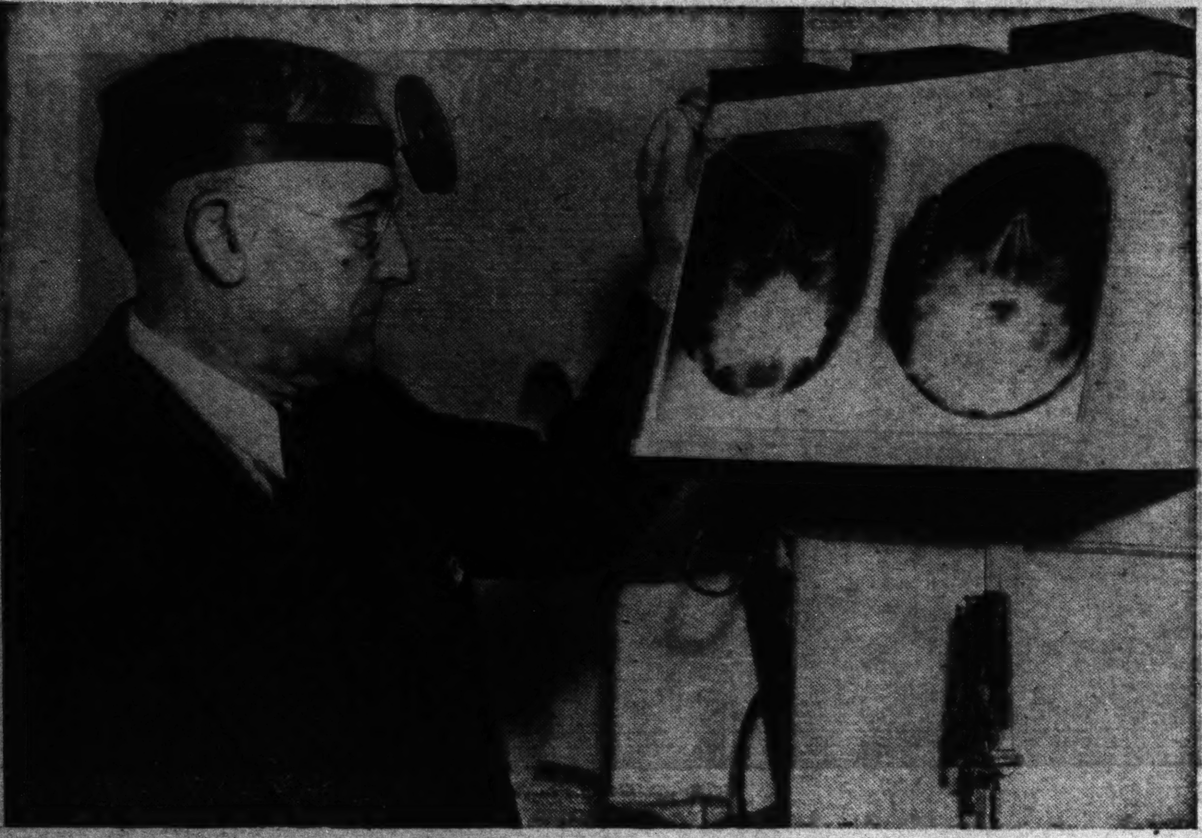
Identification by Sinal X-Rays

Absolute Method, Said to Have Number of Advantages Over Fingerprinting, Is Discovered by Washingtonian



Dr. Poole comparing X-rays of frontal sinuses.

AN absolute method of identifying individuals by comparing X-rays of their sinuses is a recent discovery of medical science. It appears from researches that no two human beings have frontal sinus cavities alike, in fact it is claimed they vary as much in people as do fingerprints.

The frontal sinus, the basis of this form of identification, is located above and between the eyes in the center of the forehead. However, it is not necessary to rely entirely on the differences of the frontal sinuses alone. The shape of cavities, bone formations, the measure, contour, and topography of the skull afford more than a hundred additional checks. The differences are quickly distinguishable even to the untrained eye. Filed and classified, it is said the X-rays would form irrefutable identification.

Dr. Thomas A. Poole, of Washington, discovered this new method. He has conducted his researches for eight years. In his own office he has thousands of X-rays of the sinus and has examined many times that number in other X-ray and head picture collections.

Inspector Batly, of Scotland Yard, consulted Dr. Poole about his plan in August of last year, and the Paris Prefecture de Police and Swiss identification men are also interested. The U. S. Department of Justice is aware of Dr. Poole's discoveries, but legislation and appropriation by Congress will be necessary before the method can be adopted.

Important Advantages.

The method, Dr. Poole says, has several important advantages over fingerprint identification. The bony structure of the skull remains unchanged after years of interment; whereas the soft tissues and the linear markings of the palmar surfaces disintegrate soon after death. Moreover, it has become possible to blur and change fingerprints by acid destruction of the tissue and even by plastic surgery. The sinus is seldom ever disturbed or operated on for fear of producing brain tissue developments such as meningitis. Identification of the victims of fire, drowning and explosions is often impossible, but comparison of the X-ray findings would remove the difficulty of identification in these cases.

Positive identification, such as the X-ray of the sinus affords, would be valuable in many fields. If every policyholder had his sinus X-rayed there would be small opportunity for insurance frauds, since it would be impossible—even in the case of mutilation—for the body to remain unidentified.

X-raying the sinus is more expensive than finger printing, but in every American city and town of any size there is already adequate equipment for this purpose. There is no difficulty in taking this kind of picture.

However, Dr. Poole's chief concern is the treatment of sinal conditions as a check to criminal tendencies. He says it is an acknowledged fact in police and medical circles that most drug addicts are criminals. Addiction is largely caused by the use of narcotics in the relief of pain, and an ailing sinus is frequently responsible for the drug habit. Scarlet fever, measles, influenza, diphtheria, pneumonia, or any temperature-producing infection of childhood can affect the sinus. Dr. Poole believes it is not enough for the Government to detect criminals. They must not be permitted to return to society unrelieved of a condition which can result in drug addiction and crime, he declared.

Dr. Poole points out that a lawyer in defending a criminal would have a lot of influence before a jury if he could show by pictures that the defendant had become a criminal as a result of illness and childhood diseases over which he had no control. Dr. Poole also believes it would be of first importance and scientific interest to examine the sinuses of inmates of all insane asylums. This is not generally done.

Dr. Poole studied medicine at the University of Maryland and began to practice his profession in 1898. He practiced in the Bahamas under the British Government for nine years, and has spent many summers visiting hospitals and clinics in this country and abroad. He is internationally known for his researches and treatment of sinal diseases.

Fires Provide Grand Free Show.

Always can be noted a curious apathy on the part of those who suddenly gather where the fire department trucks stop. It's not their fire; they only came to watch, after all. A sort of free attraction, put on for their amusement; something not scheduled in the day's routine. So, let's have a good show, now: "Come on fire, blaze up and blaze away; come on fire laddies, scale the walls and chop the roof!"

Then, if there be only a false alarm, and only somebody's flue got choked and sent the smoke back into the kitchen—why, we are disappointed. In fact, we are gypped. We complain to each other that a rottener time we never had; and we recall some of the real fires we saw—like when . . .

$125,000,000 Collection.

There are now 14,000,000 separate exhibits in the National Museum, valued at more than $125,000,000. But Dr. Wetmore, assistant director, says this valuation means very little when one takes into consideration the fact that countless of these exhibits are absolutely unique in the world.

Bedlam in Congress Annoys Lady Astor

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

London—"I was horrified at Congress when I was over last year," Lady Astor said, coming out of the House of Commons, after her speech on married women's nationality. "Such political dealings. The bedlam of lobbying. The lack of dignity!"

Behind her, the Commons testified to English decorum. Polite challenges and suave replies were being exchanged. Silk hats and spats carried out the atmosphere. One member sat on the small of his back with his feet up, and he managed to do it as though it were a special occasion.

Lady Astor may respect the House of Commons, but she knows how to manage its members. A speech, to her, is a personal and conversational approach to other members. She plays them with a sure hand, replying to opposition with humor, satire and a quick wit.

Sanctity of the Home.

"Did you hear those men trying to bring the 'sanctity of the home' in again?" she asked another woman Member of Parliament outside the House. "In a discussion of citizenship! I told them they'd been using that argument for 200 years, whenever anything referred to women. The worst old reprobates in the world have always talked about preserving the sanctity of the home! And as far as losing the respect of our children is concerned, I said all children are ashamed of their parents nowadays anyway. It's a fact. The boys especially. Think of what the children go through when their parents visit them at school!"

Lady Astor d[illegible] the part of a woman member of Parliament with great success. She had chosen this day black and ivory silk, trimly tailored, and wore a small peaked black hat trimmed only with a diminutive diamond pin. Her manner fitted her clothes—she was easily poised. Her natural spontaneity rippled out from under the calm.

In the House, her softened speech contrasts with the clipped and crisp English accents around her. G's are dropped by

Stroller's Luck

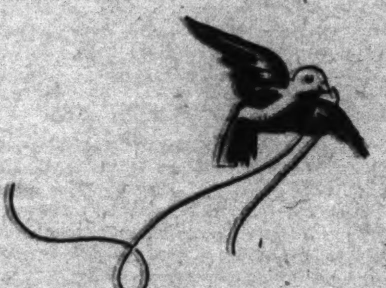
Brief Glimpses of the Washington Street Scene

Architects' Memorandum.

Paul J. Pelz, who designed the Library of Congress, carried out in his house on F street many of the features planned for the library. The archway and dome of the main reading room, the tiled entry, the fine staircases and balustrades, even the bronze frieze over the entry—all are reproduced in his house.

Built in 1890, the house itself represents architecture and construction seldom seen today. Elaborately carved mantelpieces, imported from abroad, top great fireplaces in each room of the three floors. Solidity is the keynote—even in the attic, reached through a tiny passageway leading off from a third-floor ell. Here the thick supporting beams, cleverly buttressing each other, clearly show the house was built to stand. The attic is filled to overflowing with experimental casts and friezes done by Mr. Pelz years ago, and with framed drawings of the many buildings he designed in his long Washington career.

Oddest feature is a huge bronze triangle, just under the ridge pole eave at the front of the house with the letters "P. N. C." and the date, in Roman numerals, 1890, cast in deep bas relief. Present owners are unable to tell the significance of the letters and they remain a mystery.



Town House.

Certainly the most exclusive, the most expensive apartment in Washington . . .

"I will build me a nest where all that goes on will be evident to me from my front door," thought the sparrow, his mouth filled with straws and strings, and his mind with no misgivings.

So saying, he flew lightly to the facade of the Willard Hotel and, alighting on the ledge, a half or three-quarters of an inch wide, he looked about him.

There was shelter. Behind the bronze placard which so boldly sets forth the history of the hotel he laid the foundations tenderly and flew away for materials.

An hour later the reporter passed by. A bit of string looped downward from behind the plaque, nothing more.

But the sparrow had builded his nest.

Rolling by Ear.

The origin of the word "Reader," as applied to old-time cigar factories (and in some American cities the practice is still observed), dates back to a curious custom.

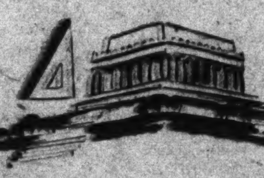
A man ascended a raised platform in the shop and read aloud to the tobacco-leaf rollers the news of the day.

The reason for doing this was odd. Most of the cigarmakers were Puerto Ricans and Cubans, well known for their gesticulatory method of speaking, especially when excited. Now, the best cigars require close attention in the rolling process. The bosses knew this, and also the workers' propensities for talking. They therefore conceived the idea of having news read to the men to keep them from talking—and thus take their hands away from the business of making cigars.

It is said that Samuel Gompers was once a reader in a New York cigar factory.

Scissors Grinder Walks 20 Miles a Day.

A scissors grinder, who lives near Brookland operates daily in Mount Pleasant. Carrying the paraphernalia of his calling on his back and ringing his bell "for the purpose of attracting attention to his business . . . not to exceed 2¾ inches in diameter at the bottom and 1⅝ inches in height perpendicular from the level to the crown of the bell in such manner as will not disturb the comfort or quiet of any neighborhood" (according to the Commissioners' notices of the District), he estimates that he walks a daily round of 15 miles. And this particular scissors grinder has another daily task which requires several more miles of walking seven days a week, winter and summer. In all, he walks more than 20 miles per day, and has been at it for a quarter of a century—a total of about 172,500 miles over the streets of Washington!



Lincoln Monument Colonnades.

The outside colonnades surrounding the Lincoln Monument are spaced nearer together than any of the others, and there is a slight variation in all the spaces. This give a more pleasing general effect, and makes the view through the columns alongside of the building show the outline of the two end columns—a view not possible if they were spaced as wide as the center columns. These columns are not vertical, but lean toward the building. The walls of the building itself are not vertical; the outside of them leans inward at a slightly smaller incline than the columns surrounding them.

Preview.

In the dimlighted hallways of the unfinished Department of Justice Building there is the hush and darkness of a tomb. Workmen, aided only by the illumination of a few bulbs strung along the walls, neatly but monotonously splash the dead-white plaster on the walls, hurrying the final touches.

A chill draft sweeps down the darkened corridors now, where in a few short months thousands of clerks and officials will be bustling to and fro on their 9 to 4:30 schedules.

The contrast, in one's imagination, is all the more vivid as he walks through those catacomb-like aisles just before dusk. Figures in white precede him as he goes, darting wraith-like in and out of the cells which will one day be busy office rooms, where the leaders of the Nation will be dictating momentous memoranda to a corps of people.

Hand Organ Postlude.

There is that quality in the smile of the organ-grinder, with his tiny monkey perched on his shoulder, which momentarily splits the consciousness of present things asunder from the onlooker. He sees and hears only what is directly before him—the stock grimaces of the simian and his jerky, perky little bow; the wheezy, cheerful tinkle of the organ.

Time is only a manufactured phenomenon; place, an unaccountable circumstance when the organ-grinder smiles his dental smile for your penny, and the monkey chatters and squeaks while standing on his fuzzy little head to thank you. It is fairly impossible to pass the little begger by . . .

Uncle Tom's Cabin first appeared in 1852, in the famous antislavery newspaper, the "Washington (D. C.) National Era," established by Gamaliel Bailey in 1847.

The original columns on the east facade of the Treasury were of sandstone, and were completed in 1842. In 1908 these columns were replaced by granite, like those on the other sides of the building. They are Ionic monolithic pillars, 36 feet 3¼ inches in height, and the diameter at the base is 4 feet.

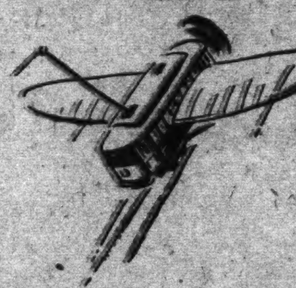
Crawford's bronze statue of Freedom which tops the dome of the Capitol, wears an unusual liberty cap of eagle's feathers, suggested to Crawford by Jefferson Davis!

The Capitol and many other Government buildings have no lightning-rod equipment. The White House and Washington Monument do. The statue of Freedom on the Capitol dome acts as a lightning rod, having a row of spikes around the crown placed there for the purpose of receiving electrical discharges.

The cost of erecting the White House was defrayed from the sale of lands donated in 1789-90 by Maryland and Virginia to the United States Government.

The room housing models of patents in the Patent Office Building was burned in 1836, and a later great fire occurred in the building in 1877.

The granite steps leading to the basement of an E street northwest house are being lifted up bodily and slowly cast down into the areaway by the roots of an oak tree not 4 feet tall, which has taken root in the crack of one of the steps!



Contact.

There were only about three people on the street car and the conductor was standing in a nautical attitude on the "quarter deck" by the coin box. Ignoring the swinging straps and the iron rods, he balanced on his widespread legs, motionless as a rock, despite the rolling and the pitching of the car.

But he looked worried. Finally he came over and sat down.

"Gee!" he said, "the visibility sure is poor today, and there's an awful low ceiling."

"I beg pardon," said the passenger, not quite understanding how these two factors could possibly be haunting the crew of a surface car.

"My wife," said the conductor, "is flying to Harrisburg."

Private Conservatory.

Towering walls hem in the private conservatory erected in 1917 on the Sixteenth street and I street property of John Barton Payne, Chairman of the American Red Cross. Wind and weather have given the false patina of great age to the copper framework of its roof, and the carpet of moss which has overgrown its paths inside add to the impression of antiquity.

Semi-tropical ferns and trees, with a scattering of indigenous flowers and plants, preserve a cool depth of greenness to walk about in. A dozen weirdly-cast Chinese bronze hanging lamps, in all shapes and sizes, furnish illumination in its shaded interior.

The greenhouse was constructed under the supervision of Mrs. Payne two years before her death, and the entire flora gathered on the occasion of long rides in the countryside with her husband. A lover of growing things always, it was she who planted and cared for them.

Vanishing American.

For no reason beyond curiosity to know what has become of something which once was a commonplace, the reporter started out to find a cigar store wooden Indian. The tabulated result of the search is as follows:

Systematic calls to seven large warehouses: "A what? No, we haven't got one."

Calls to three large wholesale cigar companies: "There aren't any more. No, so-and-so had one for a long time at such-and-such a place, but that was several years ago. Don't know what's become of it."

Cruises down Pennsylvania avenue, up Four-and-a-half street, down Seventh street, visiting every cigar store and tobacconist's shop: "Well, old so-and-so used to have one on the curbing (or in front of his store), but that was several years ago. Don't know what's become of it."

Calls on five antique shops: "Never had one. Several years ago a man in Pennsylvania paid $500 for one—think it was the one old Billy Micken used to have in front of his shop on Seventh street. There was a man without an enemy, old Billy. Say, did you ever hear about the time when * * * " (But the reporter by that time had heard the story of the unsolved monkey wrench murder a score of times.)

Nine addresses of spots where "there might be one" investigated: One was a cardboard advertisement in the shape of an Indian; one was an undertaker's establishment; three thought it must be old Billy Micken's place because they had never had one; one was a bust nailed to the archway above a door in Georgetown; one was a junk yard; one was Elie Sheetz' museum piece display in the rear of his office, and one was the address of a private sanitarium.

This reporter wants to know: Are there any wooden Indians in Washington?

Ex-Oasis.

" . . . and the old order changeth . . ."

In comes a modern gas station; out goes the Engel Hotel, famous old hostelry and saloon across from the old B. & O. station.

Workmen have razed it to the ground. The east wall, only portion of the building next door, likewise remains. A garish panorama in faded browns and greens depicts a desert oasis from street end half way to rear of that wall. The cellar foundation wall, great stone blocks cemented in place, discover their antiquity. In the old red-bricked wine vaults whose archways are not yet demolished is a motley array of broken and whole bottles . . . "what rare vintages are these?"

Three rusted swords, a handful of old coins, some yellowed newspapers, a blurred handbill from the Gayety—these, besides rubbish, were found in the walls. Under three feet of cinders and ashes the wreckers came upon a well-laid cement floor under the whole building; it saved pouring a new one.

Capital Art Notes

History of Human Race Depicted In Phillips Gallery Exhibition

"The inspiration of the ages of art as centered about human beings forms the high objective of the arrangements just completed in the main galleries of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, under a general heading "Pictures of People." These pictures have been rekung under the personal direction of Duncan Phillips. They express the best in modern gallery arrangements based on paintings garnered from all sources, ancient, as well as more modern ones.

These pictures give a liberal education of the history of the human race, as well as visual impressions of great cycles of art and the events and times in which the artists lived.

There is evidence of a rare exercise of artistic discrimination and an understanding of the nature of those who visit the galleries in the placing of each picture. Those versed in the history, technic and artistic imagery of art will approve the arrangement while the unversed will find much to assist them in understanding the pictures, especially in their relation to each other and to the various ages and eras in human history in which they were painted.

It is not by accident that the first picture to catch a visitor's eyes and before which he involuntarily pauses as he enters the main gallery of the "Pictures of People" should be "The Rependant Peter," by El Greco. This is the outstanding work in this country, at least of the first great expressionist in art, Domenico Theotocopuli (El Greco), the Cretan-Spanish artist of the latter half of the sixteenth century and the beginning of the seventeenth century.

El Greco Found His Inspiration in Spain.

The face of the repentant Peter expresses the anguish and sorrow and the high emotionalism in keeping with the days of fanatical religious ardor in Spain. For it was in Spain that El Greco found much inspiration and a fertile field for his art. In this portrait even the layman who visits the Phillips Gallery can discern the development and exercise of a fine technic and a rare ability to portray emotion. It hardly needs a title under the picture for the ordinary observer to know that it was painted of Peter in the midst of his remorse and grief. All the attributes of this artist as master of character and soul are reflected in this work.

There is also mythical greatness and technical perfection in the painting of the "Resurrection," by Albert P. Ryder, American artist. Ryder has put into this canvas the smooth, sure perfection of technic which makes his marine paintings among the outstanding works of American painters. The figure of the Christ is pervaded by a luminous light, in spite of the softness with which it blends into the background, also characteristic of this artist.

In this collection of pictures of people important place is given to what is termed by many art authorities as the greatest modern picture in the world, "Boating Party at Luncheon," by Renoir. In this painting, Renoir, the French painter, who died in 1919, displays a rare gift for portraiture, as well as the art of giving action and color to his work. Those who appreciate and can judge real perfection in technic, award the palm to this picture. It is an outstanding accomplishment of Auguste Renoir, whom the art world frequently concedes to be the most finished painter of modern times. It is a picture the discriminating ask to see when they visit the Phillips Gallery. Quite properly it has its place in the new "Pictures of People" at the gallery.

Portrait of Miss Woakes By Whistler.

A number of the works of the late George Luks, the American artist, are included in the "pictures of people" exhibit. Among these probably none will add more to his rapidly increasing fame since his recent death than that of "A Sulking Boy" typical of the young American of this age, well-dressed with a ball for play and a whole dish of fruit within his reach on the table behind him and yet inclined to sulk though a trace of a smile lingers about his mouth.

It is quite in keeping with the idea that motivates this collection to include in it the portrait of Miss Lilian Woakes by Whistler.

A College Without Campus or Stadium

Wilson Teachers College in Capital Is Such an Institution But Its Students Are Offered Highly Specialized Courses

By Lane Carter.

THIS is the story of Jack and Mary, but we might explain right here that this isn't a love story.

Jack was graduated from one high school in Washington last June, and Mary from another. They had no idea what they were going to do.

Jack wasn't sure whether to take a liberal arts course at a local university or try to get a job. Mary didn't know whether to enter business school or help look after her sister's 2-year-old child.

Then Jack and Mary made an interesting discovery. They were told about Wilson Teachers College.

Jack sniffed at first, and Mary yawned.

But the more they pondered the more their interest was aroused. Did it have a football stadium and campus? They went over to find out.

At Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest they found an imposing brick building of Tudor design, with high Gothic windows, that reminded them a little of the colleges they had read about. But they couldn't find a campus or football stadium—just a small piece of ground on which workmen were busy.

Goodwin, Post Staff Photos.

Discouraged they started to turn away. But something about the cool flight of white stone steps lured them on, encouraged them to find out what it was all about.

And there was the turning point in the lives of Jack and Mary. Now they are freshmen at Wilson Teachers College.

The interviews they received there solved their problems. They learned if they entered college they didn't have to become teachers. They would be given two years to decide whether they wanted to enter the teaching profession. During that time they would have a course corresponding to liberal arts, interrelated with certain required subjects in the field of education such as bases of teaching, general psychology, health and physical education and music and art appreciation.

An elective subject in another field is allowed, they learned. At the end of the sophomore year they are permitted to transfer to other institutions if they have decided against teaching.

Enrolling wasn't as simple as walking up these stone steps. Jack and Mary had to satisfy the authorities they were of good character, could pass a physical examination and had attained a required rank in high school. This ranking is somewhat higher than the requirements in many colleges and universities. The higher qualification was necessary because of the limited number of students that can be accommodated. Jack and Mary both had excellent records and were readily admitted.

They found it necessary to select a special field of teaching as part of the basic educational training. The fields open to them were kindergarten—primary teaching, intermediate grades and junior high school. In the latter field, they could concentrate on a major in English, history, geography, science or mathematics. Mary selected the course in intermediate teaching, which meant she had to take a course in elementary education. Jack selected history.

They were beginning to get different ideas about this teaching business. It wasn't a business, they discovered, but a profession like law, medicine or engineering. The course they were taking was equally as specialized as preparation for these other professions.

Teaching was a pleasant way to make a living when you stopped to think about it. You worked in a pleasant environment, and your income, perhaps not large, was at least steady. Of course there was the possibility of a long wait before getting a job. But the world would always need new teachers. As the old ones passed on, new ones trained to meet the demands of a new age and more complex problems.

Jack's grandfather couldn't understand all these "new-fangled" methods. Why did you need all this psychological business in teaching? When he went to school they didn't have these notions.

"We're going to produce better citizens," Jack tried to explain. "And to make them better we have to know as much as we can learn about the responses of the body and mind to different stimulae. Why, you should see how a modern teacher handles her class. She doesn't hammer things into a child with a ruler or a loud voice. She guides the child as an engineer does a delicate machine, and steers the youngster along the right path."

But grandfather was asleep.

When Jack spoke of this work, he referred to one of the newest laboratories being installed at Teachers College. Here the workings of the human mind and body will be studied. New equipment, such as mirror writing, is to be installed for the study of mentality. The course will be known as physiological psychology.

If, at the end of the second year, Jack and Mary definitely decide they want to enter the teaching profession they will have to write a thesis defending their choice. And if they continue in teachers college, their real work will now begin. The

Iron Horse Groomed More Carefully Than Favorites of the Race Trac

Yard Crew Checks All Possi After Runs to Make Sure Lo Is Ready for Next Trip Over

Goodwin, Post Staff Photos.

THE Iron Horse has become the Thoroughbred of Steel. Grooming the great mass of synchronized metal is a task that is done with more meticulous care than any race track favorite has ever known. The pleasure of thousands depends on the care of the race horse, the lives of millions are safe because the monster engines of today are groomed with precision.

With brakes grinding on steel wheels, the fast express halts gently at the station platform. Passengers stream from steel coaches and hurry on to the gates beyond.

Only the sobbing gasp of the air compressor breaks the stillness. The blazing fires die slowly as this monarch of the rails awaits its trip to stable. A snorting donkey-like yard engine couples to the train. Brakemen spring between the coaches. Couplers open as locks are operated. Slowly the cars are hauled away to be shined and polished.

Uncoupled, the travel-stained locomotive moves slowly through the yards. The subdued puffing of the exhaust sounds in striking contrast to the staccato roar on the road. Past the last signal bridge it weaves through a maze of gleaming rails, straightening at last on the track to the shop yards.

Inspectors Swarm Around.

Arriving on the inspection pit, the engineman scans his report of the engine's performance. With gleaming torches and ringing hammers the engine inspectors are already swarming over and under the resting giant.

Brakes, machinery, automatic train control, injectors, lubricators, flues, firebox and cab fixtures are carefully inspected. Each part is tested and every fault noted on the inspection report. Soon the report is sped on its way to the engine house office. Here the work is assigned and a crew of mechanics awaits the engine's arrival.

Engine hostlers handle the movement of the locomotives from this point. With the inspection completed the real work of grooming begins.

A grease-smeared engine hostler swings up to the cab. Gently he throttles the big road engine up the yards to the ash pits. Overhead cranes move up and down, scooping tons of ash from the deep, water-filled pits. Clouds of steam and ashes roll up, the emptied ash pan rattles and hisses. Sparks fly and hot coals shower down from the firebox.

The hostler moves his charge along to the wash track. The din of the ash pits increases to a roar. Jets of hot Already the steel giant seems to take on v life. The boiler gleams softly, the drive rods flash as moves under the coal wharf.

Towering high into the air, the coal wharf looms darkly. the crash and clatter of emptied gondolas, clouds of ck dust ascend. Whirring elevators hoist the fuel to bins. With a rattling roar tons of gas coal tumble down m the chute. High on the tender, scoop in hand, stands hostler, directing this black flood. Carefully the fuel leveled off. A hose plays over the coal until it is satur-d with water. The black dust is washed from the tender.

Final Grooming Begun.

On moves the iron horse, and now he stops for a drink. e pen stock is reached. A great spout swings over the nder. The hostler pulls a lever and gallons of water ur down into the tank.

The steel thoroughbred now approaches his stall for the al grooming. On the turntable he gently stands. Brakes ked, for the first time this king of the open road is lpless. His own great power is useless here, and a tiny ectric motor gently spins him around, pointing him to his oper stall.

In the roundhouse he stands motionless except for the ythmic pulsing of the air pumps. On each side are other ates of the road, veterans of hard, fast runs, carriers of ail, shiny new passenger engines, the fastest and most werful on the division. Ghosts of bygone locomotives em to lurk in the shifting shadows. Their names are ablazoned beneath the windows of the cab. Famous en-nes in their day, only a few remain to grace the halls great museums.

Men work and sweat, pulling great wrenches, tightening ch nut and bolt. The odor of burning oil mingles with ngent coal gas. Beating hammers and whining drills rive to drown out the soft insistent hiss of escaping steam. orches flicker as inspectors check each fault listed on the ork report. A final examination by the foreman and the refully groomed monster backs out into the engine yard.

On the ready track the engine crew takes charge. The gineer carefully inspects the machinery. A drop or two oil here, a tap from a heavy wrench there, assures the d hogger his iron horse is fit. In the cab, with forced draft roaring, the fireman peers into a veritable inferno he has created. Slowly the pressure mounts. With an ear-splitting roar a safety valve lifts. Injectors are opened, and water surges into the boiler.

Back down to the passenger platform. A closing of drawheads and the coupling is made. Passengers scurry to their cars. Air pressure is tested and brake shoes squeal. A semaphore signal swings up vertically to the clear position. The communicating whistle in the cab blows twice. Slowly the throttle is opened. A snort and roar of escaping steam and the Iron Thoroughbred starts again on its race with time.

The Locomotive Remains Boys' Dream of Romance

In the lexicon of youth there is one word that fires the imagination—locomotive.

Even though the airplane has come to capture the fancy of youth, the railroad engine still maintains its place in the affections of young boys.

Love of the railroad engine goes back to the dim past of this country.

There is hardly a boy in America who, at some time, has not looked with immeasurable pride on a railroad engine, whether it be standing in the yards or in a railroad station or plowing its way across country.

In his mind the average boy sees himself sitting at the cab window fondling the cord attached to the whistle, pulling down the throttle.

A glamorous figure, the railroad engineer always has been—and probably always will be—a hero to the growing boy.

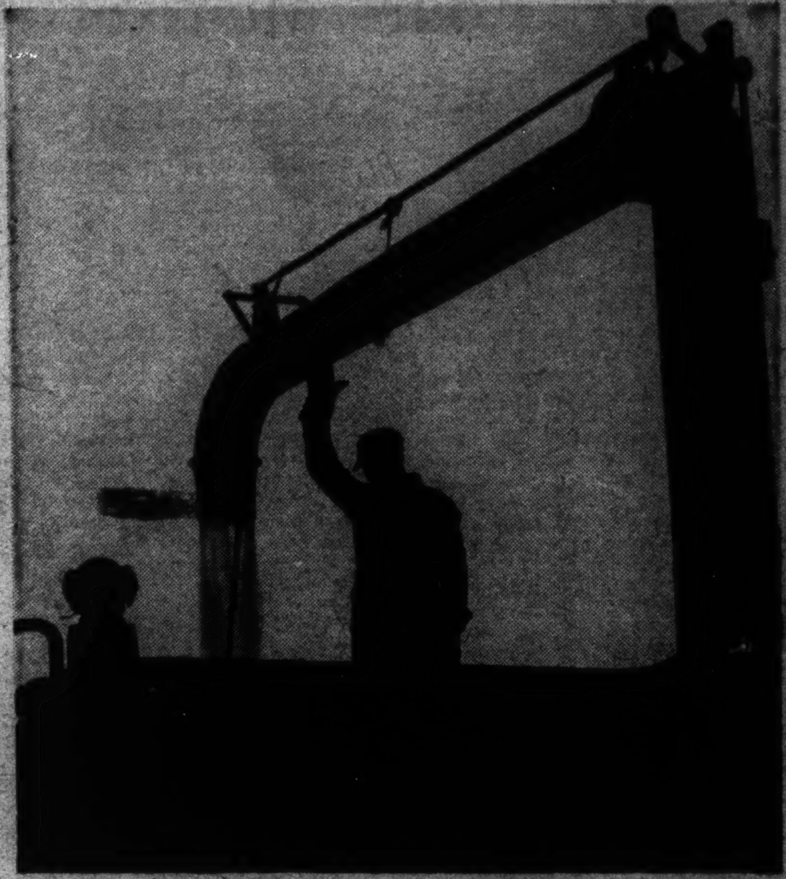
There is a reason: The man who controls a railroad engine has in his hands the power to move worlds.

A train, gliding over the countryside, in the twilight or the early dawn of day, has aboard all the boyhood fancies.

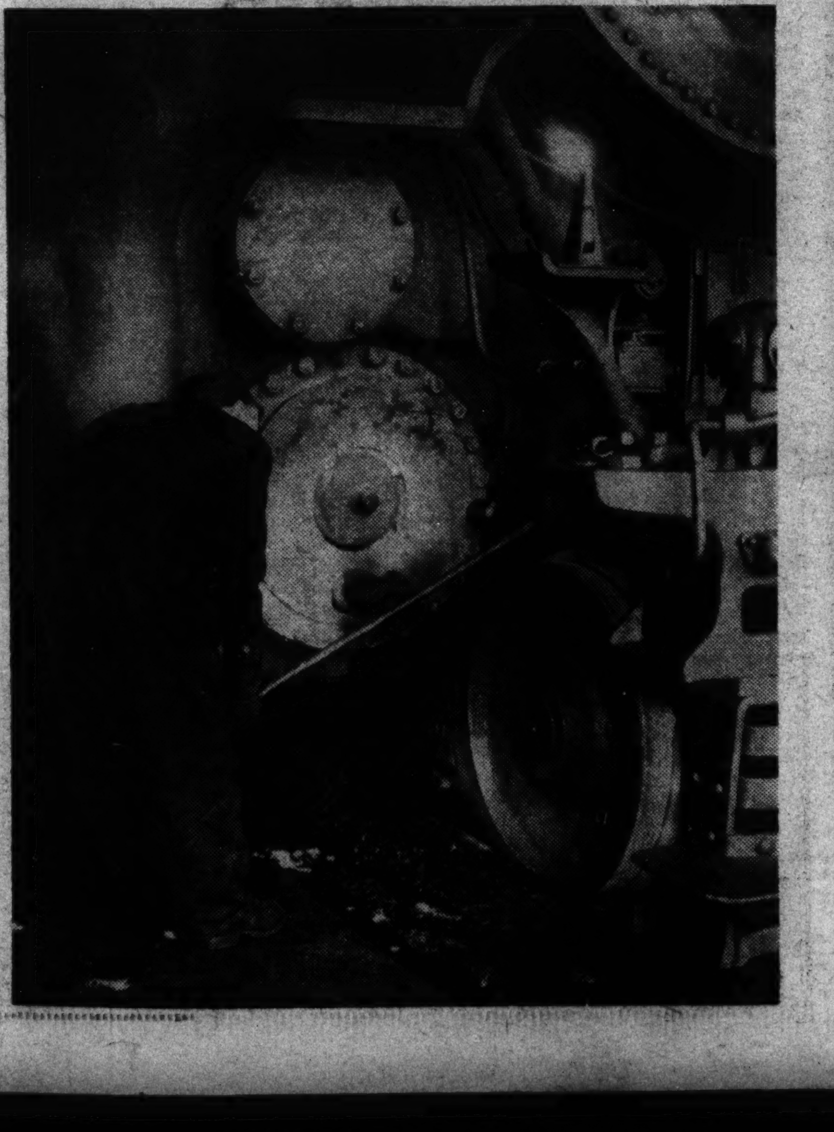
On the side of the road, whether he be standing in a corn field or on a sidewalk watching a train go by, the average boy dreams of far-distant places—where the train is going. As it speeds away the mighty iron engine becomes a mythical messenger carrying his thoughts.

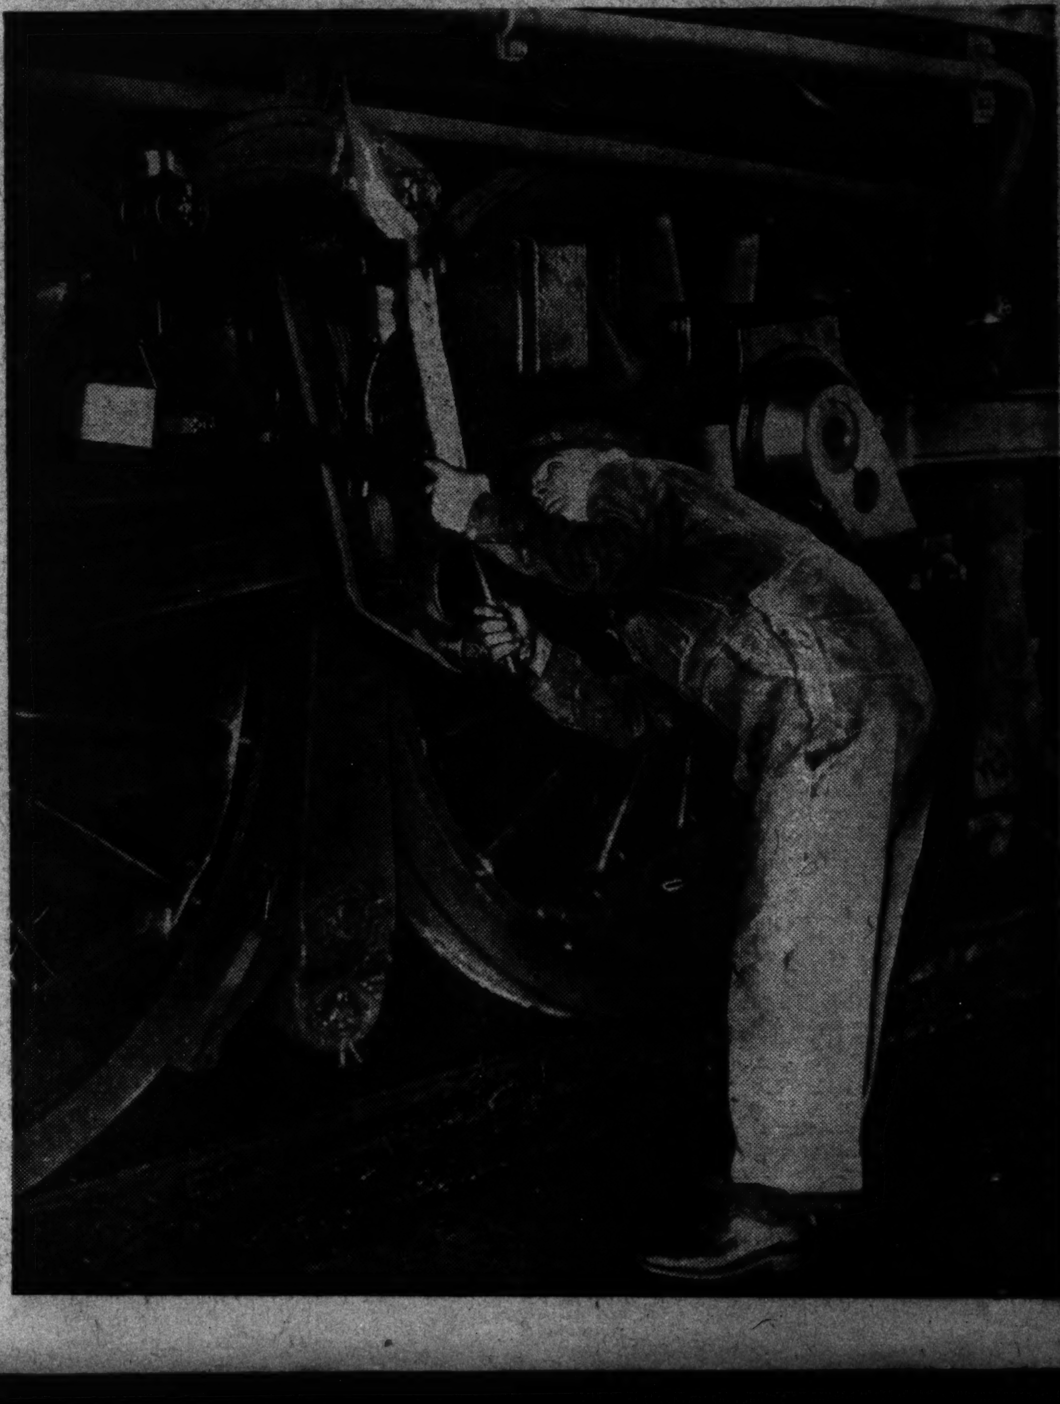
So the engine has become symbolic of mighty deeds and great adventure in the heart of American boyhood. From time immemorable American boys have been stirred by the heroism of railroad engineers, who stopped their trains on the very verge of disaster; and of trackmen who went out of their way to save lives; but always it has been the engineer and the engine that occupy first thoughts with the boys.

Always the engine will be beloved in a country that the engine helped cultivate.



First we see the iron monster on the wash rack (upper left) and then at the ash pits (lower left). Next a mechanic tightens the cylinder heads (center). Finally the engine gets a drink (above) at the pen stock before inspection (lower right).





Four Men of the Italian Renaissance

All Elinor Wylie's Prose in One Volume

An Omnibus, "COLLECTED PROSE OF ELINOR WYLIE." (Knopf, $3.50.)

Elinor Wylie, poet and scintillating star of modern American letters, is not a literary prophet without honor in her own town.

In Washington, where she passed her girlhood, made her debut and was first married, the admirers of her genius are many.

Therefore they will hail with delight the attractive volume of her collected prose, a companion volume to the successful one containing her collected poems which appeared last year.

Elinor Wylie will long endure in the world of literature through her dual achievement in the fields of [illegible] and prose.

Encomiums heaped upon the prose of Elinor Wylie by a multitude of critics were fittingly summarized by one who wrote: "It has the seal of loveliness upon it, and a perfection like those Egyptian crowns whose fragile but enduring beauty preserves the fine essence of a life proudly lived more surely than the pyramids."

There is a curious brilliance about Elinor Wylie's prose. It has the patina, as it were, of a wide knowledge of other literatures. One in[illegible]ely feels the charm of the classic, either in reading her four novels, "Jennifer Lorn," "The Venetian Glass Nephew," "The Orphan Angel," or "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard," or those new and hitherto unpublished prose writings grouped under a general heading, "Fugitive Prose."

Five important writers—Carl Van Vechten, Carl Van Doren, Isabel Paterson, William Rose Benet and Stephen Vincent Benet—have contributed prefaces which illuminate the periods and circumstances under which each novel was written. One does not hesitate to agree with Mr. Van Vechten that "Jennifer Lorn" is truly a "successfully sustained satire in English." Of "The Venetian Glass Nephew" all echo the words of Mr. Van Doren that "few novels so short and smiling can ever have been so learned." And none can fail to succumb to that "mixture of luminous beauty and wild earth which gives 'The Orphan Angel' its peculiar charm," according to Stephen Vincent Benet.

In his preface to the "Fugitive Prose" section of the book, every admirer of Elinor Wylie must be grateful for the unforgettable picture William Rose Benet paints of the woman herself. "The author seemed while she yet lived," he wrote—she had been his wife, "the embodiment of all that hyaline ecstasy and quick silver intelligence she adored, the exemplification of her own intricate pattern of frost—of all delicate, nimble, fragile, translucent, and nobly quickened emotion and thought. The cloak of her imagination was a broidered black damask where through the rapier of her wit caught essential moonlight upon its blade. But the other face of her masked, ironic spirit was the face of a crisp-frocked curly-headed child, surprised in mischievus laughter among the wild flowers of some fabulous upland pasture, where the wounds of life are not and the winds of Tume blow not. Her spiritual home lay west of the moon."

Elinor Wylie was too young to die so soon. Such a flame, of course, must be intense. Perhaps she had lived in her brief years all that life could have brought her. Yet her fame has been left to rest on a slender pedestal. Four books, some miscellany, an inconsiderable number of poems, and this star child passed out of this world beyond our ken.

Illogical Science

A study, "THE LOGIC OF SCIENCE," by William G. Ballantine. (Crowell.)

It was an unhappy day for Albert Einstein when the author of this little book set out to put all our tangled modern thinking straight. But for him the great scientist might have managed to have things all his way for another century or two. Mr Ballantine neatly and firmly consigns him to an insane asylum.

The trouble seems to have been that Mr. Einstein did not know how to think—a rather serious trouble after all. Mr. Ballantine puts him straight.

It is all very easy, Mr. Ballantine finds. The human mind is a thinking machine, like an adding machine in a bank. It creates nothing, can discover nothing not already known by observation. Unless the adding machine works consistently it is worse than useless. "Such proofs of intellectual independence (as Einstein's denial that two parallels can never meet), can be found in every insane asylum. If I call any two lines that will never meet parallel, and then say that they will meet somewhere, I only show that my memory is not long enough to reach from one end of my sentence to another."

And then, touching mathematics and the abstract sciences, he reminds us that they are merely "systems of thought." Geometry is such a science. No observation of any kind can ever threw any light on an abstract science. It is merely a question of how our thinking machine works.

Of course we must agree with the author on that. Euclid's geometry is an invention out of whole cloth, a system of thinking we have every right to take or to discard. Einstein merely found another geometry, the invention of a modern German, which seemed to fit much more closely with the observed phenomena.

We do not wish to quarrel with Mr. Ballantine. But we think that his memory is not too long. Parallel lines, when we learned about them, were not defined as lines which can never meet. They were defined as lines everywhere equally distant one from the other.

If Mr. Ballantine will buy himself an egg (the experiment is not expensive) and will draw two parallel lines upon it, he will have the singular experience of seeing them meet with his own eyes. Does Einstein call it elliptical geometry? Mr. Ballantine himself is persuaded that knowledge advances only by observation.

One little bone we simply must pick with Mr. Ballantine. It is over his apparent ignorance of all the remarkable "observations" of the universe that have been made in modern times. He entertains, it would seem, no smallest reservations concerning the Newtonian theory of gravity. He believes in the intrinsic yellowness of gold.

Mr. Ballantine seems to lack the most recently observed facts of a vast number of things. Without them, he goes jumping at conclusions. That is not logical.

LAURA YARD VITRAY.

In One Book Ralph Roeder Writes the Best History, Biography and Novel of the Year

A history, "THE MAN OF THE RENAISSANCE," by Ralph Roeder. (Viking Press, $3.50.)

The man with the "long sheep-like face, the full passionate lips, the powerful nose, the glowing eyes," is Savonarola—the uncompromising prior of San Marco, who died, hanged and burned in the Piazza of Florence in 1498.

The man with the "black, small, deep-set and lynx-like" eyes, with the crease at the corners of his mouth like a smile, is Machiavelli—the wakeful and astute Florentine diplomat, author of "The Prince," who died in his bed surfeited and disgusted with himself in 1527.

He with the proud cap, the man "tall, upstanding, with firm features and blue eyes," is Castiglione—mirror of his own book, "The Courtier," who died worn out by his exertions, "with perfect propriety," in 1529.

The last man, "with a glib tongue, a lean look and an enormous Roman assurance," is Aretino—soldier and poet and libertine, who came to an exhausted end in 1557.

Together they are the Renaissance Man. Together they are all men. For, as Mr. Roeder writes: "Their lives embodied the adventures of the basic ideas that men live by. . . . The ascetic virtue of Savonarola, the expedient virtue of Machiavelli, the convivial virtue of Castiglione, the animal virtue of Aretino—what are these but the final solutions of those who fear life, those who accept it, those who compromise with it, and those who succumb to it?" And this life, which they met so variously, was of a fermenting intensity to be found but three or four times in the history of man, a period marked by "artistic glories and moral miseries" of the most extreme sort—the Italian Renaissance. Yet remarkable as the age was, these men soared above it as conspicuous as rockets in a black night. Small wonder their stories leap from the pages of the book!

But we have had books on the Renaissance before. By no means is it solely the gorgeousness of his material which distinguishes Mr. Roeder's pages. From under a bushel, for he has but one other work to his credit—"Savonarola," 1930—he discloses an astonishing light, a brilliance of insight, of narrative gift, of style, which beyond all doubt will make "The Man of the Renaissance" increasingly a classic. Here and now, he has given us in one book the best history, the best biography, the best philosophy and the best novel of the year.

It is a story of the height of the Renaissance in Italy, from 1494 to 1530. We see Savonarola as a youth plagued by the sinfulness of life, fleeing to a Dominican monastery to escape the world, preaching, always preaching, until the very current of his eloquence brought the world and its problems in to him. Then it was too late to retire. His passion for reform admitted no quibbling with Pope and politicians, no turning back to compromise and safety. "A slack thing swung in the breeze, and the flame crept up and loosened its bonds."

Those lynx eyes of Machiavelli had seen the preacher, his ears had heard that fulminating eloquence. But he could not understand what he did not himself possess. To the master of opportunism simplicity and faith were phantoms in a mist, of no reality in a world where force must be met by force, or at least by cunning. All his admiration for Caesar Borgia streamed from the latter's factual success, and when that crumbled, Machiavelli had nothing—nothing until he remembered that it was the man who failed, not the principle. At the end of his life he knew that he, too, was a failure, a broken "time-server," and the principle itself evaporated. Some may discredit his patriotism, but he wrote: "I love my country better than my very soul." Then he died despairing of both.

Not so Castiglione. For him morals were manners. The court of his patron, Guidobaldo, Duke of Urbino, stood as the perfect court, because there manners were perfect. All rivalry, passion, greed was tempered, calmed down, subordinated. That fundamental balance was bone and blood to him, it went with him everywhere, it stayed him when the turbulence of factions crashed in his ears. All he wanted was to be welcome in any man's presence, and he won that. Endlessly agreeable, endlessly competent, without cease completely at home in himself. Few others of his time or any other could claim that. Few others could have it said of them, as did the Emperor Charles V after the solemn funeral: "I tell you that one of the best gentlemen in the world is dead."

And Aretino, calling himself "The Truth-Teller," called by Giovanni de' Medici "The Scourge of Princes" for his audacious lampoonings, was to grow old with one simple faith in the flesh, touched by love for a dying girl one-quarter his age, unregenerate as the warm earth.

About these four men Mr. Roeder weaves the whole tapestry of the time—the Borgias, the Medicis, the Estes, the Sforzas, the Gonzagas, painter and Pope, duchess and burgher and cut-throat, invasion and intrigue and love story and the sack of cities. It is all glowing, all golden.

Some books are to be borrowed from friends, some books are to be rented from drug stores, and some books are to be bought and treasured and read for years. "The Man of the Renaissance" is unmistakably the last sort.

For Riders Only

An exposition, "POLO PONIES, THEIR TRAINING AND SCHOOLING," by Paul Green Kendall, Lieutenant of Cavalry, U. S. Army. (Derrydale Press, $7.50.)

There are quite enough riders jogging through the parkways of Washington at one time or another to buy out the 850 copies of this first edition, riders more often than not, in need of such a book. For Lieut. Kendall goes further than describing the education of a green pony and the correction of a faulty veteran. In the midst of explicit rules for the training of the horse, he makes plainly apparent what a good horse expects of its rider.

The first chapter lists 29 principles to observe, such as: "Never allow the horse to perform any movement that you have not deliberately asked for. Use a great deal of patience—never try to rush your horse's training. The horse has an almost uncanny memory—take advantage of this in the work of associating ideas. Never lose your temper—punishment of the horse, due to his sensitiveness, should be in what is commonly called cold blood." All these are elementary principles, but in constant need of repetition.

A horse's muscles must be made supple and strong. Several chapters give schooling movements to secure this, as well as the right responses on the polo field. Concluding chapters deal with the selection of a pony, its care in the stable and between chukkers, and the type of bit advisable.

Diagrams explain the exercises. There are over 30 excellent photographs of horse and rider, posed by Capt. Hiram E. Tuttle, Q. M. C., U. S. Army, a trainer of Olympic horses and a graduate of the Cavalry Officers' School.

Lieut. Kendall, a graduate of the same course, is a young cavalry officer of ten years' standing. He has written a book, printed very handsomely by the Derrydale Press which should be much enjoyed even by riders who know they will never gallop forth, mallet in hand, to "ride out" the ponies.

Karamazov Illustrated

A new edition, "THE BROTHERS KARAMAZOV," by Fyodor Dostoyevsky. Illustrated by Boardman Robinson. (Random House, $3.50.)

There sit the three judges, at the climax of Dostoyevsky's monumental novel, to try Dmitri Karamazov for the murder of his father. On another page the defense counsel, Fetyukovitch, leans forward in white tie, smirking. All the book has built up to this. All Mr. Robinson's illustrations, now solid and strong, now angular and strained with the terror of fate, have led to the judgment and doom and submission. "The Brothers Karamazov" was never illustrated before. Now Mr. Robinson has illustrated it once and for all. Looking at his work, one can be sure of that.

Illustration by Boardman Robinson from the Jacket of "The Brothers Karamazov."

The drawings are peculiarly successful. For one does not have the feeling, as is the case with so many other illustrators, that the merit of the work lies in a certain distinct personality of the artist—that this is a Mr. What-you-may-call-'em deigning to do pictures for this book as he has done pictures for, say, "Green Mansions" or "Tristram Shandy" or "Sons and Lovers," every inch pretty obviously cut from the same piece of cloth. No, Mr. Robinson owns too much conscience for that. He has been willing to illustrate "The Brothers Karamazov," not himself.

All the definite characteristics of Dostoyevsky find a mirror in the drawings. Dostoyevsky's work was apparently awkward and unfinished. It held no femininity or passion, unlike that of Turgenieff or Tolstoy. Plots were complex and crowded with figures; the roar of cities reverberated in them. His uppermost intention was a concern with psychological analysis, in the course of which he anticipated many things later discovered by our humane sciences.

And so the drawings. They appear rough, with a little of that tendency toward the emotional emphasis of odd angles which we call "modern." There is none of that sickly sweetness which is used to express femininity in our day. Crowded they are, not with a confusion of lines, but with ideas, portents of meaning. Their strength, too, is almost an audible strength, so clangorous are some of the lines.

It is in the analysis of personality that the illustrations best show their quality. Father Karamazov will never have any other face than the one Mr. Robinson has given him. Dmitri, Ivan, Alyosha, Katerina Ivovna—they are all caught and held. Some of the drawings look like caricatures. Which is as it should be, for the Cinderella art of caricature makes keener hits at personality than do the proud sisters of academic portrait painting. Mr. Robinson used all the means in his power, and triumphed.

The whole format of a book is an unavoidable part of its effect. Random House was quite right in trusting the typography to Mr. Robert Josephy, whose handiwork appears in a conspicuous proportion of the best-printed trade editions in this country. Altogether, this edition of "The Brothers Karamazov" is highly distinguished. One glance and you will itch to own it.

The Musical Ear

A handbook, "THE ART OF ENJOYING MUSIC," by Sigmund Spaeth. (Whittlesey House, $2.50.)

Since the majority of those who write about music for any length of time seem unable to resist the temptation to define it, one is not surprised to find Sigmund Spaeth declaring, "Music is the organization of sound toward beauty." That is an excellent definition, as far as it goes, but not warranting the adjective "comprehensive" which he attaches. Undeniably an important constituent, beauty is only one of the factors in that complex phenomenon which has baffled the combined efforts of psychology and esthetics to explain.

Debate over that point has no relation, however, to the merits of this book which is herewith recommended to the man who knows nothing about music but knows what he likes. "Its aim," writes Mr. Spaeth, "is to give as much information as possible, preferably without creating boredom, on a basic scheme that will supply every potential music-lover with a practical system of approach (like a bidding system in contract bridge) having enough flexibility to allow for the unhampered development of personal tastes and preferences." The aim has gone straight to the mark.

Simplification of the elements of rhythm, melody and harmony can go no farther than the author has reduced it in the first nine chapters. The subject has been presented in terms of common sense. Those who have listened to Mr. Spaeth's radio talks can hear the very tones of his voice in his matter-of-fact statements, for he writes here as he speaks. He imparts information painlessly.

"Enjoyment of music," he says, "is primarily an instinct, and no one can be stopped from having that experience, except perhaps by insistence upon turning the whole thing into a horrible task." He turns it, instead, into a pleasant pastime by showing that the formidable aspect of musical technique belies its actual harmlessness. Diminished sevenths and augmented ninths prove to be, not hobgoblins, but prankish chords in masks as he reveals their true faces.

The same clarity of explanation pervades his chapters on sonata form and the intricacies of counterpoint. Having disposed of these matters, he proceeds to the discussion of the products of the composer's workshop—songs, cantatas, oratorios, operas, music dramas, symphonies and symphonic poems. Chamber music, too, has its turn in elucidation. There are chapters on instruments, "How to Analyze Music," "Transposition and Tonality" and a historical summary.

Practical to the last minute, Mr. Spaeth has added a biographical list of composers, a glossary of musical terms, a list of questions to be answered after reading each chapter, and a thorough index. He has done his best to persuade the layman that music is not an esoteric subject, but one that can be understood by all.

Simonds Warns of Coming War

A study, "AMERICA FACES THE NEXT WAR," by Frank H. Simonds. (Harper, $1.)

Will there be a next war? Will America be in it? The author, long an observer of and writer about National affairs, answers both questions in the affirmative.

FRANK H. SIMONDS.

This little book is designed to bring up to date other studies of European conditions by the same author. Particularly, it contains a study of Hitler and his influence on European conditions.

The author sees Hitler as more than a little mad and the German people suffering from a mass psychosis. He sees Germany determined once more to achieve her place in the sun, and France once again just as firmly determined that she shall do nothing of the kind. The next war, he indicates, probably will start with the long-standing Polish corridor controversy.

There is no prediction as to when the next war will come, but the author feels that it is awaiting only such a spark as that set off at Serajevo in 1914.

That America will enter this new war, the writer appears to feel certain. He feels that instead of getting in late, this time the United States probably will be in from the start. He declares that the Roosevelt foreign policy is almost identical with that of Wilson, and that bargaining to obtain peace will eventually result not in peace but in United States participation in war.

Simonds discusses the situation calmly and dispassionately. The book is not flamboyant jingoism, but a studied discussion of conditions as the author feels they exist.

American and British Stories Are Different as Pie and Cheese

A collection, "A STORY ANTHOLOGY: 1931-33," edited by Whit Burnett and Martha Foley. (Vanguard Press, $2.50.)

A collection, "O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD PRIZE STORIES OF 1933," edited by Harry Hansen. (Doubleday Doran, $2.50.)

A collection, "THE BEST BRITISH SHORT STORIES: 1933," edited by Edward J. O'Brien. (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.)

Twenty years ago, perhaps less, certainly more, you could pick up a volume of short stories in English and read it through without being able to tell, barring dialect and place-names, whether it were by an American or a Britisher. That day has vanished. Nothing proves it better than these three books.

The British and American short stories, as here presented, are as distinctly different as apple pie from cheese. What the gap between them is on their native heath would be astonishing, because by this time we know Mr. O'Brien's taste—he was the first critic to recognize the value of "Story" magazine, and if there were any writings in England and her colonies to meet that canon he would have found them.

Like Mr. Coolidge, I do not choose to run the risk of saying either school is better than the other. The American writers lean toward experimenting with forms, toward a more photographic (or they will call it more highly selective) representation of speech, manners and human predicaments, toward a live grappling with what we rather inadequately call "life." The English have found something good and they cling to it. The American flings out the criticism "traditional" as a slur on that sort of thing, and the Englishman, quite properly, I think, may reply that after the American has fussed and frittered all the way around Robinson's barn he usually, if he is a good writer, comes very close to the place from which the Englishman never left.

The international discrepancy, then, between the stories in hand indicates that many of them are simply not good. In the British volume one gets impatient with such old "old stuff" as a tale about a man taking shelter in a peculiar house and meeting a peculiar person, or a yarn beginning: "'Wot was the best Christmas dinner I ever ate?' asked the bosun." In the American volumes one must put up with such old "new stuff" as line by line dialogue without quotation marks, or an escaped convict in the Maine woods causing a farm girl's heart to flutter. Quite plainly both nationalities have found the path of least resistance toward the composition of a passable story.

In the "Story" collection, by far the most sincere and moving tale was the first in the book: "Missis Flinders," by Tess Slesinger. I read it and passed on to the others, and after I'd come back and read it again there weren't any others. But Kay Boyle's "Rest Cure" was written with assurance, and Anita Grannis "Jamboree" dissolved the curtain between reader and story.

The "O. Henry" volume had a higher proportion of excellence. Mrs. Rawlings' winning story, "Gal Young Un," though overlong, was of first-rate quality, and those by Erskine Caldwell ("Country Full of Swedes," which won the Yale Review Prize), Bill Adams and Conrad Aiken may be singled out.

As for the "best British" collection, the stories were so much of a piece that I would commend all or none. With a sole exception—James Stern's "Our Father" had a vitality which distinguished it highly.

For all would-be writers these volumes are imperative reading. For the rest of us these volumes will stir up our horizons and sensibilities as only short stories can.

MacLeish Gathers His Poems

A collection, "POEMS 1924-33," by Archibald MacLeish. (Houghton Mifflin, $3.)

In one neat volume Mr. MacLeish has gathered all his poems, including the Pulitzer prize winner this year, "Conquistador," which he "can now reread without embarrassment." This does not mean his total work, for considerable portions of his earlier books, "New Found Land" and "Streets in the Moon," have been left within those slender covers. Several unpublished poems have been added, among them the poem read at the Phi Beta Kappa exercises at Harvard this year. Regrettably, the volume does not point these out, and without research one guess is as good as another.

So what remains is to Mr. MacLeish's taste at the moment of publication. That taste appears almost catholic, for Mr. MacLeish's violin possesses several strings. On each one he is skillful. More than that, he is moving. His lines ring in the mind, stir echoes, sound half-forgotten, half-untasted emotions.

But chiefly he is an asker of questions. He solves only as Hamlet has solved—by showing the choices possible and leaving the answer insoluble. The simile is suggested by the first poem in the book, "The Hamlet of A. MacLeish," which paraphrases emotionally the play, and translates its questions into the questions of his own personality. The result is amazingly effective. I thought it the poem most natural and relevant to Mr. MacLeish.

When he writes of the beauty of women he carries the "beauty passing" theme to a less personal conclusion and holds over it the eye of eternity. Thus—

"I will not speak of the famous beauty of dead women.
I will say the shape of a leaf
lay once on your hair
Till the world ends and the eyes are out and the mouths broken.
Look! It is there!"

He would be remembered, not beyond, but among his fellow-poets. He would be remembered living beside them. Thus—

"Those of one man's time
They shall be dead together;
Dos that saw the tyrants in the lime,
Ernest that saw the first snow in the fox's feather,
Stephen that saw his wife,
Cummings his quick fillies,
Eliot the caul between the [illegible] life.
Pound—Pound cracking the eggs of a cock with the beautiful sword of Achilles.
I speak to those of my own time,
To none other."

These lines, too, give lightning-flash judgments upon the work of John Dos Passos, Ernest Hemingway, Stephen Vincent Benet, E. E. Cummings, E. S. Eliot and Ezra Pound.

Hear Mr. MacLeish in another vein—

"This is Mister Harriman making America:
Mister-Harriman-is-buying-the-
Union-Pacific-at-Seventy:
The Santa Fe is shinging on his hair."

Which is bitter enough. The horizons of poets have expanded; it was high time.

But Mr. MacLeish will be remembered for "Conquistador" beyond a doubt. That strong, gusty narrative, those sudden interludes of green, fresh beauty which are like oases, the gallop of horses and the western sun—these he has molded into an ingot which is his own. But one or two other American poems can compare with it in sweep and accomplishment of purpose. Mr. MacLeish will move on from "Conquistador," for it is there he shows his intention and his power.

Colonial Setting Creates Cheer

"THERE'S the doorbell!"

The Perfect Hostess drops the fashion magazine in the seat of her comfortable chair, smoothes her hair and glides to the door. Her glance encircles her living room, and with her hand on the knob she smiles, knowing the room is a fit representative of her good taste, that it is as gracious as her smile, as poised as her trim-fitted dinner dress.

There are quick murmurs of "It's nice to see you again," "Here, let me take your coat," and as the Perfect Hostess ushers her guests into the room, "What a lovely home you have—so cheerful and comfortable."

The lady of the house smiles again. She knew it would be that way.

Presently, Mr. and Mrs. Guests-for-the-Evening settle in the bay window section of the living room. She takes the Lafayette wing type chair the Perfect Hostess left, he the Windsor, propping his feet on the long, low, little footstool. The round maple table holds the convenient cigarette box and necessary ash trays. What a charming setting for the congeniality of friendly talks!

There are friendly talks in friendly homes in every part of the country. Perhaps some of the most friendly of these take place in the tranquillity of Colonial surroundings. The furniture that makes a home tranquil and cheery is easy to obtain. Although antique shops snatch it out of reach of the average pocketbook, department and furniture stores offer it at the most reasonable prices.

The bay window in the home of our hostess is an example of economical and authentic reproduction of the settings in the homes of the Colonists.

Walls are sprinkled with quaint patterns of antique design, and paneled with imitation wood-printed paper. Long drapes that reach the floor resemble cloth woven by hand on an old-fashioned loom. Instead of a valence at the top, a scalloped wood heading frames the window with originality and charm. The scallops are repeated in the border of the bright tinted hooked rug.

It is the grouping of the furniture that gives a room that indefinable atmosphere of hospitality. Two comfortable chairs, facing each other, a table between them, and the corner lit with the gentle warmth of a lamp invite one to stop and talk a moment.

The perfect hostess knows this, and she knows as well, that the two chairs, the table, the lamp, and all the accessories that blend into a setting of serenity and comfort, must be harmonious. She selected the harmony of the Colonial furnishings and she knows it was a wise choice. Her guests will be early to come, and late to leave, and in answer to her "Do come again soon," will reply, "Thank you, we will, and often."

Faded Garments May Be Made Useful by Dyeing

Many faded garments and household materials, the fabric of which are still good, can often be restored to usefulness by dyeing. Economy can be effected by doing the work at home. The process is not complicated, although it requires time and patience.

In selecting the new color consider the one already in the fabric. It is easier to dye fabric a deeper shade of the same color than to change to a different hue. In case another color is desired, however, many possibilities are open. Interesting and satisfactory combinations often result.

Unless the original color is entirely removed, it is impossible to switch to a different color of the same depth. Light tints, such as baby blue, flesh pink, eggshell and pearl gray, may be treated as white, however, and dyed any color except a very faint tone.

While any color may be dyed black, the result is apt to reflect a tinge of the original color. Blue, redyed black, often give a blue-black; green will result in black with a greenish overtone, while red or brown may have a bronze tinge.

Such colors as wine, deep purple, midnight blue, dark green and brown can only be redyed the same color or black. Colors obtained by dyeing are affected by the brightness of the original shade, plus the strength of the dye solution. For instance, an old rose material immersed in a weak solution of navy blue will give a light reddish purple; whereas a strong solution of navy blue would result in a decided purple, with perhaps, a bluish tinge.

Closely related colors can be dyed the same hue. Yellow, orange and yellow-red take brown dye nicely. All greens, including those of blue or yellow cast, can be dyed dark green.

Complementary colors — those opposite each other on the color wheel, such as red and green, yellow and purple, blue and orange—tend to neutralize each other. Gray will result. They can be used to advantage in producing soft, unusual colors which could be produced in no other way. Red, applied to green, produces a gray which may have either a red or green tinge, depending on whether the original color or the dye is the stronger.

Women Turn Mechanics.

Candies for Christmas and Good Recipes for Making Them.

Among the other things that pile up during these trying days before Christmas, amid all the eleventh hour shopping, wrapping and mailing, is the preparation of Christmas candies. Such candies tend to fall into two groups, those one makes or buys to have on hand for Christmas dinner and the parties and visits that turn up during the season, and those one sends off in a jolly little box to friends. In either case, if one is going to make them oneself, the easier they are to prepare, the more welcome they are going to be.

It may be assumed that the box of homemade candy one sends off is going to be delightedly received, though it be only fudge. Yet how utterly enchanted will the friend be who opens a gaudily wrapped package to find, not only fudge, beneath a sprig of pine or hemlock, but caramels, a fondant, glaced nuts, and a bunch or two of dried raisins—possibly also a few bitter-sweet berries here and there just because they are pretty. And the pleasant duty of preparing such a box is not really very much less pleasant than the duty of making its contents disappear, when one has previously done the honorable thing by Christmas turkey and Christmas pies.

The candy recipes given here are selected first for their simplicity or infallibility, and second for variety. As practically every American man, woman, and child has his own personal preconceptions about how the best fudge is made, that candy is omitted. How about a chocolate caramel, though?

Chocolate Caramels.

1 cup sugar (brown or white may be used)
1 cup butter.
1 cup molasses
1 cup milk or cream
¼ lb. chocolate.

Boil all ingredients together until brittle when tested in water. Stir only to prevent burning. Pour in buttered pan, cut in inch squares when cool and firm. Break in pieces when brittle.

This is rather a lavish caramel, as may be seen from the proportion of butter, but is unctuous in the extreme. Chopped nut meats may be added to all or some of the candy before it is poured into pans. And many will prefer a teaspoon of vanilla in the flavoring.

French Cream.

This recipe for fondants is given because it is easy and requires no cooking. It is

Book of Cartoons Made for President

When the mood fell, the king called his jester. In the midst of affairs of state, he needed a laugh to banish the cobwebs of care from his mind.

President Roosevelt has his jester, too. He needs a laugh occasionally.

The President's jester is self-appointed. Few know who he is—in fact, only the jester himself and this reporter know his identity. But he is an old friend of the Roosevelt family. He has known them for 30 years. He can make the President throw up his hands, tilt back in his chair and really laugh. He says he can do it 20 times in an hour—when the President has that much time to sit with him.

But these affairs of state keep them apart these days, so the jester has to evolve some kind of absent treatment for the President.

Now, the jester, it so happens, has a position of peculiar responsibility in the Government. A certain department, mightily anxious to know all that is being said about this NRA throughout the country, has occasion to read about 200 of the big metropolitan newspapers every day. Every one of them, at some time or other, goes over the desk of the President's self-appointed jester.

He conceived an idea whereby he could give the President a hearty laugh or two every night before the latter put out the light at the White House and went to sleep—without the jester's presence.

He had noticed that each of the papers which came to his hands contained—sometimes serious, sometimes funny—cartoons. They were often about the President, often about the NRA, often about the Cabinet, Administration, "big" men of the Government. The President never had a chance to see them. He had to read editorials, statistics and news stories that dry-minded economists were paid lavish sums to prepare.

Beginning some time in June, this jester began to clip out these cartoons. He didn't always pick just the funny ones. Sometimes he picked out the ones which he thought, in his own capacity, reflected a proper fault which the President would be glad to have called to his attention. Sometimes he chose cartoons which made jokes on the President himself which he knew Mr. Roosevelt would enjoy.

He carefully cut out these cartoons and pasted them on sheets of paper. Sometimes he added a comment of his own which would recall something these two had laughed at years ago. Sometimes he put two cartoons together, thus creating a special significance which he was certain the President would catch. The whole group traced a chronology of events for the first months of the new regime.

He put all these cartoons in a book-binder and made a sort of Volume to Be Read While Lying in Bed and sent it to the President.

After a while he inquired about its reception at the White House . . .

In brief, the second installment of the Jester's Book of Cartoons for His President is almost ready for delivery.

Residents Indifferent.

Visitors to the Nation's Capital always are struck most forcibly by the complete indifference of residents to such historic places as the White House, Washington Monument and the Capitol. How we "walk right by" and never stop to look at the place where the President lives is something at first quite incomprehensible. But, in a week, they are as blase as the rest of us.

Fox Raisers Kept Busy.

The Nut Work Network

By H. I. Phillips.

Announcer: Ladies and gentlemen of the unseen audience, this is the High Test Oyster Hour. When you hear the calliope it will be time you had your oysters. I take pleasure in presenting at this time, or nearly so, Jarvis McNooney, world famous broadcaster of sports events, who will give you an eyewitness picture of the Visit of St. Nicholas.

Mr. McNooney is at the chimney side. Folks, Mr. McNooney.

Mr. McNooney: Hello, everybody. Well, here I am right in the room with the fireplace. It's the night before Christmas, folks, and I'm right here where I can see everything that takes place.

* * * *

Not a creature is stirring. . . . Wait a minute, I thought I saw something move. . . . No, I was right. . . . Not a creature is stirring, not even a mouse. The stockings are all hung by the chimney with care. . . . The kiddies have evidently been tipped off and are expecting St. Nicholas any minute. I'll let you know the minute anything happens.

* * * *

Ma in her 'kerchief and pa in his cap have just settled down for a long winter's nap. . . . I wish you could see the children nestled all snug in their beds. . . . Visions of sugar plums are dancing in their heads, folks. . . . I don't understand what is delaying St. Nicholas. . . . Wait a minute. . . . Something's happening.

* * * *

Out on the lawn there is a terrible clatter. . . . I'm looking out the window now and have a fine view. . . . The full moon on the new-fallen snow gives a fine luster to objects below. . . . Gee! . . . I wish you could be here. . . . There's a sleigh and eight . . . eight . . . reindeer. . . .

* * * *

There's St. Nick driving. . . . Oh, boy!

* * * *

He's snapping the whip and urging them on by name, folks. . . . I can hear him yell, "Now, Dasher; now, Dancer; now, Prancer and Vixen!" . . . I think he is calling the other reindeers Comet, Cupid, Donder and Blitzen, but I can't be certain. . . . There is lots of excitement here.

* * * *

Oh, baby, look at those deer go! . . . They've dashed to the top of the porch. . . . Now they're at the top of the wall! . . . Boy, can those reindeer fly? . . . They've gone to the housetops. . . . It seems incredible. . . . They're using the two-four formation. . . . They look in the pink of condition. . . . St. Nick looks fine, too.

* * * *

Wow! . . . They're on the roof now! . . . Listen and you can hear them prancing and pawing. . . . Wait! . . . Something's happening. . . . St. Nick has left the sleigh. . . . Yes, he's down the chimney. . . . He's down the chimney in a flash, bag and all. . . . I didn't think he could do it. . . . Boy, is he fast?

* * * *

Just a few words of description to give you a word picture, folks . . . Nick is dressed in fur from his head to his foot, but that was some squeeze down the chimney and he is pretty well covered with ashes and soot.

* * * *

Wotta man! . . . I wish you could see him . . . He has a wonderful twinkle in his eyes and the merriest dimples . . . His cheeks are like roses and, as one of the boys here says, his nose looks a lot like a cherry . . . He has a very droll mouth, a broad face and a little round belly, if you will pardon the word . . . We have to be careful what we say on the air, folks.

* * * *

He's laughing now and his tummy shakes like a bowl full of jelly . . . Yes, sir, just like a bowl full of jelly or marmalade or something . . . He seems very happy and doesn't waste any time. Boy, what pep! . . . He's going to work at once, the jolly old elf!

I'll turn you over to Eddie Bloetz, now . . . Eddie has a ringside seat near the stockings and can tell you better than I can what is happening now . . . Take it, Eddie.

* * * *

Eddie: I have it, Jarvis . . . Thanks, Jarvis . . . That's very nice of you, Jarvis . . . Well, folks, here I am right at the fireplace . . . Saint Nick is filling the stockings now and is very swift in his movements . . . He fills them with a very jerky movement . . . It seems impossible, but he has them all filled already . . . Now he lays a finger beside his nose, gives a nod and disappears up the chimney . . . I'll turn you back to Jarvis McNooney . . . Hello, Jarvis . . . Take it, Jarvis . . . Thanks, Jarvis.

* * * *

McNooney: I have it, Eddie . . . Thanks, Eddie . . . Okay, Eddie . . . This is McNooney again, folks . . . Here he comes . . . Here's Saint Nick again. He comes out of the chimney with a bound and—oh, boy—wotta leap! . . . Wotta leap!

* * * *

"He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.

* * * *

That's just a little poetry, folks . . . He's out of sight already . . . but just before he disappeared I heard him yell, "Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night!" . . . A fine fellow, this Saint Nicholas . . . Good-natured, and all that . . . Boy, what a jolly old chap . . . Well, it's all over now and I hope you've enjoyed it . . . Jarvis McNooney talking, folks . . . Thank you.

* * * *

Announcer: That was Jarvis McNooney, folks, describing a visit from Saint Nicholas.

Jarvis: Thanks, Harry.

Announcer: Thanks, Jarvis.

Eddie: Thanks, Harry. Thanks, Jarvis.

Announcer: You have just listened to a ringside description of the Visit of Saint Nicholas. The next voice you hear will be that of Oscar Shrewsberry, the Poet-Laureate of the Air, who will recite for you a poem of his own composition, entitled, "Pink Dahlias At Dawn." I present Mr. Shrewsberry.

* * * *

Mr. Shrewsberry: Ladies and gentlemen of the Nutwork Network, this is a little thing I wrote out of my own head. It is political in its significance, yet there is about it a deep note of romance, coupled with an element of, shall I say, mysticism? Yes, I shall say mysticism:

The boy stood on the burning deck,
'Twas a little after five;
Of the gallant ride of Paul Revere
There is hardly a man alive
Who recalls that day in the Yukon cold
Where the daffodils are blue
And they buried the wreck of the Hesperus
With the lady that's known as Lou.

* * * *

Announcer: If you want to hear more of this kind of poetry, folks, write in at once and please explain why. Under the auspices of the Allied Grease Cup Corporation you will now hear, I regret to say, Miss Prudence Whipple in her weekly talk on raising babies. Miss Whipple is 56 years old, single, and has never raised anything but hollyhocks and toy spaniels. Miss Whipple, folks.

* * * *

Miss Whipple: Hello, everybody. I do hope my little talks on parenthood are contributing toward a better, bigger America. Tonight I wish to stress the matter of feeding the baby. I can not too strongly condemn pork pie for infants under two years. If, however, there is nothing but pork pie in the house, special attention should be given to the crust. Too much crust is bad for the growing child. Unless it is a thin, flaky crust, I do not favor giving baby too much of it. On the other hand, I have known children whose spirit was broken by being whipped and sent to bed without a pie crust.

So it becomes a matter of judgment. What is one baby's pie crust is another baby's poison. It is up to the individual parent. In case of a tie, I recommend giving the little dear frankfurters and sauerkraut at bedtime, with a tumbler of cold beer. If any parents wish further advice, write me at this station, asking for a Prudence Whipple Baby Pamphlet, spelled, A-p-p-l-e-s-a-u-c-e.

Pong! Pong! Pong!

Announcer: It is now half past two, with a well-defined low area coming from the lake region, with 37 districts missing.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Newspapers.)

Well, folks, here I am right at the fireplace . . . Saint Nick is filling the stockings now and is very swift in his movements . . . He fills them with a very jerky movement . . . It seems impossible that he has them all filled already.

Tournament at Cincinnati Introduces New Set of Bridge Heroes

THE seventh annual national championship tournament of the American Bridge League which concluded last week at Cincinnati, resulted in bringing a new set of bridge heroes into the contract arena. Overcoming the crack teams that went out from New York, Charles A. Hall, R. M. Wildberg, Albert and Phil Steiner, of Cincinnati, succeeded in winning the Chicago trophy in the national open contract team-of-four championship contest by a small but comfortable margin. The runners-up were P. Hal Sims, S. G. Churchill, Waldeman von Zedtwitz, of New York, and B. J. Becker, of Philadelphia. The former had a score of 51 points and the latter 49½. All of the other teams trailed far behind, some of them making only 29 points. Even the Oswald Jacoby team, composed of himself, Ed. Hymes, jr., L. W. Watson and Sam Fry, jr., could muster only 43 points.

The proceedings were followed with keen interest by many Washington players who had predicted that the Sims foursome would have an easy time in slaying their adversaries, most of whom were from the Middle West and South. They had figured only the possibility of the Jacoby team being formidable competitors against the Sims outfit. All doubt as to the superiority of the Queen City lads was set at rest when there was a real test of skill and ability in the final session of the series. The Sims players had at least two opportunities to defeat their rivals in the last few boards, but fell down in both instances. An examination of the boards discloses some very brilliant bidding and playing on the part of Mr. Hall and his team mates and some that was not so good, by any means, by the Sims team.

• • • •

The significance of this lies in the fact that Mr. Hall and his men went into the match with the slogan, "Don't bid on weak hands when sitting third or fourth." The opposite course is one of the features of the Sims bidding, for reasons which, his followers assert, have singular advantages. It did not appear to work successfully against the Hall team any more than did the Jacoby psychics, which seemed to have deceived the Cincinnati players not at all. Of further interest is the fact that Mr. Hall and his group had never before played in a national tournament against experts of the caliber of those assembled at Cincinnati. He and his partner, Mr. Wildberg, were also victors in the open pair contest for the Cavendish trophy. Sir Derrick J. Wernher, president of the American Bridge League, and his team finished fourth in the team-of-four contest with a score of 40½.

The Federal Bridge League, whose season tournament attracts the largest group of contract players in Washington, staged a pair contest last week at the Federal Club House, 1515 Sixteenth street. The players were so numerous it was necessary to organize two sections. Winners in the first section were S. F. Pickering and J. R. Brenham, first, and Mrs. Charles W. Deitz and Miss Mazie Buie, runners-up. In the second section the victors were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Dunn, first, and Miss G. Brook and Miss Tomken, runners-up.

Mr. Pickering and Mr. Brenham were members of the team which won the Federal's tournament last year and captured the Federal News Trophy.

Jim Hay, exponent of the mystic "13 System," literary shark and local celebrity, insists that the late Sir Francis Bacon, who wrote rather prolifically under the name of William Shakespeare and produced some classic plays still accredited to the "Bard of Avon," must have been a bridge player. He submits proof of his assertion in the form of quotations from the great intellect.

For instance, as the players are about to start the game, he finds some one in the "Comedy of Errors" saying, "How shall we try it? We'll draw cuts," and in "Much Ado About Nothing," "I bid thee draw . . . Draw to pleasure us." "Well, sit we down," they say in "Hamlet," and that sounds enough like the start of a bridge game.

"Clubs—clubs" (Two Gentlemen of Verona). "Hit the woman who cried out Clubs," shouts some guy in "Henry VII," although it really sounds more like an expression of Henry VIII.

"Obedience bids I should not bid again," as Mr. Hay points out, is an admonition which it were as well to heed in the modern play as in "Richard III."

Continuing his citations, Mr. Hay quotes: "A spade—a spade" (Hamlet).

"Why a spade?" (Timon of Athens).

"I should be glad to hear some instruction from my fellow partner" ("Measure for Measure").

"Mark our contract" ("A Winter's Tale").

"Oh, h—— what have we here" ("Merchant of Venice"). A quite frequent modern bridge expression, Mr. Hay says.

"What means that trump?" (Timon of Athens).

"We will yet have more tricks" ("Merry Wives of Windsor"). The expression of a bridge optimist.

"You have put him down, lady, you have put him down" ("Much Ado About Nothing"). Another bridge experience of frequent occurrence.

"There's but one down" (Macbeth). Indicating a bridge controversy as to the extent of the set.

"There were two honors" ("Henry IV"). Not enough to count in a game of today.

"Out d—— spot" (Macbeth). This is what Mr. Hay says almost any lady would say when she got a discard of a deuce.

"Give me the dagger," he insists is what Macbeth shouted when his partner failed to carry on after the king had made a two demand bid.

"Thou bid'st me to my loss" (Cymbeline), is the complaint that many a player has made to his partner who has raised him without warrant.

These, Mr. Hay avers, are only a few references which demonstrate to his mind that Sir Francis knew his aces.

It happened at a private home in a two-family game in the near fashionable section. The visiting husband was but slightly known to his hostess. He played bridge reluctantly and only under the compulsion of friend wife. He was too much abstracted with other things and his thoughts were upon matters of business and not upon the play. The husband of the hostess, however, took his bridge more seriously and deliberated long and solemnly upon every action, and especially in his bidding. He had hesitated for nearly five minutes on a hand and finally said "pass" in a voice so modulated that the gentleman at his left did not hear him, but sat immersed in thoughts of the morrow.

"And what do you do, Mr. Jones?" asked the hostess, sweetly.

"Oh," replied Mr. Jones, oblivious of his bridge surroundings, "I'm in the wholesale plumbing business, but we sometimes do roofing and tinning."

"Bridge o' the Week" is the latest fad of the fans. This is a series of problem hands, one for each day of the week. Some of them are interesting and afford opportunity for skill in bidding and play to obtain the best results. It is good home practice.

Here is one of the current hands:

	S-A-J-3 H-8-6 D-K-Q-J-9-5-4 C-7-5
	NORTH.
S-Q-5-4-2 H-J-2 D-A-6-3 C-9-8-6-2	W E E A S S T T	S-K-9-8 H-K-Q-10-5-3 D-8-7 C-Q-J-10
	SOUTH.
	S-10-7-6 H-A-9-7-4 D-10-2 C-A-K-4-3

North is the dealer and neither side is vulnerable. Bid and play the hand so that south will make three no trump. Fortunately for south, the ace of diamonds is in west's hand, and after the second lead of hearts is taken by south with the ace, west can not throw the lead into east's hand, and south runs eight more tricks, even if west holds up the ace of diamonds until the third round.

Two Diamonds Tillie says she has played with some partners who acted as if they were members of a rival firm.

Brilliant Defense Tactics Generally Overlooked in Post-Mortems.

By Ely Culbertson.

IT is unfortunate but true, as Mr. Carl S. Uhrig, of Pittsfield, Mass., points out, that intelligent defensive play, based on logic or precise inferences, frequently goes unsung while the more spectacular play of the Dummy wrings noisy plaudits from the kibitzer-critics. A grand coup or pretty double squeeze stirs up enough comment in locker rooms to last for weeks but a brilliant maneuver by the defense is invariably overlooked in the post-mortems of the "board of strategy."

Knowing when to refuse to allow partner's high card to hold the trick is a distinguishing mark of a capable defense player. In many instances you must win the trick to prevent partner from making a lead which would be detrimental to the partnership. The following are two examples:

West, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ 9 8 7 2 ♡ K Q J 10 ◇ 5 4 2 ♣ K 3
♠ A K 10 6 5 ♡ 4 3 ◇ J 9 8 ♣ A Q J	N W E S	♠ Q J 4 3 ♡ 8 7 ◇ A Q 10 7 3 ♣ 5 4
	♠ — ♡ A 9 6 5 2 ◇ K 6 ♣ 10 9 8 7 6 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding requires no comment. Of course, North and South can make five hearts as the cards lie, but there is no way to arrive at it. However, it is a problem of defense that we are concerned with here.

North opens the King of hearts, on which South plays the encouraging nine. The Queen of hearts follows and South must arise to the occasion by overtaking with the Ace. Why? Because if North is permitted to hold the trick any lead he may make to trick three will present the Declarer with game. With South holding the trick, however, a club lead to trick three forestalls the game, because North's club King is established before South's diamond King is knocked out. In a nine-table duplicate game only one South had sufficient foresight to make the play described, taking a well-earned top.

Trumping partner's Ace used to be regarded as an earmark of brainless bridge or just plain inattention. Today only smart players trump their partner's Ace. The following hand was played in a team-of-four match and was a vital factor in the final outcome.

West, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A 5 4 ♡ — ◇ J 10 ♣ A Q J 10 9 8 3 2
♠ K 3 2 ♡ A K Q J 10 2 ◇ — ♣ 7 6 5 4	N W E S	♠ 8 7 6 ♡ 9 8 4 3 ◇ A K Q 9 8 ♣ K
	♠ Q J 10 9 ♡ 7 6 5 ◇ 7 6 5 4 3 2 ♣ —

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♡	4♣	4◇	Pass
4♡	5♣	5♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

North opened the Ace of clubs, and—horrors—South trumped his partner's Ace! What did he do it for? So he could lead Queen of spades! The lay mind simply refuses to function on this one, but your analyst rushes right forward with explanations.

If North had the Ace-King of spades, in addition to his club suit, he would (1) have doubled West's opening bid instead of bidding clubs, and (2) would have opened the spade King in preference to the club Ace. If North holds the King without the Ace, West must make six-odd, as it is too naive to expect that he would ruff the second club with the four or three-spot. But West must have either the King or Ace of spades to justify his Opening bid, and if it is the King, some damage can be done by leading through it up to Dummy's weakness. Logic directs that South take the lead at Trick 1 and embarrass West. As the cards lie, the Declarer is set two tricks for a clean North-South top-score.

Teachers College Offers Specialized Courses

courses will become far more intensive. They must spend several weeks in actual teaching work. Mary spending her time in selected classes at nearby elementary schools, and Jack obtaining his training at a junior high school.

A section of the Raymond and Hubbard elementary schools are now used as demonstration and practice schools for the teacher students.

Visiting these schools in the company of Dr. Edgar C. Higbie, president of Teachers College, the writer saw young women students from the college assisting in the teaching of youngsters in the lower grades. While one actually directed a class, others looked on.

Here, Dr. Higbie explained, was one of the most important developments in the training of a teacher—actual experience.

One of the great needs for Teachers College, Dr. Higbie said, is the establishment of these training schools adjacent to the college building. He visions a teachers college in Washington with more space and adequate facilities.

"Wilson Teachers College is now an institution of nearly 600 students and needs a plant and grounds to care for a respectably sized group of college men and women," he told the Board of Education in a recent report.

The present building was erected in 1913. Two years ago, it was condemned because of cracks in the walls. For nearly a year the teachers college functioned in the Abbott Vocational School. During that time the building was repaired and rooms enlarged.

Institution Founded in 1873.

Although a college only since 1929, it was founded as a normal school in 1873, and named after James Ormond Wilson, at that time superintendent of District public schools. Its original home was the Franklin School, at Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

Until this time only a three-year course was obtainable. The four-year course now leads to a bachelor of science degree, and the graduates are eligible for positions in the kindergarten-primary, intermediate or junior high grades of the public schools system. An M. A. is required for teaching in senior high schools.

Although one four-year class has been graduated from the college, relatively few students have found jobs as teachers, due to the economy program. This, however, has not kept a great many from enrolling. Of the 500 now enrolled, 113 are young men.

Nearly 400 Washington school teachers, with jobs, but without the four-year qualification are taking courses after school hours. They have been allowed to remain in the school service because of their past experience, and will probably be given preference over younger graduates of the college when new openings occur. Realizing this situation, many graduates and students of the college are planning to seek jobs elsewhere.

But Jack and Mary aren't worrying about that—yet!

Register of Treasury Is Master of Magic out of a sultan." Not even a magician can do that and get away with it.

Fox was one of the first men in the magic world to produce "Asrah—the trick of raising a woman, covered with a sheet, in midair and then making her vanish right before your very eyes."

Fox Began Career as Chef.

Now that he has come to be an official in Washington life, Mr. Durbin recalls that Fox began his career as chef in a hotel here.

Says Durbin: "Fox's advent into the world of magic proves the truth of the old saying, 'Man proposes and God disposes.' Many years ago, here in Washington, Fox was chef in a hotel at the corner of Thirteenth and E streets, not far from the National Theater. The place was called Johnson's—and many old-timers will recall it. Like all hotels of that period, Johnson's place had a fine bar attached to it. In the evenings when his work was over, Fox would be around the barroom. He had learned many wonderful tricks with cards—and used to amuse the fellows there for hours at a time. Kernan's Theater—the old burlesque house—was just a few squares away. Most of the talent playing on those boards used to stop at Johnson's place. Once a show with a magician featured found itself without its stellar attraction. The magician had gone off on a spree. The manager of the show, having seen Fox perform in the barroom the night before, went in quest of the chef at the Johnson House. That was the end of the chef. He exchanged his white cap and apron for a full-dress suit and became one of the best comedy magicians America ever produced."

Fox himself didn't claim to be a great magician. He was more of a funster. When some one would say, "Let me show you a new trick," the old magician always smiled: "No," he'd reply, "tell me a new joke."

When Fox came to the end of his career—some 20 years ago—most all his tricks were known by Durbin.

Not only that, but Durbin knows the tricks of most master magicians. It has been his hobby since childhood. He first started making the hands deceive the eyes when he was a boy, 12 years old. He now is 67.

Nowadays, with his wealth of magic, Durbin can put on a two-hour show at any time. He can do better than that. He can put on a two-hour show every night in the week and never repeat a trick.

The dean of modern magicians is Frederick Eugene Powell, whose sister lives in Washington. From Powell, Durbin learned many of his outstanding mysteries. He hopes some day to assemble the top-notchers and put them on as a show for the President of the United States—just to let the President know that he has a magician in his official family.

Bedlam in Congress Annoys Lady Astor

the wayside in the best Virginia manner. She admits the impossibility of losing that last Southern element.

"Once from Virginia, always from Virginia," she says. "And do you know, as long as I've lived away, I feel as though I had come from America only yesterday."

She announced she had just received a box of American candy, "big enough to last till Christmas," and that reminded her that one important thing she had to keep stocked was American dental cream.

Women in Politics.

Lady Astor jumps conversationally from dental cream to women's rights with easy speed. Her decisiveness about the value of women in politics shows often.

In the House, she told the members it was up to them to see that women marrying men of another nationality should have citizenship. To float politically between England and America, recognized by neither, brings no votes.

"Men of England and America have been fairer to their women in politics in the past than the men of any other country," she said. "English women in return have stood by you in your crises. Now we're wondering if you're going to stand by us."

Lady Astor appreciates the atmosphere of the Parliament buildings, and their tradition. She insists that one see the terrace, too, where the members have tea in the summer.

Though her stand on the women's nationality measure is doubtful of success, since it is not supported by the government, she presses it with enthusiasm. And off the floor she admits, with a firm nod of the head:

"I like to buck the government."

Candies for Christmas

based on the white of one or more eggs mixed with an equal quantity of cold water. Add powdered sugar to this, until a paste is made which can be worked into firm balls or other shapes with the hands. A teaspoon of vanilla is added before the mixture is solid, and the mixture must be stirred and then kneaded sufficiently to be perfectly smooth. Shape into balls or cones and set on a plate in ice box for 24 hours.

These creams may be colored or topped with half a walnut meat or coated with chocolate as desired. To coat with chocolate, melt several squares of sweetened chocolate in a pan set in hot water. Dip creams on end of fork in melted chocolate until thoroughly covered. If a thick coating is desired, expose cream after first dipping until dry, then dip again.

This fondant base is particularly delicious and interesting when a mixture of chopped nuts and dried fruits—currents, citron, maraschino cherries, &c.—is worked into the "dough" as it is being made.

Candied Fruit and Fruit Rinds.

Sections of orange and canned or fresh grapefruit are easily candied by dipping in a syrup made of equal parts of sugar and water. Boil syrup without stirring until it threads when dropped from tip of spoon. Dip fruit and lay on sieve over plate to drain. If syrup hardens in pan before all fruit is dipped, reheat without stirring. A teaspoon of water may be added. Sprinkle candied fruit with finely granulated sugar before coating dries.

Orange and lemon peel are candied with a similar syrup. Remove peel in quarters, cover with cold water, and bring to a boil. Let cook until peel is soft, then drain and remove white portion of rind. Cut in pieces and boil 5 minutes in a syrup of one cup of sugar to half a cup of water that has been brought to the same consistency of syrup above mentioned. Sprinkle with sugar as above.

Glaced Nuts and Cherries.

2 cups sugar
¼ cup water
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon butter

Boil sugar and water together, add cream of tartar dissolved in cold water and butter. Boil together four minutes. Pour over whole nuts (pecans, filberts, walnut halves, &c.,) on a buttered dish. This forms a bar which may be broken in pieces. Individual nuts or maraschino cherries may be glaced by dipping.

Stress has been laid on candied fruit and nuts, it will be observed. Such confections are somehow peculiarly appropriate to Christmas, and when packed with clusters of dried raisins and salted nuts are more decorative than other candies.

exquisitely delicate and yet imbued with the strength and character Whistler could inculcate in his works.

Close by is the portrait of a woman by another American, a real modern Maurice Sterne who while he calls his canvas "Afternoon," has as its chief figure a woman sitting in the afternoon light with all the conception of inspired individuality expected of this artist. In after years this figure and painting may be regarded as a real reflection of our times and era.

Passing from the Whistler and the Sterne portraits of women, the visitors stand perhaps with them in mind before the portrait of Miss Van Buren by Thomas W. Eakins. The technical perfection of the painting of the figure is arresting. The fact is that this artist introduces in this as in many others of his paintings a dimness of background in order to throw his figure into relief. Rather severe is the face and the pulled back, piled up hair and the dress in keeping with the general aspect, a real example of the days when women wore long sleeves and fastened their bodices close about their throats.

Honore Daumier, the French painter of the nineteenth century, painted of people as he saw them about him in the midst of excitement and the changing times. It is fortunate that the Phillips Gallery has such a collection of these valuable paintings to include in its paintings of people. The spectator is drawn into the strenuous times in which this artist lived as he views his notable painting, "The Uprising." This portrays a seething mob led by a young fanatic, his face twisted into an almost bestial expression, his eyes alight with visionary ideas as he fairly shouts from the middle of the canvas his injunctions to the pressing crowds of men, women and children who follow him. That this is painted with a rough daring stroke of the paint brushes there can be no doubt. The whole painting gives this impression similar to the most impressionistic output of the modernists. The fiendish expression of the face of "Three Lawyers" in another painting by Daumier almost amounts to a cartoon or modern caricature. In the background the client, a woman, weeps, as she stands beside the policeman. There is every perception of a mass gathering in "The Rocket" pointed with such true hand by this painter of people of another century.

As an offset to the many paintings in the exhibit, Mr. Phillips has placed at the end of them an ancient stone head of an Egyptian of the eighteenth dynasty.

Robert Spencer, the late great American artist, son of an itinerant preacher, has given to posterity something of the atmosphere of his father's profession in "The Evangelist." It will recall to many summer evenings when crowds gathered in the fields or small town streets to listen to an evangelist preach from a high platform erected for the occasion. On the stand and in the crowd about the stand, this artist has portrayed pictures typical of Americans under such circumstances.

"Paganini," considered the greatest work of F. V. Eugene Delacroix, the French painter of the nineteenth century, has its place in the presentation. This picture was admired by thousands three years ago when it was loaned to the Louvre for the centennial celebration of Delacroix's death.

A painting by Corot, in which the figure, other than the surroundings takes importance, is noted in the painting of "The Woman With the Water Jar," one of the outstanding and finest paintings in the collection.

Holiday Near! All Entries for Christmas Number of Junior Post Close Tomorrow

Jack Frost, Who Breezes Into Town, Puts Snap Into Activities of Everybody

Dear Post Boys and Girls: A week from tomorrow is Christmas!

And tomorrow is the last day on which you may turn in your entries for the Christmas number of The Junior Post. There are no exceptions to this rule. All entries that are not received by tomorrow will have no chance of publication in the holiday number this little newspaper.

In two weeks more we will begin a New Year. Just think of what that means in point of real treasure. The purse that will be handed to you on January 1, 1934, will contain 365 golden days, 8,760 silver hours and 525,600 sparkling minutes.

What are you going to make of that present? After all, Time is the most precious gift that can be received by any of us. For with that gift anything is possible. Often I hear boys and girls and even adults say, "I haven't enough time in which to do that." What a foolish remark that is!

All the great things achieved in the world were done because men and women found they had enough time in the 24 hours of each day in which to accomplish what was so near and so dear to their hearts.

Of course, that meant they had to use their time wisely. To waste time is one of the real sins. To throw time around carelessly and not put it to good use is very unwise, indeed.

The boys and girls who get Father Time's golden purses this year must not forget that at least eight hours a day—or rather night—must be used for sleep. For it is through sleep that young people build sturdy constitutions and a foundation on which they can base success in life. Some of the daytime should be spent by young folk in play. For "all work and no play" truly makes Jack and Jill a dull boy or girl.

Jack Frost arrived in town last week.

Were you glad to see him? The Junior Post editor was, for he put a snap into every activity—the clear, cold air was exhilarating. Then, too, Jack Frost's arrival brought Christmas just that much nearer.

During your Christmas holidays do not fail to send in contributions for The Junior Post. We need stories, poems and drawings for each issue. Perhaps you do not realize that often more than 50 boys and girls contribute to a single issue of The Junior Post. So it takes a great many entries from which to select these 50 and more items for publication. It gives all our contributors greater opportunities because we print so many different stories, poems and drawings in each issue.

That is one of the reasons why The Junior Post, so far as is possible, always saves its space for the boys and girls instead of printing the many attractive features written by adults which are offered from time to time. We are glad of their interest and we hope they will continue to read The Junior Post. But after all, it is for the boys and girls primarily, and The Junior Post editors, one and all, do not forget this. EDITOR JUNIOR POST.

Lullaby.

Softly, Mary, falls the night,
As thou art lovely, sleep thee light;
Thou shalt be wafted, wafted deep
To sleep, to the bosom of sleep.

Softly, Mary, breathes the breeze,
Slumbering through the drowsy trees,
Wafting thee gently, far and deep
To sleep, to the bosom of sleep.

Softly, softly (sings the wave),
Far in some distant gloomy nave,
Dreams shall be wafted, wafted deep
To sleep, to the bosom of sleep.

Softly, Mary, falls the night,

Thou shalt be wafted, wafted deep

December.

When has gone the brown November,
Then shall come the gray December,
And o'er the woods and fields and all,
Soon a silent mantle shall fall
Of virgin snow, white and deep,
Beneath which the earth shall sleep.

And soon the Christmas cheer
Shall usher out the passing year.
As we wait for New Year's Eve,
The going year takes its leave,
And by the fire's glowing ember,
From us departs the gray December.

Christmas Secrets.

The air is full of mystery,
And secrets are a-wing;
And if you happen on one
Don't you tell a single thing!
And perhaps we've something hidden
For each loved one dear,
For Christmas Day is coming
And will soon be here.

Then Santa Claus will fly around,
With heavy-laden sleigh,
And down the chimney hasten
In his usual happy way.
Oh, he brings such loads of presents
To the children dear,
And Christmas Day is coming
And will soon be here.

My Pet Dog Nellie.

Nellie is a pretty dog,
The prettiest ever seen,
And when she sees me
She is happy as can be.

Nellie has big, brown eyes
That wish you a very good greeting;
She has yellow fur, which is so nice,
And when the sun shines down on it
'Tis a pretty sight.

That tail of hers says everything
That Nellie wants to say,
But bark, she may—
It does not say
The things her tail would say.

MARGUERITE DAVENPORT.

Departure.

"Summer, summer is going away,"
Scarlet-leafed trees announce today;
Feather folk fly toward Southern breezes,
Forsaking this climate before winter seizes
His hold, chattering squirrels scamper about
To harvest in nuts; October appears his witches out;
Grains in the fields of a golden brown
Stand swaying with their heads bent down.
Gay leaves, ripe grain, a busy squirrel,
Departing birds,
All these spell
Familiar words:
Farewell, summer, farewell!

MILDRED L. ELLIOTT (age 17).
622 West Hancock street, Lakeland, Fla.

Snuggled in the heart of busy downtown section, and dwarfed by the office buildings surrounding it, there stands the little St. John's Church, at the corner of Sixteenth and H streets.

It is quaint in appearance and typical of the buildings constructed 120-odd years ago, being built in the year 1815.

Although additions have been added during the years of its existence, they have been made to harmonize with the original buildings.

The church was designed by Benjamin H. Latrobe, who also played a big part in the planning of the United States Capitol. The cornerstone was laid September 14, 1815, and the building was completed the following year. Its original form was a simple Greek cross. A western transept was later added, another addition made in 1842 and in 1880 still another.

Many stained glass windows also were installed.

Located just one block from the White House, naturally many early Presidents attended; also Cabinet heads, high officials, senators and other famous personages. Among Presidents to attend St. John's Church were Madison, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler and Fillmore.

St. John's Church stands today as one of the leading churches of the Capital, and is said to be the second church of the Episcopal denomination to be erected in the City of Washington.

Santa Checks His Records.

Santa Claus brushed the clinging icicles from his sled and whistled for his reindeer.

"Big trip this year," he murmured to himself as he had before each of the few billion previous excursions. Halfway to the moon he went, while the earth turned beneath him until he was right above America.

"I must drop in on The Junior Post editor," he mused, and soon was before that mysterious person. "How have The Junior Post boys and girls been this year?" he inquired, glancing meaningly at the enormous bag of toys.

"I'll look," said the editor, and pulled (you wouldn't have thought it) three huge volumes from the drawer.

"Let me see now," the editor went on, "this child is named —— (we wouldn't embarrass any of our readers) and has been very good all the year round. But this one——"

Soon Santa had checked the editor's books with his own, and heaving the great bag to his shoulders he sprang up the chimney. (Which should remind you that Christmas Eve is one time when the home fires should not be kept burning.)

The Robin.

(Awarded $1.)

Over the hill and across the creek,
Merrily the Robin sings so sweet.
On the boughs he does rest
Plucking his pretty little red breast.

All the day long he hops about
To get the crumbs that the people throw out.
He takes them to the tree above,
To feed them to the one he loves.

The Pets' Corner.

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree.
(Mascot of The Junior Post.)

"Bow, wow, wow. I am doing my Christmas shopping very early this year and have many of my packages all wrapped up to be mailed. It is lots of fun to send Christmas presents. I have written a good many letters, too, on my typewriter because you know people do like to get letters from editors. Bow, wow, wow.

I am sending out Christmas cards this year with the help of The Junior Post artists, and I hope every one will like the choice I have made for my favorite cards. Bow, wow, wow.

I am being kept busy just now going to see who is at the door, for cards have begun to arrive at my house, lots of them for me. It is wonderful how many people know I am an editor. I do not believe I will have to carry my typewriter any more just to prove I am an editor.

Hurrah, hurrah. Mr. and Mrs. Christmas Bird say that they are going to give a party in our back yard. They are quite lively, and I think they are quite brave to brave the weather of Washington when so many of their family have gone South for their health.

Johnny Reindeer, who is such a fine messenger from Santa Claus Land, says that he will be able to stay down here most of Christmas week to help distribute toys at The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund headquarters.

The editor of the Pets' Corner is very much pleased with the spirit in which the Pets have matched me, "Ding-How of Hydegree," editor of the Pets' Corner, in contributions to The Post Toy and Doll Fund. I guess the Pets' Corner is as important as any other part of The Sunday Post. Bow wow wow.

Johnny Bulldog says they are going to have ice cream at his house on Christmas Day. Who cares? We are going to have ice cream, raisins, oranges, candy and cake. Meggie White House Scottie says they have ice cream almost every day at the White House. She says the bones are very good. We have pretty good bones at our house, too. Bow wow wow.

Mike Great Dane says that, speaking of bones, he had a very large ham bone on Tuesday and he has it nicely put away to eat on between meals. Mike never reads the papers, so how would he know that doctors think eating between meals is very bad for the health?

Of course, an editor has to be polite and accept anything offered him politely. So if a boy or girl gives one a bite of candy between meals, believe it or not, I am too much of an editor not to accept it. Bow wow wow.

Mr. Tweet Canary is very scornful of bones and meat and candy. He has not very good taste, in spite of the tastefulness of his song. He pecks at tiny seeds all day and a hard old cuttlefish in his golden bungalow and has never been known to go out to a café to eat. Bow wow wow. He can sing, Mr. Tweet can, and he says he is making up a new Christmas carol for Christmas Eve. Bow wow wow.

Dear Ding-How: Here I am again. Thanks for publishing my letter in the Pets' Corner. I got in a peck of trouble the other day. I saw a sewing basket on a table, and in it was a lovely red ball of yarn. I got it down, and when I began to play with it it got wound around me and what a mess I was! Mistress had to take an hour of her time to get me loose. Tsk, tsk, tsk! Also I knocked over a flower pot, but didn't break the flower. That was a job getting the dirt up. Well, I guess I'll close. Pardon me if the words are spelled wrong. Tsk, tsk, tsk! I'm spilling all of mistress' black ink. Yours, meow.

Dear Ding-How: I am a little canary. My name is Pete. My mistress says I'm real cute. I sing all day long. Ding-How, I often hear you talk of Mr. Tweet in your letter. Do you think I could be kin to him? Boy! Do I like to take a bath? I take one twice every week in winter and every day in summer, and when I do I sure splash water! I like to eat tiny bits of apple my mistress gives me. Also she gives me bacon now and then. I like it. Mistress says it's good for me, too. Dear me, but my nails are long. I'll have to bite them off. Well I guess I'll have to stop now, for I must practice up on a song I heard over the radio. I must take a bath, too. Tweet, tweet. So long. PETE.

P. S.—My mistress is Alda Aumack, 528 St. Paul street northwest, Burnleys, Va.

Dear Ding-How: I am a Persian cat. I hope you like cats, but I guess you don't. My name is Kittikin. I ask you, Ding-How, isn't that a horrid name? I want to be an editor, but the glasses fall off onto the floor. My mistress keeps the typewriter away from me. It seems terrible, but I can't even hold a pen! Don't ever let anyone know it because it's terrible. Woe be unto me, that's what I get for being a cat. Your rather funny friend,

KITTIKIN.

The Word "Christmas"

(Awarded $1.)

Artists, writers and poets of The Junior Post, may I ask you a very simple question? All right, thanks. "What does the word Christmas mean to you?" Does it mean just the receiving of presents when it should mean the giving to the poor? Maybe you have already given, but keep it up till it hurts and then more. The more it hurts the better for you.

There are many organizations formed in order to help the poor little children whose parents may not be able to assist Santa Claus. There is The Post Toy and Doll fund. Haven't you any toys which you have grown tired of or you are now too old to play with? If so, contribute. Maybe we may know some poor people. Well, then, send their names in.

We may be very poor soon and how would we feel if Santa forgot our little sisters or brothers on Christmas Eve? So while we are in the condition to give now, let us do so.

There is the Community Chest, to which we give to clothe the poor and to feed and shelter the needy and sick. I could go on and on naming various organizations which have and are making Christmas a merry one for the poor.

In our own schools there are baskets which we are asked to fill. Let's all help.

If we keep this in our minds, "give until it hurts," I'm sure this will be the happiest Christmas Washington has ever known.

A Legend.

The Old Mill Inn, located between Morristown and Bernardsville, N. J., is a rebirth of an old barn which stood close by the Old Mill.

In re-creating the old barn not a beam was touched by saw or ax. No architect was needed for plan or design. The barn suggested its own plan and no change was made in the roof line or structure. In spite of time the frame was in perfect condition as one could see by looking at the exposed cross-beams. The shutters and hinges on the doors are exactly as they used to be. The subdivisions of the barn are the same; the dining room was once the carriage and machinery room; the grill room, a horse-stable; the living room, the passage from front to back; and the halls were partitions. The seven bed-rooms on the second floor were vents in the great haymow.

The Old Mill across the road is the mill from which the Inn got its name.

The first old mill was "built in 1768, rebuilt in 1842" as the tablet on the front wall states. It stood at the pond dam, had a seven-foot fall, had a wooden frame and was painted red. It is said that this mill ground grist to feed Washington's army which was camped at Jockey Hollow in the winter of 1779.

The miller, who was vigorous, young and ambitious, wanted to rebuild the mill where it would have a 20-foot fall of water, tripling its water power. This present stone mill which stands today was designed, planned and built by Mr. Ferdinand San Doren, who operated it until he died at the age of 96.

It was somewhat of a problem to build the mill after the plans had been made. The story goes that a tramp coming along one evening late in the fall, asked for food and lodging. Next morning he asked if he could have some work. The miller told him he could dig the excavations for the new mill and that he would in return give him "bed, board and tobacco" for his services. The old tramp accepted the proposition and worked all winter. By spring he had dug the ground ready for the building of the new mill.

When the big hole had been dug, stone had to be gotten with which to build the mill. The miller called all his neighbors to a "frolic" to haul stone from a neighbor's land, a mile away. Several thousand loads were necessary to build the mill. The story goes that it took one year to build the mill at a cost of $5,000 and it paid for itself the first year. The master mason was paid 75 cents a day, the other masons receiving 50 cents.

The Old Mill standing majestically with its beautiful arches and grand proportions is one of the finest pieces of masonry left standing in New Jersey. It has served through three generations and is a monument to a life of industry and service that was lived within the shadows of its walls.

The Story Book Lady.

"Snow, snow! How nice it is to have snow around Christmas time!" shouted Anne as she drew little Lilian on her sled through the streets on their way to meet the Story Book Lady and members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and members of the George Washington Junior Citizens for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land.

"I do, too," said Lucy, who came along just then, her young face aglow with health and brisk, fresh air. "It is a good time to play and to have a good time out of doors and to enjoy a good book by an open fireplace."

"Which, of course," said Anne, "brings us back to our favorite subject, 'books'—and Christmas shopping for books just now."

"Well," said Lucy, "I enjoy book Christmas shopping more than any other kind, because there are so many pretty books to be found this time of the year in all the shops. Gift books with a poem or a favorite story in them or new editions of our old favorites."

"I feel like that myself, dear," said the Story Book Lady, who caught up with the girls, followed by members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and the George Washington Junior Citizens. "I enjoy wrapping up books, too, for Christmas gifts, it is so easy to make neat looking packages."

"That is what I tell my grandsons," said Mr. Gnome, who keeps the gate to Fairy Tale Bridge that leads to Story Book Land. "They are busy every day wrapping up their Christmas presents, most of them books, of course. I encourage them to give books for Christmas because a book really makes a gift that gives pleasure throughout the year."

"We all think so, too," said the Story Book Lady, as she hurried through the gate, followed by the members of The Junior Post Writers' Club and the George Washington Junior Citizens. Mr. Gnome and his grandsons made deep bows and took off their green hats with the scarlet feathers.

"The queen is busy as a bee," said the Story Book Fairy, as she flew out of the Fairy Tale Forest in her golden airplane, followed by Merry and Jolly, the Story Book Fairy Children, also in their golden airplanes. "She is wrapping Christmas presents, too. Most of them, of course, are fairy tales because somehow people expect to get fairy tales from the queen of Fairy Story Land."

"I am sure they must be delighted to get them," remarked little Lilian, much impressed with the idea of receiving a book of fairy tales from the queen of Fairy Story Land.

"Of course, I think picture books are very nice," said Little Bobbie as they came to the first book street. "I wish we could go down this street."

"Why, of course we can," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses and leading the way. "Let me see. It is called the 'Second Picture Animals' from the photographic collections, 'Das Tier,' Berlin (the Macmillan Co., New York). These are from photographs published in the German magazine. They show the animals German children see in their homes much the same as our children see cats, dogs, bunnies, birds, sheep, cows and so forth. It is published especially for boys and girls from 4 to 12 years of age. But any animal lover, and I hope we all are, will enjoy looking at it."

"I think this is a very nice looking book street," said Alice as they came to another highway.

"Of course, we all think so, too," said the Story Book Lady, leading the way. "It is called 'Ola and Blakken,' by Ingri and Parin D'Aulaire, many of whose books we have found in Story Book Land (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.). It's all about Ola and Blakken, his beloved white horse, and the three little sisters and the trolls and troll clock. We will all like to read this. Perhaps Santa Claus will take a hint."

"Oh!" shouted William as they came to another book street, "I do like jungle tales and here are some."

"Yes, indeed," said the Story Book Lady, leading the way. "Let me see. It is called 'Java Jungle Tales,' by Hendrick DeLeeuw, illustrated by Kurt Weisse (Doubleday, Doran & Co.). It contains folklore tales as well as jungle stories. I am sure all will like to read this. Santa Clause, please take notice."

Our Snow Man.

It was a cold December day,
We children all went out to play.
We made a snow man fat and round,
And sat him up upon the ground.

He had a smile upon his mouth
That made us children laugh and shout,
He had a hat upon his head,
But we had mittens on instead.

He was a jolly, handsome man,
And in his hand he held a pan.
But warmer, warmer grew the day,
Until he melted all away.

Winter.

"Winter has come,"
Says the cold north wind,
As it whistles around the house
And causes the trees to bend.

Jack Frost has arrived
And is reigning in full sway.
He has killed the lovely flowers
And driven the birds away.

The trees stand bare and shivering,
The leaves have fallen down;
On the frozen earth below
They lay, a coat of brown.

The air is cold and icy,
See how the snowflakes dance about
As they spread a blanket of white o'er the world.
Winter is here, no doubt.

Life of a City.

Where tall structures rise to meet the sun
Teeming with industry by day;
Glittering, glamorous, at night with play.
A city fighting for recognition has won;
Watchword of the Poet's story;
Center of a Nation's glory.

People hustling for livelihood all day long.
Smoke and grime and work all 'round,
Factories and cars make up the sound.
Newsboys lustily calling the city's "song;"
Everywhere and forever tragedies enacted;
City striving always to be benefacted.

Noted and nicknamed among the world's treasures;
Seen long after we are gone;
Man's handiwork living on.
City towering up to meet the cloud's pleasures—
Watchword of the Poet's story;
Center of a Nation's glory.

Christmas Eve.

The church bell rings three times
tonight,
It's Christmas Eve, you see,
And three words it says so bright,
Faith, Hope and Charity.

Hark, another chime, louder than the rest,
Listen to what it says.
Why, it does the very best
On these gloomy days.

"Give," is this word that brings joy into the heart,
And everyone along the way
Is happy if you do your part
On Christmas Day.

For what is life but giving and taking little back?
If you are one that gives, then you will find the way,
And nothing will you lack
On this happy Christmas Day.

Christmas Cheer.

With loving hearts and happy faces
This good ol' Christmas comes.
Bringing old Santa's happy smile,
As over the snow he roams.

Singing, singing on Christmas morn,
We love to hear them sing
As they bring their gifts to the altar,
And sing carols to the King.

The Christ Child now is born,
We hear the angels say.
The shepherds bend their heads.
To give thanks on Christmas Day,

Thanks for the Savior we hear them say,
And thanks to the children, too,
Who sing their carols on Christmas morn
As the old folks used to do.

The Junior Post Airship

"Whew, it is pretty cold," said the editor, as he climbed in the airship beside the pilot for the weekly tour of the world for the benefit of the readers of The Junior Post.

"I guess Santa Claus will have to wear his very best suit of furs for his journey on Christmas Eve to fill all the stockings of the boys and girls in Washington."

"He has been here several times already to make an unofficial tour of inspection of The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund headquarters at Fifteenth street and New York avenue," said the editor. "He is much interested in the part the people of Washington are playing in the efforts of The Washington Post to aid him to prevent the tragedy of the empty stocking this Christmas."

"There they go!" said the pilot, as they circled over the White House, "the two grandchildren of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, all dressed up in their nice warm sweater suits of red, ready for a romp in the White House grounds. They are nice children, are Buzzy and Sistie, and I am sure they will have a good time about the big family Christmas tree in the corridor of the White House the first thing Christmas morning. Baby Sara, their cousin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, will be there, too, to assist them in playing with the toys. Then, of course, there will be the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, who always play with the children of the family Christmas morning and aid them in seeing just what Santa Claus has left in their stockings.

"I guess they will have a good time, all right," said the editor. "Somehow the White House seems to lend itself to the Christmas spirit."

On and on they flew toward South American waters until they sighted the famous "We," Col. and Mrs. Charles E. Lindbergh, winging their way in their airplane on another record-breaking flight.

"I guess they will have another air record for Christmas," said the pilot with a laugh as he turned his airship back toward the United States. They were just in time to see the beginning of the six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden.

On they flew to Northampton, Mass., where they saw Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, widow of the former President, opening the annual Christmas seal sale for the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis with the same cheery smile with which she used to open the annual drive when she was the First Lady of the Land and lived in the White House.

Then off they flew to Russia to see the crowds parading in honor of the recognition of the Soviet government by the United States of America. They heard the Soviet president, Michael Kalinin, talking over the long-distance telephone to this country for the first time.

Then they soared over Berlin, Germany, in time to see the Nazi demonstration enlisting Franz Shubert, the famous composer, in their campaign for the playing of German music in German homes.

Over the little town of Oberammergau they witnessed a rehearsal of the Passion Play for the 300th anniversary performance next year. The inhabitants of this picturesque village took the vow 300 years ago to present the Passion Play each year in gratitude for their delivery from a plague.

Over England they saw the people of the British nation preparing for Christmas just as the people of the United States are preparing and, in fact, the people of all the world.

As they flew over London they saw Queen Mary shopping with her two grandchildren, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. The queen and the two grandchildren all had little books with lists of friends and gifts. The selections were made by the little girls themselves as to color and such things, although their queen grandmother guided them about the stores.

Not only have the king and queen of England special Christmas cards, but the two little princesses also have their own cards, and they address and write little messages on them to members of their family and very close friends themselves.

End of the Day.

The sun had set on a lonely hill,
The birds had gone to their nests;
The shadows deepened to endless shade,
While the breeze lulled nature to rest.

Far on the distant horizon
The sunset was showing its pink—
But the nearby stream was gurgling still
When the stars began to blink.

The day of toil was over;
The whippoorwills began their song,
The earth and sky seemed to whisper,
"All's right with the world—nothing's wrong."

I stood on that hill at twilight
And gazed at the stream below,
The stars above me seemed naunting
As I dreamed of the long ago.

Our Washington.

We can hardly picture in our minds this beautiful city of Washington as a wilderness, but we must if we wish to go back to the beginning of the Nation's Capital.

Indians whose only means of support were fishing, hunting and trading lived here. The great chief, Powhatan, attended conferences on the soil of the present District.

Capt. John Smith was the first European, who ever explored around Little Falls, a few miles from Washington, also the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River. Because of arguments between the North and South it was agreed that a site be chosen on the Potomac River, at some place between the Eastern Branch and Conococheague.

Virginia and Maryland raised large sums of money for the erection of public buildings.

Three prominent men were chosen to survey and lay out the present District. Dr. Thornton won a prize of $500 for the best plan for the Capital.

When some Presidents came here for their administrations they described the present District as "The Wilderness City," "The Mud Hole" and many other uncomplimentary names. It is now known as the most beautiful city in the United States.

The only transportation was the stage coach. It then took nine hours to ride to Georgetown from Baltimore, provided all was well. Think of the comparison with today.

Now we must skip a period of time and come up to the nineteenth and twentieth centuries for I could write on and on describing the Capital of long ago.

During the nineteenth century it was very pitiful for the Negroes as they were bought and sold as goods are bought and sold on the market today.

On August 6, 1917, the World War was declared. This was a very sorrowful event in the history of Washington for soldiers went over there, never to return.

Although in 1600 the land upon which our homes are built was woodlands and marshes, people from all over the world come to see our beautiful city today.

Sally and Jimmy.

"Oh, father," exclaimed Sally as she looked sadly out the window, "I wish I could do something to help some one this Christmas."

Sally's father was a well-known banker in the city and had a lovely home.

"Well, Sally, you have done something, that is, I did it for you, but it is in your name. I contributed to the relief fund for you," her father said.

"I know you have and thank you so much, but I wanted to do something myself."

As she said this she happened to be looking at the paper boy on the street.

"I have it. Why didn't I think of it before? Don't worry about me, father. I'll be back about 9 o'clock."

She ran to her brother's room and dragged out a pair of old pants, a hat, a shirt and sweater and several other things. She dressed quickly and with her weekly allowance and some extra money of her own she left. With $5 in her pocket she walked up to the boy on the corner.

"Are you leaving soon," asked Sally as boyish as possible.

"Why, yes, I am," said the boy and gathered up the dollar and 10 cents he had earned.

"Well, I'll walk this way with you if you go this way," said Sally.

"Sure, down R street," he said, and they started off.

"Say, what is your name anyway? Mine is Ted."

"Oh well, 'er, mine is Jimmy," said Sally, giving the first name that popped into her head.

Soon they arrived at Ted's house.

"Won't you come in, my mother is sick, but we can always find room? Where do you live?"

"Oh, well, I don't have a home. You see, I just wander around," replied Sally.

"What! You don't have a home?"

"No, I don't," answered Sally.

"Come right in and we will let you stay here until you want to go."

After they were all introduced and sitting down Ted's mother said:

"Ted, we haven't enough to eat, so run to the store and get some cabbage and milk and brown bread. Here is some extra money I saved."

"O. K., mom; we'll be right back. Come on, Jimmy."

Sally said, when they arrived at the store, that she had about 25 cents, so they put it together and got as much as they could.

After dinner they went to bed because they didn't want to waste the candle light. Soon all was quiet and Sally slipped outside and ran to the store. She bought as much as possible with $5 and placed the huge parcel of food and things before Ted's door. When he awoke in the morning he was never in all his life so surprised. He then believed in Santa Claus. MARY MEACHAM.

Paris.

Paris, the fifth largest city in the world, spreads out on both sides of the River Seine. It is a large manufacturing city, and its most important industry is the making of women's clothing and hats. The French make so many beautiful laces, toys, leather goods, embroideries and jewelry that manufacturers from other countries copy the patterns and designs.

Paris has many beautiful parks, museums, buildings, colleges and cathedrals. Among them are the Louvre, the Arc de Triomphe, Cathedral of Notre Dame, Palace of Justice and many others. In the Louvre are many of the world's finest paintings and works of sculpture. Paris is also a great railroad center and a good river port.

Recognized everywhere as being made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand, Camels naturally suggest themselves as the gift for any smoker. Camels never get on the nerves or tire the taste. The smoker to whom you give Camels will appreciate the mildness and satisfying flavor of those costlier tobaccos. So to give pleasure, give Camels—now on display in gay Christmas packages.

PRINCE ALBERT

THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

Among men who smoke pipes or "roll their own," Prince Albert smoking tobacco is known as "the national joy smoke." A special process takes out every hint of harshness or "bite"—leaves P. A. cool, slow-burning and mellow. No wonder that more men smoke Prince Albert than any other brand. The one-pound glass humidors and one-pound tins are suitably packaged for the Christmas season.

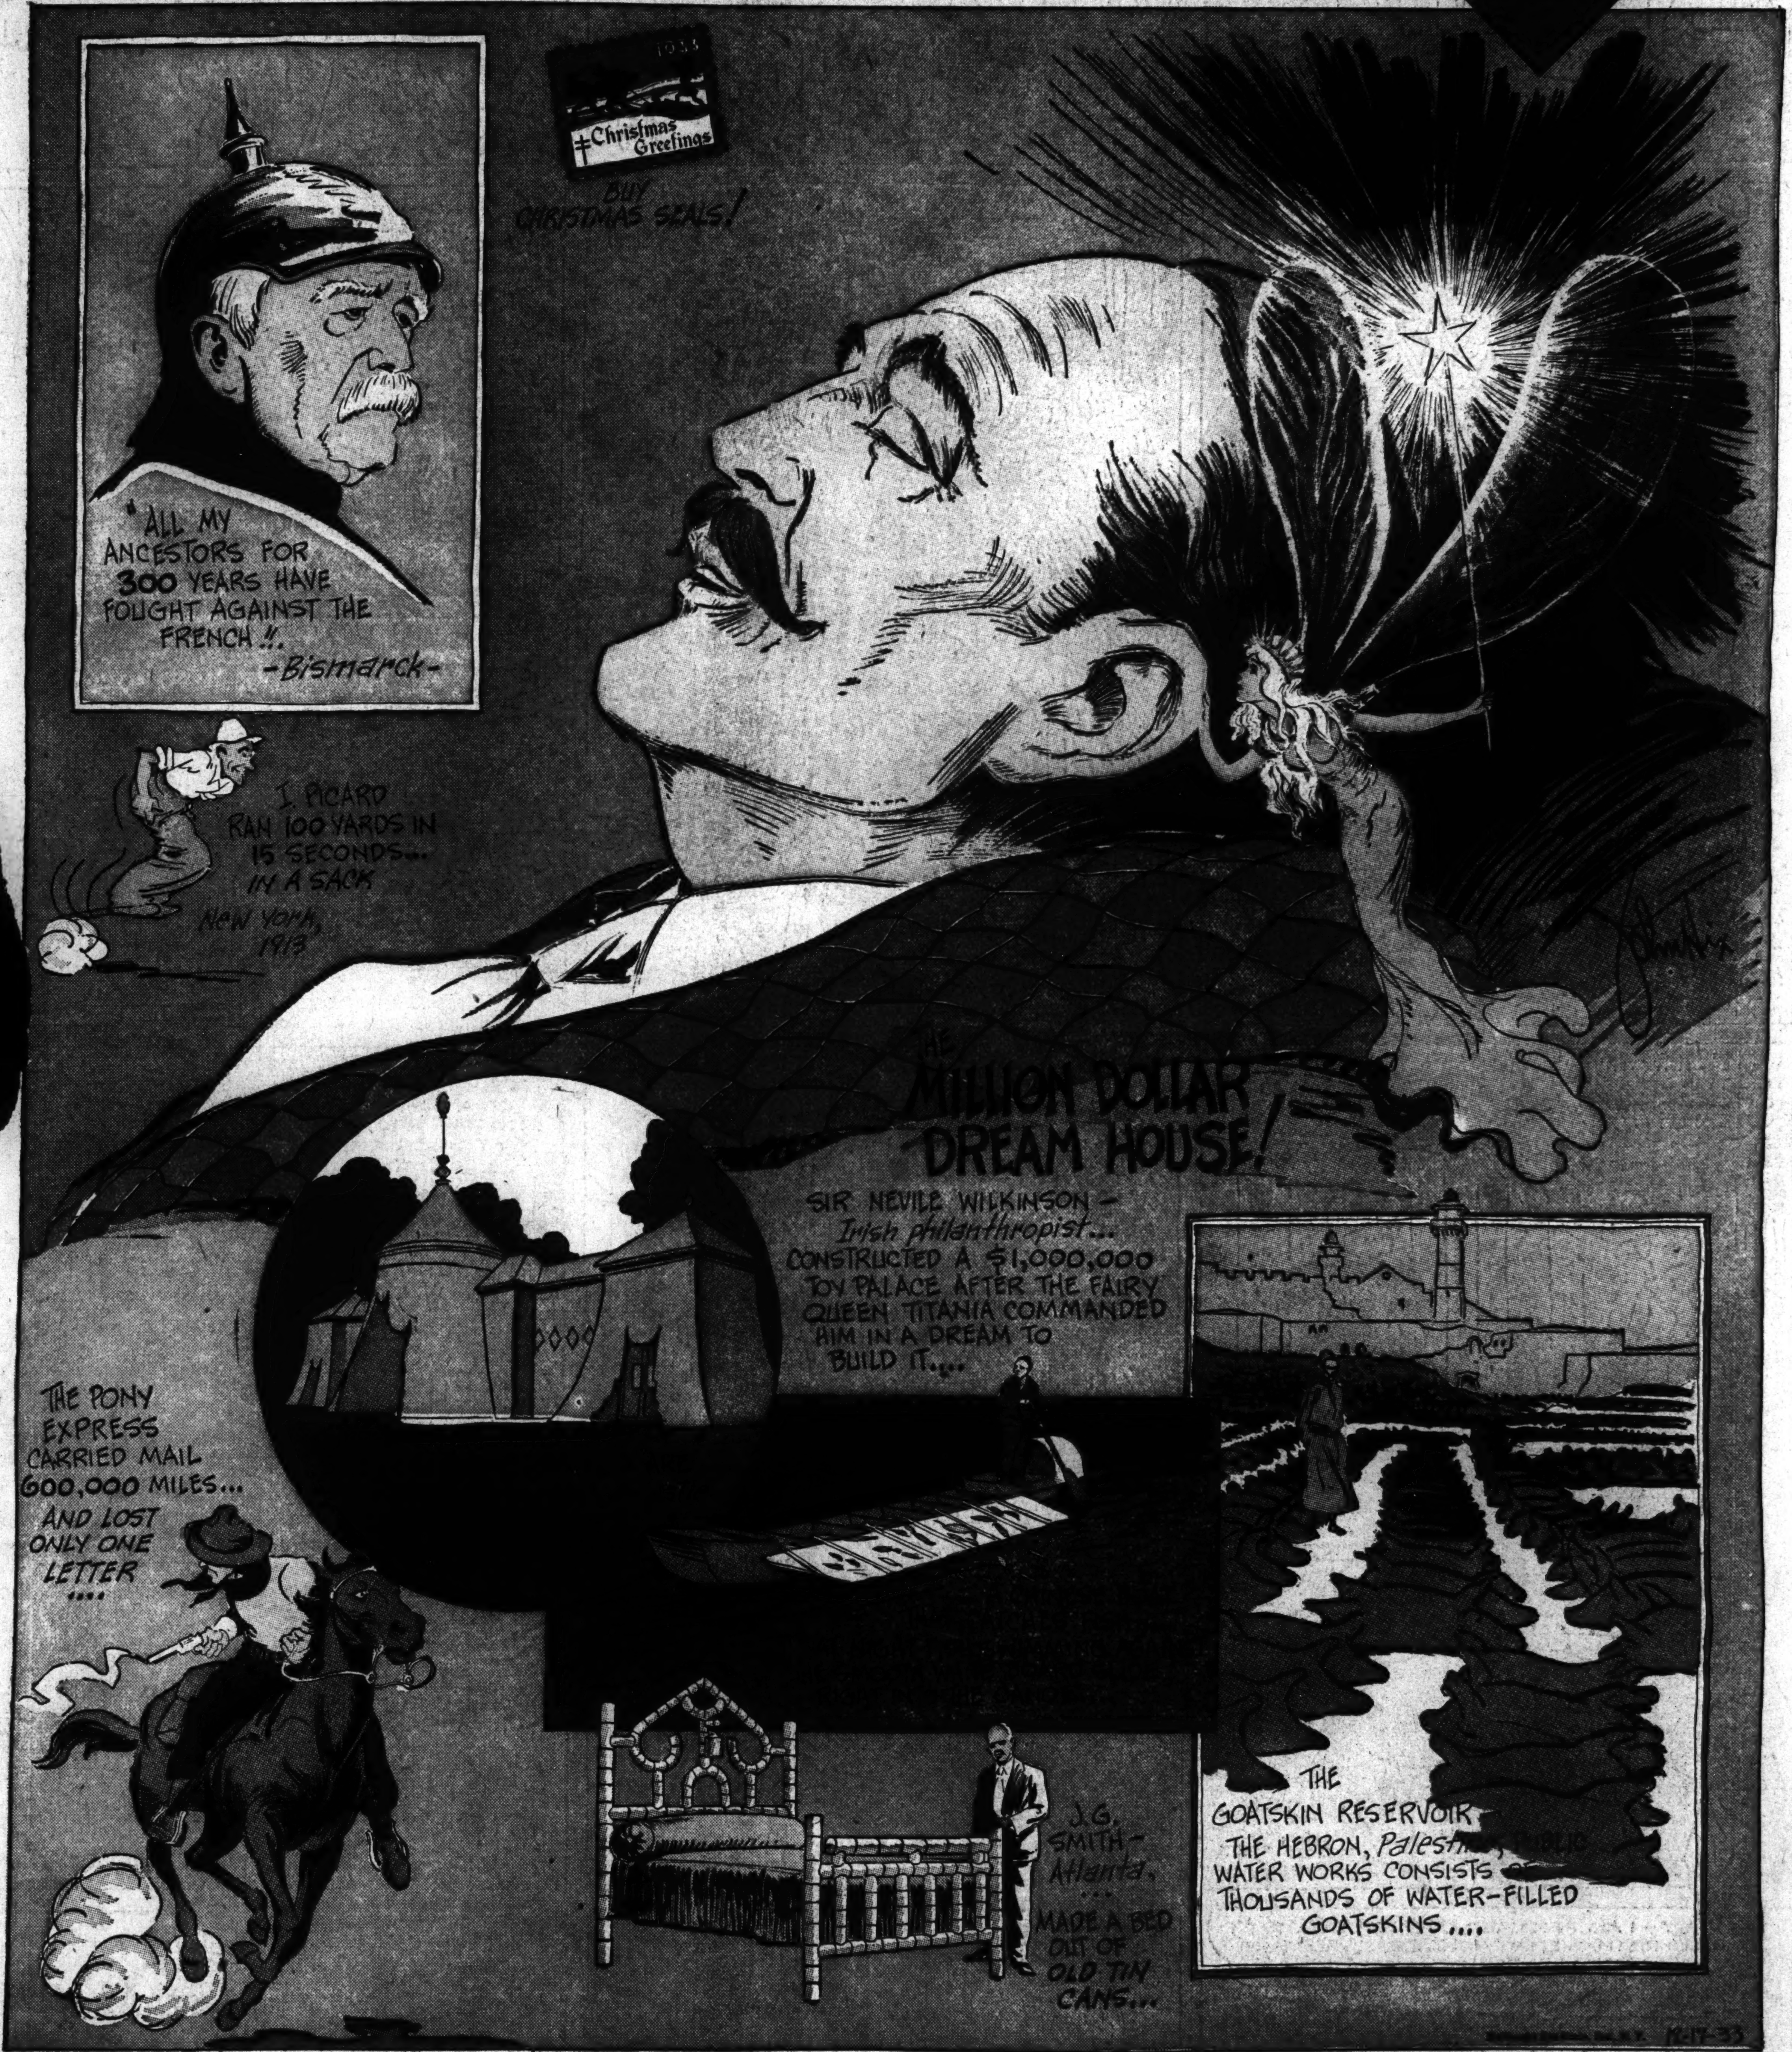
ALL IN THE FAMILY

Strange As It Seems—

©McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.



As befits a palace where fairy queens are to live, Titania's Palace, the $1,000,000 toy house constructed by Sir Nevile Wilkinson, was conceived in dreamland. The story of its beginning is as fantastic as the now nearly completed building and its fittings.

According to Sir Nevile, he was sleeping in a chair one evening before an open fire when he dreamed that Titania, fairy queen of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," flew into his room and, settling on his shoulder, commanded him to build for her a palace, a palace such as would be worthy of the queen of all the fairies. Sir Nevile demurred at first, telling Titania that he was not a craftsman, but she insisted—then Sir Nevile awoke. His wife said he had been snoring.

Half in earnest he pondered over his dream, even formulating in his mind plans for a palace such as Titania had ordered. Then a happier inspiration came—he would build the palace, exhibit it for pay, and turn the money over to charities which cared for crippled and neglected children. Aided by royal patronage, Titania's palace became the most gorgeous miniature dwelling that was ever conceived.

The palace is constructed on a scale of one inch to a foot, it covers an area of 50 square feet, and is 30 inches high. It is of Florentine architecture, contains a "Hall of Guilds," "Chapel," "Throne Room," "Fountain Court," "King's Study" as well as state apartments, and is finished with incredible accuracy down to the smallest detail.

The palace serves well its dual purpose, for it is a fitting abode of Titania and her court—and on exhibition it has brought funds with which to make unfortunate children happy. This latter purpose which it serves is, of course, what Titania had in mind all the time.
